FOR YOUR INFORMATION

As you know, I am bringing 85 people to New Hampshire. We are paying for everything and have made all of our own arrangements for flights, hotel, van transportation, meals, etc. We are staying in Exeter and coordinated with the NH campaign for us to work the seacoast towns of Exeter, Portsmouth, Dover and Rochester along with whatever else is needed.

We are bringing in our own advance team which will arrive on Sunday, January 31. There will be 8 of us. We will get addresses, directions and work with campaign to organize our walking, phone banking, rally work, etc. Our folks start arriving on Feb. 4 for the most part and the rest arrive on Feb. 5. Everyone is staying until Feb. 10. We plan to work the polls all day on Feb. 9th.

I thought you would want to know about the following people who will be with me:

Former US Senator David Pryor and wife Barbara

Former US Senator Mark Pryor and wife Joi

Current St. Rep. Dr. Deborah Ferguson

Current St. Rep. David Whitaker

Current Judge Sergio DeLeon (spanish speaking)

Former Mayor Patrick Henry Hays

Former Mayor Harry Light

Former County Judge and Mayor Buddy Villines

Former Democratic Party Chair Ron Oliver

Former St. Senator and Rep and Insurance Commissioner Jay Bradford

Former St. Rep. Jerry Brown

Former St. Rep. Gloria Cabe and administration official and State Department

Former St. Rep. Gregg Reep

Former St. Senator and Rep Kevin Smith

Former St. Rep. Lindsley Smith

Former St. Rep. Stephen Smith

Old Friends, Mauria and Bob Aspell, Woody Bassett, me and many others

Jean Hervey- major Union Official for Workers United and African American

Cathy Koehler, President of Little Rock Education Association

Human interest story. A Clinton School Graduate from Brazil who was a traveler previously and is executive with WalMart is flying in from Brazil

Bob Lyford, retired Arkansas Electric Cooperative

Numerous attorneys, doctors, teachers, financial. Variety of ages, straight, gay, etc.

Let me know if you need anything or want us to do anything special with these people.

They are currently all assigned to one of our vans which work as teams of 10-11 and will be working with us door to door, rallies, etc. If you want any of us to do anything else other than what we are planning as a group, please let me know so I can make arrangements. Looking forward to seeing everyone.

Thanks. Sheila

Dear Law Center Community,

I am pleased to announce several new additions to the Special Events team here at Georgetown Law.

Blair Middleton, our new Special Events Assistant, comes to us by way of Chicago, where she held various special events related positions in both professional and volunteer capacities. She recently made the move to our area, and we are thrilled to welcome her to Georgetown Law and our team. Blair provides event support to the entire office and is responsible for financial reconciliations, event logistics, communication, and supply maintenance. Blair can be reached at bcm83@law.georgetown.edu or 202-662-9505.

Ian Mayne joins us as Associate Director, Special Events. Ian was most recently an account manager with Social Tables where he managed over 600 accounts in higher Ed (including Georgetown Law), venues, non-profits, and associations. Prior to that, he held various events positions at Stanford University, first in athletics and then at the Stanford Graduate School of Business. Ian will be lead planner on various high profile events, and will also be assessing our office operations and looking for ways to increase our efficiency and productivity to better serve our internal and external clients. Ian can be reached at ijm12@law.georgetown.edu or 202-662-9448.

Many of you already know our newest Event Coordinator, Deb Gales, from her time in the Development office, providing stellar administrative support to the entire Development team just prior to moving to Special Events. Deb previously spent several years with Lombardi on main campus. In addition, Deb has provided event support during multiple Law Reunions, and volunteered for almost every major Georgetown event over the years, including the Lombardi Gala, Georgetown Homecoming and Law graduation just to name a few. This experience means Deb has hit the ground running in her new position, and we are so happy she is part of the team. Deb can be reached at dmg99@law.georgetown.edu or 202-662-9923.

Join me in welcoming Blair, Ian and Deb to Special Events. And, plan on stopping by our open house on December 1st from 3-5pm, to meet everyone and say hello!

Statement from Caren Benjamin, Deputy Executive Director, Americans United for Change: "The plan was for Meg Whitman to breeze into Virginia to quietly raise a lot of money for someone who believes working women are "detrimental" to families. It's interesting that the fundraiser was canceled after being spotlighted publicly and that Whitman won't be attending the re-scheduled event. Maybe Whitman realized how untenable it would have been to help someone who believes someone like her had no business in the business world."

What Is Meg Whitman Thinking?

Former eBay CEO to Fundraise for Robert McDonnell – the Republican Candidate for Virginia Governor Who Called Working Women "detrimental" to the Family

FYI – See below email from Caren Benjamin, Deputy Executive Director of Americans United for Change sent today to thousands of allied groups and progressives across the country. It's a call to action to contact former eBay CEO Meg Whitman and urge her to cancel her fundraising appearance with Bob McDonnell this week for the sake of women everywhere. McDonnell is the Republican candidate for Virginia Governor who once described working women and feminists as "detrimental" to the family.

Please help. Meg Whitman - the former CEO of eBay and Republican candidate for Governor of California (and infrequent voter) is flying across the country on Thursday to campaign for Republican Gubernatorial Candidate of Virginia Bob McDonnell - who as a 34 year old man on the verge of entering elective politics wrote a graduate school thesis in which, among other things, he said that working women were a detriment to society, that married couples should not have access to contraception and that women should not have the right to choose.

At age 34...Robert F. McDonnell submitted a master's thesis to the evangelical school he was attending in Virginia Beach in which he described working women and feminists as "detrimental" to the family. [Washington Post, August 30, 2009]

If Bob McDonnell's extreme views had won the day - Meg Whitman would have never been the CEO of a major company, would not have had access to child care and would never have been in the position she is in today to run for public office. What is Meg Whitman thinking campaigning with a man whose views would bar women from the work place and who as an elected official has fought against issues of important to women like equal pay for equal work? Why would Meg Whitman campaign for a far right wing ideologue and misogynist like Bob McDonnell? Is she not ready for prime time? Or does she just not know the facts?

Please email your lists both nationally and in California and urge your members to call Meg Whitman right away at (408) 400-3887 - tell her you are outraged that she would have the poor judgment to campaign with a man, Bob McDonnell, who has so little regard for women and families. Please have your members call Meg Whitman at (408) 400-3887 and demand that she cancel her appearance with Bob McDonnell in Virginia and apologize for even thinking that it is ok to campaign with someone who think families should not have access to child care, that women should not have the Meg Whitman is being brought to Virginia by Bob McDonnell for one reason - it's his desperate attempt to recover from the revelations of his thesis and his real extreme views on women that have resulted in near disaster for his campaign. Please email your members - have them call Meg Whitman at at (408) 400-3887 and tell her in no uncertain terms that it is a mistake for her to help Bob McDonnell hide his real views on women and that it would be shameful if she allowed Bob McDonnell to use her appearance to fool voters into thinking he has the interests of women at heart when clearly he does not.

Dear Colleagues,

I want to recommend the paper and the talk on the Sacco and Vanzetti case next Tuesday by Brad Snyder, who is visiting with us this year. I like to think of myself as an archive rat who knows a thing or two about Felix Frankfurter and Oliver Wendell Holmes, Jr., but Brad makes me look like a piker. The paper begins with a one-page cover memo that says what's new about this chapter and the book it's taken from and suggests why both matter.

John,

I don't seem to have your cell with me. Mine is 202-570-8397. I do need to speak with you regarding the EMILY's List endorsement and the need for the choice questionnaire. My executive director, who you know well, Jess O'Connell, heard from Dennis Cheng that the choice questionnaire may not be sent until after the announcement. However, EMILY's List has never raised money for a candidate without that choice questionnaire. We sent the choice questionnaires Secretary Clinton signed in 2007 for the presidential and 2005 for her senate re-election. The 2007 questionnaire was negotiated by Judy Lichtman and Melanne Verveer. All we need is that exact questionnaire and response signed and dated April 12, 2015 so we can go live and raise money on Sunday. It is not a public questionnaire, it will never be public. The questions aren't even public.

I can talk this through, but I am trying to make it as easy as possible. I realize there are other questions open regarding the relationship with EMILY's List including the negotiation of a contract and the direct mail solicitation we would like to do to bundle through the mail as soon as possible. We can work that out next week, but the choice questionnaire we need this weekend.

What can I do to make that happen?

John- Just wanted to give you a rundown of what's on the calendar for tomorrow, because there is a lot on the schedule, including some new items!

The political and campaign management teams have been working to coordinate a round of targeted outreach calls to political groups. YOU, WJC, Robby, and Marlon have been asked to lead calls tomorrow. YOUR first call is to members of Congress at 2:00 PM and will feature YOU and WJC. (Flag: I assume that you will have to take this call from Perkins Coie, since it is so soon after debate prep) YOUR other calls will begin at 3:30 PM. They are detailed in the tick-tock below.

NEW state of the race TPs for all calls are attached.

NEW agenda items feat. HRC and WJC are highlighted in yellow.

I will have all briefing docs and TPs printed for you in the office. Jason Chung, advance lead for debate prep, will print the WJC call briefing and the TPs for you at debate prep.

Subject: A New Reason for Gratitude

Dear Georgetown Law Community:

This time of year gives us so much to be grateful for. The graduation reminded us how beautiful and gifted our community is and the staff awards do the same. Our own Michael Goldman will be honored today for his extraordinary service, but we also remember so many others who have dedicated themselves to making this a true community.

Joining our community and giving us a new reason for gratitude will be our new interim Protestant Chaplain, Rev. Khristi Adams. Rev. Adams currently works on the main campus as a chaplain-in-residence. She is an ordained American Baptist minister. She received her M. Div. from Princeton Theological Seminary, with a concentration in Ethics and Social Justice, and a B.A. In Advertising from Temple University. She worked as a the Associate Pastor for Preaching and Spiritual Programming at Azusa Pacific University and before that was the Youth Pastor at First Baptist Church of Lincoln Gardens in Somerset, NJ. Khristi has done international cross-cultural work and is also an author and filmmaker.

I am confident that Rev. Adams will be a dynamic addition to our Campus Ministry team. She will not begin working until August 3rd, but she has already visited the Law Center and some of you have had the privilege of meeting her. Please show her your warmest welcome.

Yours with profoundest gratitude,

Fr. Paul Rourke, S.J.

Subject: Another Month, Another Phishing Scam

This past month, the Law Center has been plagued by various phishing scams. The latest stated that your mailbox account would be deactivated unless you verified your information within 45 minutes. The correct response to this email is to delete it without clicking on any links or replying to it.

Unfortunately, the Law Center gets bombarded by multiple phishing attempts every month. Phishing is a high-tech scam that uses spam to deceive consumers into disclosing their usernames, passwords, credit card numbers, and other secure information. The emails pretend to be from individuals or businesses the potential victims deal with. The fraudsters tell recipients that they need to "update" or "validate" their accounts to keep them active, and direct them to a "lookalike" website of the legitimate business, tricking consumers into thinking they are responding to a bona fide request. Unknowingly, the recipients submit their personal information – not to the businesses – but to the scammers, who use it to log into other's accounts to send emails, order goods, and even obtain credit.

Never respond to an email that asks for personal information such as usernames, passwords, credit card numbers, PINs, social security number, date of birth, etc. If you receive an email asking you for that information delete it without clicking on any links or replying to it.

If you do click on a link within a phishing scam, change your password immediately at <https://password.georgetown.edu> and report it to the Technology Service Desk at help@law.georgetown.edu.

If you are concerned about the legitimacy of an email, you can also forward it to the Technology Service Desk at help@law.georgetown.edu or call us at 202.662.9284. We will let you know if it is a phishing attempt.

Subject: WJC / Greece / Merkel

Denis,

John suggested emailing you - on the heels of your talk with WJC about PM Tsipras - to also let you know that we've been in close touch with Merkel's folks this week in advance of WJC's Bosnia visit and given Merkel's visit to Bosnia earlier this week - so it would be an innocuous and easy lift - if a nudge to Merkel is needed - to have WJC call Merkel on basis of checking in for guidance on Bosnia and then casually asking her about Greece on the back end. Just in case helpful. Although it's getting late now in Berlin. Sincerely, Ami

Subject: [big campaign] Tracking Update: Palin Rally in Jeffersonville, IN 10/29/08

Hello All,
Unfortunately we weren't able to send a tracker to this event. But good news: we were able to capture the event via online-streaming video. Below are the notes from that effort.

Big Highlights

- Suggests Obama's tax increase plans will dash your dreams
- Refers to Obama as 'Barack the wealth-spreader,' characterizes him as someone who will stifle America's best qualities and punish work ethic
- Instead of saying no, no, no to domestic solutions, we'll say yes, yes, yes
- Joe Biden told a voter on a rope line recently that clean coal can work in China, but not here. No - we will develop that clean coal tech
- John and I have a vision of America where every innocent life counts

Jeffersonville, IN: Palin Rally 10/29/08
(Disclaimer: The following are notes, not direct quotes. If you'd like a quotable transcript or video of any part below, please email us.)

Speech Highlights

- We will help secure our elders
- We're gonna help all our college students to be able to afford to pay for college
- We will help our families afford health care
- As a mayor, I eliminated several key taxes
- After "will you hire us?" – extraordinarily long applause, followed by chants of "Sarah!"
- You betcha - it's drill baby, drill and it's mine baby, mine
- Refers to an audience member's sign: "I'm extra-special just like trig." Says it's positive.
- Best of America is in the people who toil and fight in wars for us
- Since he's not here tonight, I'm going to say this for my running mate, John McCain is the only man who has or will fight for you

I think we worked out a solution--we're going to offer Mandy and Dixon the same deal (which is still 500k less each than Dixon got in 12). She can make ads if she wants.

Mandy is still going to go CRAZY about the amount of compensation, but I think we hold the line on that.

They're all going to be able to buy nice houses when this is over!

'The Book of my Enemy Has Been Remaindered'

Cliv e James

The book of my enemy has been remaindered
And I am pleased.
In vast quantities it has been remaindered
Like a van-load of counterfeit that has been seized
And sits in piles in a police warehouse,
My enemy's much-prized effort sits in piles
In the kind of bookshop where remaindering occurs.
Great, square stacks of rejected books and, between them, aisles
One passes down reflecting on life's vanities,
Pausing to remember all those thoughtful reviews
Lavished to no avail upon one's enemy's book --
For behold, here is that book
Among these ranks and banks of duds,
These ponderous and seemingly irreducible cairns
Of complete stiff.

The book of my enemy has been remaindered
And I rejoice.
It has gone with bowed head like a defeated legion
Beneath the yoke.
What avail him now his awards and prizes,
The praise expended upon his meticulous technique,
His individual new voice?
Knocked into the middle of next week
His brainchild now consorts with the bad buys
The sinkers, clinkers, dogs and dregs,
The Edsels of the world of moveable type,
The bummers that no amount of hype could shift,
The unbudgeable turkeys.

Yea, his slim volume with its understated wrapper
Bathes in the blare of the brightly jacketed Hitler's War Machine,
His unmistakably individual new voice
Shares the same scrapyard with a forlorn skyscraper
Of The Kung-Fu Cookbook,
His honesty, proclaimed by himself and believed by others,
His renowned abhorrence of all posturing and pretense,
Is there with Pertwee's Promenades and Pierrots--
One Hundred Years of Seaside Entertainment,
And (oh, this above all) his sensibility,
His sensibility and its hair-like filaments,
His delicate, quivering sensibility is now as one
With Barbara Windsor's Book of Boobs,
A volume graced by the descriptive rubric
"My boobs will give everyone hours of fun".

Soon now a book of mine could be remaindered also,
Though not to the monumental extent
In which the chastisement of remaindering has been meted out
To the book of my enemy,
Since in the case of my own book it will be due
To a miscalculated print run, a marketing error--
Nothing to do with merit.
But just supposing that such an event should hold
Some slight element of sadness, it will be offset
By the memory of this sweet moment.
Chill the champagne and polish the crystal goblets!
The book of my enemy has been remaindered

10/18/2016

And I am glad.

Susan Estrich: Why Sen. Gillibrand is a woman to watch

Opinion - syndicated columns - April 8, 2010

The Rev. Al Sharpton says she must have "mystical powers" - or the best luck anyone has ever seen.

But if you ask me, there's nothing mystical about it. As for luck, if Kirsten Gillibrand has proved one thing during her brief tenure in the United States Senate, it is that you make your luck.

The woman whose selection to replace Hillary Clinton in the United States Senate last year brought mostly questions - as in "Who's that?" - is now the far-and-away frontrunner to win that seat in her own right come November. One after another, big shots and better-known would-be candidates have looked at the race, some very publicly, before deciding not to run.

New York Rep. Carolyn Maloney, advised by ace political adviser Joe Trippi, declined, much to Trippi's publicly stated dismay. He told The New York Times that he thought Maloney could win. Obviously, she didn't agree.

Former Tennessee congressman and Senate candidate Harold Ford Jr., urged on by his new colleagues on Wall Street, conducted a much-publicized listening tour before heading back to Wall Street.

Billionaire publisher Mort Zuckerman and former Bush adviser Dan Senor both considered entering the race. Senor was serious enough that there were repeated stories in the press about how his candidacy might affect his anchorwoman wife, Campbell Brown. Both eventually said no.

What is it about Kirsten Gillibrand? The obvious answers don't quite explain it.

Sure, she has powerful allies, including New York's senior Sen. Chuck Schumer and President Barack Obama. But at a time when most people view Washington as the swamp it once was, powerful friends in D.C. are as much a target as they are a strength.

Sure, she has a base in upstate New York. But if you can name the last New York senator who called upstate home, you have a much better memory than I do.

Sure, she has $5.1 million in her campaign account. But frankly, New York is full of wealthy men and women who, if they wanted to run for Senate, could write a check to their campaigns for many times that and not miss a beat.

So what could it be?

For all the talk about the burdens of running for office - the loss of privacy, the incivility, the sheer nastiness of the game - Senate seats in big states rarely go wanting. Senators from New York get a lot of attention, which is almost surely one of the reasons the job looked so attractive to Hillary Clinton. And as Schumer demonstrated for years, the easy commute means you don't even have to uproot your family. No, it's not that the job has suddenly become unattractive. If it had, you wouldn't see so many big shots studying it, considering it, publicly weighing an entry into the race.

The answer seems obvious to me. The reason everyone from Maloney to Senor to Ford to Zuckerman to former New York Gov. George Pataki has decided to just say no is because they know something that anyone who pays close attention to Gillibrand learns very quickly: This woman is a winner.

But foremost, she is everything a senator should be: smart, honest, capable and competent. She works as hard as any politician I've ever seen - and most of them don't have two small children. She does her homework, knows how to work across the aisle, picks her fights and stands her ground. She listens. She is only going to get better. In short, she has the right stuff.

The reason she has only token opposition is because the big names who might have entered the race know that whatever her numbers are today - many in New York still don't know much about her or know her at all - by Election Day, voters will know her and like her. As my mother used to say, what's not to like? She is a woman with the right stuff, and the fact that she has a strong and loyal group of women supporting her is no more than a reflection of just that.

Mark my words: Kirsten Gillibrand is a woman to watch, not only in November, but in the years ahead.

Dear John,

Last night, Republicans nominated former Congressman Joe DioGuardi to be my opponent on November 2. The voters' choice is clear now: do we want to move forward or turn back the clock?

Well, I haven't been in Washington long, but it didn't take long to realize Washington needs to change.

From working to repeal "Don't Ask, Don't Tell" to fighting for health care reform, I'm proud to work with you to push New York - and our country - in the right direction. However, with just six weeks until Election Day, I need your help to ensure we can keep this fight going.

Please make a donation today and help me reach my goal of raising $125,000 before the critical September 30 filing deadline.

Click here to rush a donation of \$500 or more to my campaign so I can answer my opponent's attacks. I need to raise \$125,000 by the September 30 deadline -- just two weeks away.

I'm counting on you to be here with me all the way through Election Day, and I'm so thankful to you for standing up with me now.

Sincerely,
Kirsten Gillibrand

Subject: another document for today

Apologies for the late circulation of this memo. This is the draft ethics memo that we'll be discussing in the afternoon. We will also have paper copies available.

This memorandum sets out the requirements for the Transition's recruitment and use of personnel in the employ of government agencies and private sector organizations.

Executive Branch Employees

1. Executive branch employees may be "detailed" to the Transition with the consent of the head of their agency. These employees continue to receive their regular salary and benefits, but the Transition is required to reimburse their agencies for their services.

2. Other executive branch employees - "non-detailees" - may volunteer to work on the Transition during their own time, subject to the usual executive branch ethics rules governing outside activities. An executive branch employee who wants to volunteer must consult with his and her agency ethics officer to identify and satisfactorily address the relevant ethical and legal requirements. In addition, no such employee may commence work with the Transition until the transition legal team has reviewed and approved appropriate documentation that these requirements have been satisfied.

Congressional Staff

1. It is generally the policy of the Transition that Congressional staff will not serve as volunteers, or as paid, "detailed" personnel, in the Transition, subject to exceptions where it is determined that the particular experience or skills possessed by a staff member would significantly contribute to the successful achievement of the Transition's objectives. All such decisions will be made on a case-by-case basis and should be submitted to the Transition legal team for review and approval.

2. Congressional staff who are approved for service to the Transition but who remain on the congressional payroll may work on the Transition during business hours, provided that they are working on matters related to their legislative responsibilities (i.e., "legislative matters") and that they have the approval of the Member of Congress for whom they work. The employing Member of Congress must determine whether an employee's proposed Transition work is within his or her legislative duties. All such determinations must be submitted in writing to the Transition legal team, and no staff member may commence work with the Transition until the transition legal team has reviewed appropriate documentation of this approval.

3. Congressional staff may also work for the Transition as "detailees." A detailed congressional staffer works under the direction and supervision of Transition personnel, and the Transition must reimburse the appropriate congressional payroll office for that staffer's salary. All proposed "detail" arrangements must be submitted to the Transition legal team for review and approval.

4. Congressional staff working on Transition matters with the requisite approvals may work on Transition-related matters full or part-time, either at their congressional office or the Transition offices.

Private Sector

1. Private sector employees who work for corporations, partnerships, or other entities and self-employed people may work for the Transition on a volunteer or paid basis in compliance with the Transition code of conduct. In many instances these people will be asked to volunteer, in order to conserve the Transition's funds. Those who volunteer, however, must do so on vacation time, on leave granted pursuant to established leave policies, or otherwise on their own time and not the time of their employer: the Transition does not accept in-kind support from corporations or other business entities, including partnerships. All vacation time and leave arrangements must be documented and provided to the Transition legal team prior to commencement of work with the Transition.

2. The terms of this section also apply to persons employed by academic institutions, whether private or public.

3. The rules for participation by private sector employees apply to profit and non-profit organizations.

State and Local Government Employees

Neither federal law nor the rules of the Transition place any special restrictions on employees of state or local governments who wish to work for the Transition on either a volunteer or paid basis. However, state and local governments may themselves have rules governing dual compensation and potential conflicts of interest. As such, state or local government employees must submit to the appropriate state and local government ethics officer, for review and documented approval, all requests or plans to work for the Transition, on a volunteer or paid basis, and all such approvals when received must be submitted to the Transition legal team for review and final approval.

Hi Friends,

We wanted to share the two attached documents that we thought would be helpful.

- Updated talking points from Hillary Clinton's speech on Counterterrorism today in Minnesota
- Talking points following the 5th GOP Debate

Please let me know if you're going out on TV or radio tomorrow to discuss either.

Best,
Alex

Hi all -- this is for tomorrow morning. It really can't be longer than this (there are a million speakers) so please keep that in mind as you read.

If you could send me edits asap, I can get them into the book. Otherwise, send edits anytime tonight and I'll get them into the final.

Thanks!

Dear Trustees,

We have once again been singled out for our contributions to community service in the President's Higher Education Community Service Honor Roll. This year, we have advanced to the "finalist" category, in the area of economic opportunity, which puts us in the top 21 schools in the country (5 at the Presidential level, 16 at the Finalist level). As you know, this is an award that is immensely gratifying to me, personally, and I am delighted to see the good work of our faculty, staff and students recognized in this way. I think our founders would be pleased to see that the college and the city they brought into being are continuing their partnership over 175 years later....

Best,

Teresa

Subject: RE: NEC/Communications Role

John this is a follow-up to you meeting with Dan and Elissa last week. I wanted to pass it on and see if you wanted to do anything with it or if there is someone else she should talk to.

Hi Mary Pat –

As you know, I'm dying to get down to DC and start working "officially" to advance the President's agenda.

As I mentioned over the phone, an interesting opportunity has come up recently. The NEC is looking to create/fill a communications role, and it is a strikingly ideal fit for my interests and training. I met with Marne Levine, Brian Deese, and Ellen Moran on Friday to discuss it. The role they have described draws on my diverse and fairly unique background in global markets, bankruptcy litigation, and political and financial journalism. I am steeped in the substance of their work and understand the communications piece, which I know is an unusual combination that I believe they have recognized, despite the fact that I'm a bit off the beaten political communications path. I am confident that I could make substantive contributions to their team and I want to be sure that I emphasize this in the right way. I would love to hear John's thoughts and suggestions on this and everything else.

Thanks again so much, Mary Pat. I hope things go well this week in Miami.

Attachments: Claire Anderson Resume June 2015.pdf

Hi John, my name is Claire Anderson. I work for a management consulting firm based in Chicago that does work with state government agencies, and I'm a proud 2011 Knox grad (go Prairie Fire!).

I'm sending you a note because I'm passionate about Hillary's run for the presidency and want to contribute to the campaign in a meaningful, substantial way. I've submitted an application via the campaign site, but in my urgency to get involved, I want to send my resume (attached) to you directly.

I'm curious to hear what your team may be looking for right now, and very much appreciate any time and guidance you may have to offer.

If an endorsement from a fellow alum counts, Roger T. said to tell you he vouches for me.

Thanks, John. Looking forward to hearing from you.

Sincerely,

Claire Anderson

John --

Cassandra and I spoke with Jim Hamilton and one of his colleagues. It sounds like they have a very well developed process for doing the private vet at the appropriate time (i.e., when decisions are made about specific people) which we should explore leveraging. Some of their team members could also be interested in participating in the public vetting effort which Christine is organizing for us. Cassandra is organizing a follow-up call with Jim and Christine next week. We'll keep you informed.

WJC October update

1) Huma/Dennis/Lona and I just re-grouped w/Tina/JD, to discuss Oct dates that WJC is holding for us.

WJC team will come back to us early tomorrow - now that they have a view from us, of our Oct. asks.

Huma presented that $ was priority, Dennis outlined cities he could quickly mobilize events in.

WJC were holding Oct 8/9/10 - to join debate prep - on this call we just landed with holding 8th in DC and 10 tent., caveat that 8th is best since depending on how it goes, may not need 10th etc.

WJC has to return NYC eve of the 8th for a CF event.

unclear if that leaves HFA with the 9th as an option for WJC.

I added in Iowa/JJ Oct 24/25 plan for consideration

Huma relayed that HRC feels v strongly that they need to campaign together, thinks it's weird for WJC to do alone their first time together in Iowa - which she admitted was NEW info that hadn't been conveyed to rest of us, Marlon et al.

to drive this, Lona is putting together a draft of what a joint RON in Iowa on the 24th/joint campaigning morning of 25th would look like, w/WJC also returning to NYC evening of 25th for $HRC bday concert that evening.

2) per Friday call, we asked digital to better articulate the case for WJC/CVC to do online $ for us.

Huma just raised with Tina/JD - to please consider.

progress. (Katie/Teddy memo below)

As promised earlier today here is a memo asking for WJC & CVC signatures in our end of quarter fundraising efforts.

We can work around CGI if need be, we can de-dupe our email lists if need be but both of them signing emails represent huge opportunities to really help the campaign with this critical fundraising push before the end of the month.

Please let me know if you have more questions or comments. Happy to do whatever it takes to help get this across the line.

Podesta to donors: Cruz is likely GOP nominee

By: Gabriel Debenedetti

Donald Trump's apparent belief that the Republican primary contest is now a two-person race between himself and Ted Cruz isn't exactly shared at the top of Hillary Clinton's campaign.

Clinton campaign chairman John Podesta handicapped the GOP race for 90 Democratic donors assembled at a private fundraising event in Berkeley, California, on Thursday night, according to a Clinton backer who was in the room, telling the crowd that he viewed Cruz as the likeliest nominee, followed by Trump, and then Marco Rubio.

Podesta's remarks — which he made sure to say represent his own views, not an official campaign position — came after the real-estate magnate proposed a blanket ban on Muslims entering the United States, and Podesta suggested that the resulting surge of attention being paid to Trump didn't change his belief that Cruz was the likeliest pick.

But he did confirm that the Democratic front-runner's recent moves to use Trump's remarks as an anchor to drag down the rest of the Republican Party was a concerted political strategy — and that the donors shouldn't expect the strategy to go away anytime soon.

The crux of that argument is not that the other candidates are afraid to criticize Trump, Podesta told the donors: it's that they agree with him.

The top-ranking official on Clinton's team, Podesta has mostly stayed away from the public eye during the campaign apart from the occasional television interview, instead keeping his focus on private events. Thursday night's fundraiser was closed to reporters, like all of Clinton's campaign cash events.

But it landed amid the race's most controversial week yet, when the Democratic frontrunner's strategy for dealing with Trump took on added urgency.

And it came while the team is hurtling toward the end of the fundraising quarter and its goal of raising $100 million for the primary before 2016 — while donors are increasingly curious about the Brooklyn-based campaign's tactics.

Clinton aides like campaign manager Robby Mook, policy staffer Jake Sullivan, and surrogate outreach aide Michelle Kwan — the former figure skater — have all headlined recent fundraising events, as has former President Bill Clinton.

And top surrogates have also stepped up their own presence on the money trail: longtime Clinton friend and strategist James Carville has become an active campaign fundraiser, while New York Senator Kirsten Gillibrand is set to host an event in London on Dec. 29.

Even Podesta has been raising money in increasingly unexpected ways this month: the campaign has recently advertised to donors the chance to join him at a cooking event with Sarah Schafer, the executive chef of Irving Street Kitchen in Portland, Oregon, last Wednesday night, and at another similar confab with Marcus Samuelsson, the chef and owner of Harlem restaurant Red Rooster, in Brooklyn on Monday.

Dear Chris,

Tomorrow is your day - I wish you good luck. We just had a meeting with our boss and he instructed us to seek for every opportunity to meet with the President elect. Officially, our ambassador to Washington, Arturo Sarukan, is in charge of making the contacts to seek the meeting with the President elect. Should he contact you? Or would it be better for me to direct him to someone else? We know the obvious person is John Podesta, but please let me know if there is somebody else we should contact.

In reviewing the presidential meetings, we realized that four U.S. Presidents elect have seen their Mexican counterparts: Calvin Coolidge (1924), Ronald Reagan (1981), George H. W Bush (1988), and William Clinton (1993). Since George W. Bush could not meet President Vicente Fox as President elect, his first trip abroad was to Mexico in February 2001.

Abrazo y buena suerte!

Rafael

Our thinking, based on feedback from a few of you, is that this would help keep the consultant team abreast of day-to-day press/strategic communications items and give all of us a quick chance to discuss other items that may otherwise fall through the cracks.

We figure some of these calls will be 5 minutes, others will take the full 30, depending on what's going on that day.

Items to discuss on tomorrow's call:

1. News clips – new system going forward
2. HRC's WED briefing
3. May launch – locations?
4. Long version Q/A doc

Donald Trump's nonsensical plan to ban Muslims from entering the United States is a message that plays right into ISIS' hands. While many establishment Republicans quickly distanced themselves, not all of the GOP candidates have come out against his plan, and his rhetoric isn't even that outside the norm. Plus, Arnold Schwarzenegger has a tough question for climate change deniers: would they choose to suffocate themselves?

Hi guys

So we've had a bit of news tonight. Pedro Noguera signed onto a petition defending Bill Ayers, was contacted by Fox News, was planning to go on their shows, then told their producers that he was told by the campaign not to go on, which is of course, not true. So just to alert you all that we are severing ties with Mr. Noguera, he will not be representing us on Friday - in case this somehow comes up on any of your panels. It's likely to be on Fox tomorrow unless we can successfully kill the story.

Dear John,

This morning when my staff arrived at our headquarters, they found that someone had thrown eggs all over the entryway to our office and even on a staff member's car. After cleaning up this childish prank, we then took a call from a supporter who had just watched a juvenile cartoon ad on TV, smearing me personally.

This comes after a slew of juvenile attacks by the Schilling campaign over the last several weeks, and is the kind of cheap politics that is responsible for the gridlock in Washington.

It's time for a change.

Please stand up for our honorable and issue-based campaign. Contribute \$25, \$50 or \$100 today! Your contribution will help us reach voters across our vast district with our vision of what America can be.

From the start, I have pledged to run a campaign focused on the issues, like job creation and keeping American jobs here at home. I am out in the district every day, talking about the issues and our priorities. Congressman Bobby Schilling and his supporters have chosen to bring the divisive negative politics of Washington here to Illinois.

Congressman Schilling knows that he can't run on his record of misguided priorities that benefit millionaires over the middle class.

Help us fight back! Chip in \$25, \$50 or even \$100 today! □

We're taking the high road and sticking to the issues, but we can't do this without you.

Thank you for your support and friendship,

Kindest Personal Regards,

Subject: VoteVets.org Update

Dear John -

I wanted to brief you on a very important issue VoteVets.org has been working on for the past couple of weeks. As you may have heard, before he left his post, Leon Panetta approved a new Distinguished Warfare Medal to be awarded to drone pilots. While VoteVets.org doesn't have an issue with the medal itself, we did hear from our supporters that it was very problematic that the medal would out-rank the Purple Heart.

We engaged in an email campaign to hear our members' opinions, which netted over 5,000 email responses strongly opposed to placement of the medal, and ran a press campaign to voice their opinion. Below, you will find stories regarding Secretary Hagel's decision to halt the medal's production for 30 days, as he reviews the issue. This is a real success for us, and VoteVets.org is quoted in the stories below.

AP: <http://abcnews.go.com/Technology/wireStory/official-hagel-orders-review-cyber-medal-18709465>

Christian Science Monitor: <http://www.csmonitor.com/USA/Military/2013/0312/Controversy-spurs-Pentagon-s-Hagel-to-review-new-Nintendo-medal>

This review comes on the heels of high praise VoteVets.org received from the White House for its tireless support of Secretary Hagel during his confirmation: "We could not have done this without you."

And, as VoteVets.org continues to be the largest progressive voice on issues concerning veterans and military families, we could not do it without you.

Sincerely,

Jon

Early voting across Arizona began TODAY – so this can't wait. Here's why:

1.

I was named the most vulnerable Congresswoman in the entire country.
2.

GOP spending against me skyrocketed to $7,200,000.00.

We've fought back against this cash before – and won – but with the election just 26 days away, we need to get going.

John, I'm counting on you. Please chip in by midnight tonight:

Subject: Stand behind the President's plan, John

John --

Brace yourself.

If congressional Republicans don't act by tomorrow, we're going to be hit by a series of devastating, automatic budget cuts called the sequester.

It's a sledgehammer to the budget, our economy, and millions of Americans across the country -- and the most frustrating part? It doesn't have to happen.

The majority of Americans support President Obama's balanced approach to deficit reduction -- add your name if you do, too.

So far, congressional Republicans are refusing to compromise -- all because they don't want to close tax loopholes for millionaires, billionaires, vacation homes, and corporate jets. Seriously.

This has very real consequences.

On the chopping block are 10,000 teaching jobs, more than 70,000 kids' spots in Head Start, $35 million for local fire departments, $43 million to make sure seniors don't go hungry, and access to nutrition assistance for 600,000 women and their families. That's just a few of the things we'll lose.

President Obama has put forth a balanced deficit reduction plan with smart spending cuts that protect the critical investments needed to strengthen middle-class families and our economy.

We need to send a strong signal about where Americans stand on this issue.

Add your name today:

<http://my.barackobama.com/Tell-the-GOP-to-Act>

Thanks,

Messina

P.S. -- If Congress fails to act, this fight doesn't end tomorrow. We'll need to put even more pressure on Republicans to stop these budget cuts and pass a balanced plan. Join this fight now.

Cc: Charles Ferguson <cferguson@clintonfoundation.org>

Bruce and John:

Attached are the HR documents for the board meeting:

- Draft cover memo – please let us know your comments.
- Executive Summary: Development of a Salary Administration system Linked to Market Data – no changes
- Executive Summary: Health Care Plan Cost Increases & Benefits Program Benchmarking –no changes
- Analysis of 2012 Salary Increase Recommendations – updated to reflect current recommendations
- 2012 Salary Increase Recommendations for Employees - updated to reflect current recommendations; Bruce, let us know if you want to make any changes for internal equity or other purposes.
- Exceptions to 2012 Salary Increase Guidelines – updated to reflect what was agreed to in our call with Laura yesterday. Note that there was technically one additional exception for one of Stephanie's employees that we did not include in the exceptions report as it was de minimus and Stephanie was below her 4% budget overall. (Tina Eoff was rated a 1 and was given an increase of 4.9% which brought her to a Compa Ratio of 104.2%)

· Proposed Parameters for the Foundation's Total Compensation Philosophy – note one small addition of "internal equity" in the second bullet per Bob Harrison's suggestion

There are a few issues which may come up at the meeting that are not addressed in these documents including CCI and the C40 employees (Bruce, you know the background on this) and Bruce's compensation/bonus which I assume is handled separately by the Board. Please let us know your feedback. Thanks.

Subject: Show Rep. Markey you have his back

Friends:

There are only eight weeks to go in the MA Senate primary and LCV Action Fund is ALL IN for Congressman Ed Markey.

Since his first election to the U.S. House in 1976, Rep. Markey has consistently been the one of the strongest voices in the House of Representatives on addressing climate change, protecting the environment, and promoting clean energy. Rep. Markey introduced the American Clean Energy Security (ACES) Act in 2009, during which time he chaired the powerful Energy and Environment Subcommittee of the House Energy & Commerce Committee. Rep. Markey also chaired the Select Committee on Energy Independence and Global Warming from 2007-2011, and has been a leading voice for holding BP accountable for the disaster it created with the BP Deepwater Horizon oil spill as well as reforming offshore drilling to incorporate lessons learned from the spill. His decades of leadership have earned him a stellar 94% lifetime score on LCV's National Environmental Scorecard.

Rep. Markey has a lead in the most recent polls, but nearly a third of the vote is still undecided. If he can win, and win big, in the primary, that could help him keep Karl Rove out of the general election. We need Rep. Markey as our next great Senate champ!

Please join us next Tuesday to meet Rep. Markey and show this environmental champion the community stands with him and will send him to the Senate!

Looking forward to seeing you there,

Gene

Subject: Two Polls: Sestak 47% - Specter 42%

Dear John,

Sestak 47% - Specter 42%!

Two polls out this morning, Muhlenberg College daily tracking poll (47% - 42%) and Rasmussen poll (47% - 42%) have us up five points. We've extended our lead, but there are still 11% undecideds that can still flip this race from one side to the other!

In the remaining eight days, there will be a flurry of ads run by Arlen Specter attempting to break our momentum and arrest his downward spiral.

Please make a contribution to continue our advancement; to reach the 11% undecideds AND to help us respond to Arlen Specter's flurry of ads!

Every dollar that you are contributing these last few days is making a difference, and fueling our surge!

We're out there "fighting tooth and nail" for the future against a 30-year incumbent backed by the establishment. Help us.

Let's drive our campaign - the "people's campaign" - home to victory!

Best regards,
Rich Sestak,
Campaign Director

P.S. We capped off our weekend of rallies by Joe receiving the endorsement of the Pittsburgh Tribune-Review:

"Mr. Sestak, a retired Navy admiral, could not be a better messenger for the Democrats' agenda. He's incredibly intelligent, thoughtful and articulate. And his expertise on matters military is impressive. Pennsylvania Democrats would be wise to nominate the public-service minded Joe Sestak and reject the personal opportunism of Arlen Specter."

Subject: Possible politico story on CAP fundraising

I just talked to Ben Smith. He asked me if we were doing anything more to publicly disclose donors since we so many of CAP staff are so closely involved in the Transition. He posited that donors might give us money as a way of wooing John at the Transition and as a way for them to get around donating limits at the Transition.

I told him we weren't stupid, it was not our first trip to the rodeo, that we did not need to do that and would never put Podesta or the Transition in that position.

It is business as usual here, except John is gone and we are careful to not use his name in any promotional materials. I cited the book launch as an example.

I hope that this story will just go away. He said he would get back in touch if he was going to pursue something.

But this does tell me that we should continue to stay clear of overt fundraising campaigns.

Subject: Join Our Letter on the Muslim Community Center

About VoteVets.org

Dear John,

Since the debate erupted, we've kept out of the argument over the planned Community Center for Muslims in Lower Manhattan (falsely called the "Ground Zero Mosque"). Initially, we believed this was a local issue for New Yorkers to discuss. But, we can no longer stay silent. We need your help.

We're asking for you to join Iraq and Afghanistan veterans who already signed an open letter to the developer of the site, Sharif El-Gamal, supporting his right to develop the site, and expressing the view that allowing his community center to move forward will be a powerful tool in defeating the same terrorists we fought against in war.

CLICK HERE TO SIGN OUR OPEN LETTER ON THE COMMUNITY CENTER FOR MUSLIMS

There are two very important reasons we Iraq and Afghanistan veterans feel we must speak out. First and foremost, when we signed up for service, we swore to uphold the Constitution. For all the talk these days from some quarters about the importance of protecting the Constitution and allowing the free market to work unfettered, those same people are fighting against a person's right to buy property and worship freely. Our duty to protect the Constitution doesn't end when our service does. It's up to us to stand up for the right for all Americans to enjoy the Constitutional freedoms that so many around the world don't have.

Secondly, allowing the Community Center to move forward will deal a blow to the propaganda of al Qaeda and Islamist extremists, who recruit on the talking point that the United States is in a war against Islam. Of course, we're not. But, if those forces of intolerance win, it will certainly appear that we are in a war against one religion - Islam.

As Matthew Alexander, a former interrogator in Iraq, and VoteVets.org member wrote at the Huffington Post, "Imagine an al Qaeda recruiter attempting to sway a potential charge by citing an imaginary American war against Muslims but having to face the counterargument that Americans built a Muslim community center near the site of the former Twin Towers. The Cordoba House would be a powerful symbol of U.S. tolerance and freedom that will stand in direct contradiction to al Qaeda's narrative that Americans hate Muslims."

That's the point. Defeating al Qaeda will take the use of force. But it will also take destroying their ability to recruit, and that means winning hearts and minds. As veterans of the wars in Iraq and Afghanistan know, having the people on your side is of utmost importance.

CLICK HERE TO JOIN US IN PROTECTING THE CONSTITUTION AND AMERICA

Please take a moment to click the link above to join Iraq and Afghanistan veterans in this open letter, supporting the right of Muslims to build a community center on property they lawfully bought. This is too important an issue for us to stay silent on any longer.

Sincerely,

Jon Soltz

She put a statement out against RTW which Republicans failed last year to override the Governor's veto of. If she could reference her opposition to RTW that would HUGE for this audience. Also, they have are currently fighting today "paycheck deception" in Missouri which would require public sector union workers to give annual consent for money to be taken out of their paychecks for union dues. This bill will likely pass and require the Governor's veto. Could she please say I stand with Missouri workers in the fight against "paycheck deception". That would be a double home run.

NSA scolded in open Senate hearing

http://www.denverpost.com/politics/ci_24184393/nsa-scolded-open-senate-hearing

The nation's intelligence chiefs on Thursday acknowledged they would like to put the phone records of every American in a "lockbox," that there is no legal ceiling as to what they can collect, and that there is justification to collect other bulk data — like medical and business records — with court approval. Thursday's Senate Intelligence hearing was the first one to be open to the public since former National Security Agency contractor Edward Snowden launched his long string of leaks to American and foreign news organizations about the country's domestic surveillance programs.

Rep. Doug Lamborn wants to avoid government shutdown

<http://gazette.com/rep.-doug-lamborn-wants-to-avoid-government-shutdown/article/1506829>

Colorado Springs Congressman Doug Lamborn is backing a deal that could avert a government shutdown while setting up another showdown over Obamacare. The Republican is still all about undermining the Affordable Care Act. But he is joining a GOP movement to push the health care fight to a later vote over the nation's debt ceiling rather than tying up the federal budget.

Colorado higher education leaders pen letter to congressional delegation for immigration reform

<http://blogs.denverpost.com/thespot/2013/09/26/colorado-higher-education-leaders-pen-letter-to-congressional-delegation-for-immigration-reform/100908/>

The presidents of five colleges in the state and Colorado State University's system chancellor have signed a letter asking their representatives in Congress to get a move on with immigration reform. Fairness and the economy can't wait any longer, they said. "Immigration reform would help Colorado's economy to thrive," Colorado College president Jill Tiefenthaler said in a statement released by the Partnership for a New American Economy, a bipartisan coalition of more than 500 mayors and heads of top U.S. businesses who have joined with education leaders nationwide "to support sensible immigration reform that will strengthen America's economy," according to the partnership.

Hickenlooper considering special legislative session in wake of Colorado floods http://www.denverpost.com/breakingnews/ci_24183932/hickenlooper-considering-special-legislative-session-wake-colorado-floods

Gov. John Hickenlooper said Thursday he's assessing whether there is a need for a special legislative session in the aftermath of Colorado's massive, deadly floods that have wreaked havoc in 17 counties. "Each time an issue arises, we're saying, 'All right, do we need a special session or can we deal with that?'" Hickenlooper said at a news conference where he briefed reporters on the flood-recovery efforts. "And so far, most of the issues we've been able to deal with directly. That doesn't mean we've covered every avenue." Hickenlooper said it's a "matter of days" before a decision on a special session needs to be made.

Recall proponents still bristling

The revolutionary spirit held by proponents of two successful Colorado recalls appears to be gaining in strength without political borders. The message is simple: "no one is safe." Proponents of the two recalls earlier this month that ousted Senate President John Morse of Colorado Springs and Sen. Angela Giron of Pueblo — both Democrats — have now set their sights on "establishment Republicans," with the current target being state GOP Chairman Ryan Call.

The Royal Dutch Shell energy company, which announced this week it is shutting down its demonstration oil shale project in the Piceance Basin, is not exactly disappearing overnight, as happened 31 years ago when Exxon (as it was known then) pulled the plug on its oil shale operations in this region and plunged most of the state into an economic recession. "We'll be there for a while," said Shell spokeswoman Carolyn Tucker on Thursday, noting that the company has much to do before it can call it a day and move on to other pursuits.

In the 2013 eight-month period, 58,500 jobs were added, a 2.5 percent increase compared with the first eight months of 2012, Horvath said.

Subject: I'm the 148th signer: "No Fishing in Pacific Remote Islands Marine National Monument"

Dear John Podesta,

I just signed a petition addressed to you titled No Fishing in Pacific Remote Islands Marine National Monument. So far, 148 people have signed the petition.

You can reach me directly by replying to this email. Or, post a response for MoveOn.org to pass along to all petition signers by clicking here: http://petitions.cloudon.moveon.org/target_talkback.html?tt=tt-76176-custom-44536-20250904-i8h7RX

The petition states:

"U.S. President Barack Obama has proposed expanding the pristine Pacific Remote Islands Marine National Monument from 87,000 sq mi. to 782,000 sq mi., but is considering an exemption for the sport fishing industry and the US Tuna fleet. Tell our leaders: No fishing, no exceptions in the new expanded monument! "

My additional comments are:

Save the whales

I told HRC yesterday I was going to submit FOIA requests to the Rs on the committee and Chaffetz etc just to trigger their offices sending me replies that Congress is exempt from FOIA and therefore they are rejecting my request.

She loved the idea, just preferred it not come from me. Ideas on who should do?

When I worked for the leadership we had a records retention policy to actively destroy all emails after 3 or 6 months . Each office made up its own policy. Reporters should be asking congress and individual members what their policy is ? Do they use private accounts for biz ? Why does fioa not apply to them ?

Subject: From The Washington Post: Column: Is Jeb Bush really prepared to lose in order to win?

Worth the read for the positioning.

"Bush's comments provide a contrast to those of Hillary Rodham Clinton, who is going through the same decision-making process as he is. He has been more open about his considerations and is seemingly farther along in knowing what he would make his campaign about and how it would conduct it, should he decide to run."

A friend shared this article with you from The Washington Post:

He still hasn't declared his decision about 2016, but he has charted a course to avoid the negativity vortex..

Subject: transition agency review teams

Hi folks, I just wanted to let you know that word is starting to get around that the Obama transition team has a policy of not including any Hill staffers on the transition effort. I understand the conflict of interest issues and also the desire not to repeat the big transition effort of 1992, but this may create unnecessary drama. If nothing else the 1992 experience flawed though it was, by including hill staffers, provided opportunities to keep people occupied and busy, instead of carping and criticizing. Though I suspect there will be no appetite to open this up even a little bit to hill staffers, maybe one idea would be to be very public when the transition is announced about actively soliciting input from stakeholders and interested parties. I know you've already thought of that, which is why each team is being asked to develop the outreach strategy, but I just wanted to pass on why it is so critical. Best, Maria

Subject: I didn't serve in Iraq to return to a war zone

John -

As an Iraq War Veteran, I understand the dangers of firearms and the importance of keeping them out the hands of criminals and the dangerously mentally ill.

As a Coloradan, I also have a deep and abiding respect for our national tradition of gun ownership in this country and our rights to defend family and property.

I believe it is possible to hold both of those views simultaneously -- that there is a way to change our gun laws while respecting the constitutionally protected right to bear arms. Ensuring all Americans pass a background check to guarantee that those who carry weapons are law abiding citizens would be a good first step.

As the debate over gun violence prevention reignites after yet another mass shooting, it's important that veterans (our nation's foremost experts on weapons), military family members, and VoteVets supporters make our voices heard.

Sign my petition: Tell Congress to pass commonsense gun laws that will keep guns out of the hands of criminals and the dangerously mentally ill.

Throughout my military experience, I trained and performed combat missions with a conservative magazine limit. Every soldier carried a full combat load and the magazines were constructed to minimize malfunction and to be effective in tactical situations.

Currently some states allow the same size magazines I was issued as a Cavalry Scout and in some cases the clips they are allowed to carry have a larger capacity. Basically, these laws allow our citizens to be more combat effective in our communities than I was in Iraq.

In the military, every recruit is scrutinized for any moral deficiency and criminal history before entering basic training and being issued a weapon. But here at home, criminals are able to get their hands on this kind of firepower without even passing a background check.

It makes no sense, and Congress must act.

Sign my petition: Tell Congress to pass commonsense laws that will keep guns out of the hands of criminals and the dangerously mentally ill.

During the Iraq War, Secretary of Defense Donald Rumsfeld compared the violence in Iraq to Chicago, saying about both, "It's a tough part of the world."

We should strive for better. And if Congress acts on this issue, we can save lives.

Thank you for reading,

Garett Reppenhagen
Iraq War Veteran

Subject: methane follow up

John,

Thanks for reaching out. Our team has pulled together some materials to illustrate how the community has been framing the methane leaks problem. It ranges from early polling (new polling is anticipated shortly—we will share as soon as this becomes publicly available); messaging we’ve seen re-occur around the notion of “zero tolerance”; digital and print media that has been produced as a result of our efforts. Lastly, I pass on some basic talking points we use publicly.

Best, Fred

Early poll by ALA. <http://www.lung.org/healthy-air/outdoor/resources/clean-air-survey/methane-survey-2014.html>

Research has found that videos of methane leaks is a powerful tool to communicate the issue to the public. Clean Air Task Force, Moms Clean Air Force, and Western Values Project have produced videos that are catalogued on the coalition website www.methanefacts.com [this site includes the most recent positive editorials that have been placed, share graphics, etc]; direct link to videos: <http://www.methanefacts.org/videos/> “Zero tolerance” frame first emerges in the Colorado methane rules debate (by Hickenlooper); it gets recycled by O’Malley 2 years later.

Colorado

February 12, 2013; go to the 1:42:15 mark in the video (at 1:45 he uses the zero tolerance phrase) <http://www.energy.senate.gov/public/index.cfm/hearings-and-business-meetings?ID=0e5d5793-4e30-4fcd-a7c3-791c985b302e>

In raw audio footage posted by Aspen Public Radio (<http://www.aspenpublicradio.org/post/fractivists-push-statewide-moratorium>) the governor said: “The industry has to belly up to the bar and say alright, we will hold ourselves to zero tolerance... and I think they will do it.”

Gov. John Hickenlooper wants to make sure “our air regulations are good for the environment,” governor spokesman Eric Brown said. “Getting methane emissions to zero, or as close to zero as we can get them, remains an administration goal.” Front Range smog complicates push for oil and gas industry air rules - Denver Post

O’Malley

“As president, I would direct the Environmental Protection Agency to take aggressive action to limit greenhouse gases: expanding rules to other large sources of emissions beyond power plants, adopting a zero-tolerance policy for methane leaks from current oil and gas production, and setting higher energy efficiency standards for new buildings while requiring energy costs to be transparent to building tenants and purchasers.” <http://www.usatoday.com/story/opinion/2015/06/18/pope-francis-encyclical-clean-energy-technology-campaign-column/28859409/>

Basic Talking Points

Oil and gas companies emit 7 million tons of methane from their operations every year.

- o Methane escaping from the oil and gas industry has the same 20-year climate impact as 160 coal-fired power plants, and represents enough wasted natural gas to heat over 5 million homes.
- o These emissions are currently projected to increase 25 percent over the next decade.

The latest studies strongly indicate that the actual amount is much higher.

- o A study published in August by Colorado State University says previously unrecorded emissions from thousands of U.S. gathering facilities are eight times higher than estimates.
- o And, a series of studies looking at the Barnett Shale play recently found that overall emissions are roughly 50 percent higher than current estimates.
- o In other words, methane emissions are a big problem that’s only getting bigger.

Solutions to cut these emissions are highly cost-effective and, when broadly used, they improve air quality without negative economic impacts.

- o A study by ICF International concluded that the oil and gas industry could cut methane emissions 40 percent for about one penny per thousand cubic feet of gas produced. That’s one-third of 1 percent at today’s prices.
- o States as diverse as Colorado, Wyoming, and Ohio are already proving that we can have strong emission standards without costing jobs or production.

Subject: NYT: U.S. and Allies Weigh Military Action Against ISIS in Libya

<http://www.nytimes.com/2016/01/23/world/africa/us-and-allies-said-to-plan-military-action-on-isis-in-libya.html>

U.S. and Allies Weigh Military Action Against ISIS in Libya

By ERIC SCHMITT and HELENE COOPER JAN. 22, 2016

WASHINGTON — Worried about a growing threat from the Islamic State in Libya, the United States and its allies are increasing reconnaissance flights and intelligence collecting there and preparing for possible airstrikes and commando raids, senior American policy makers, commanders and intelligence officials said this week.

While no decision has been finalized about when the United States and its allies will formally expand action in Libya against the Islamic State, also known as ISIS or ISIL, administration officials indicated that it might be very soon. A decision will probably come in “weeks” but “not hours,” Gen. Joseph F. Dunford Jr., the chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, said Friday.

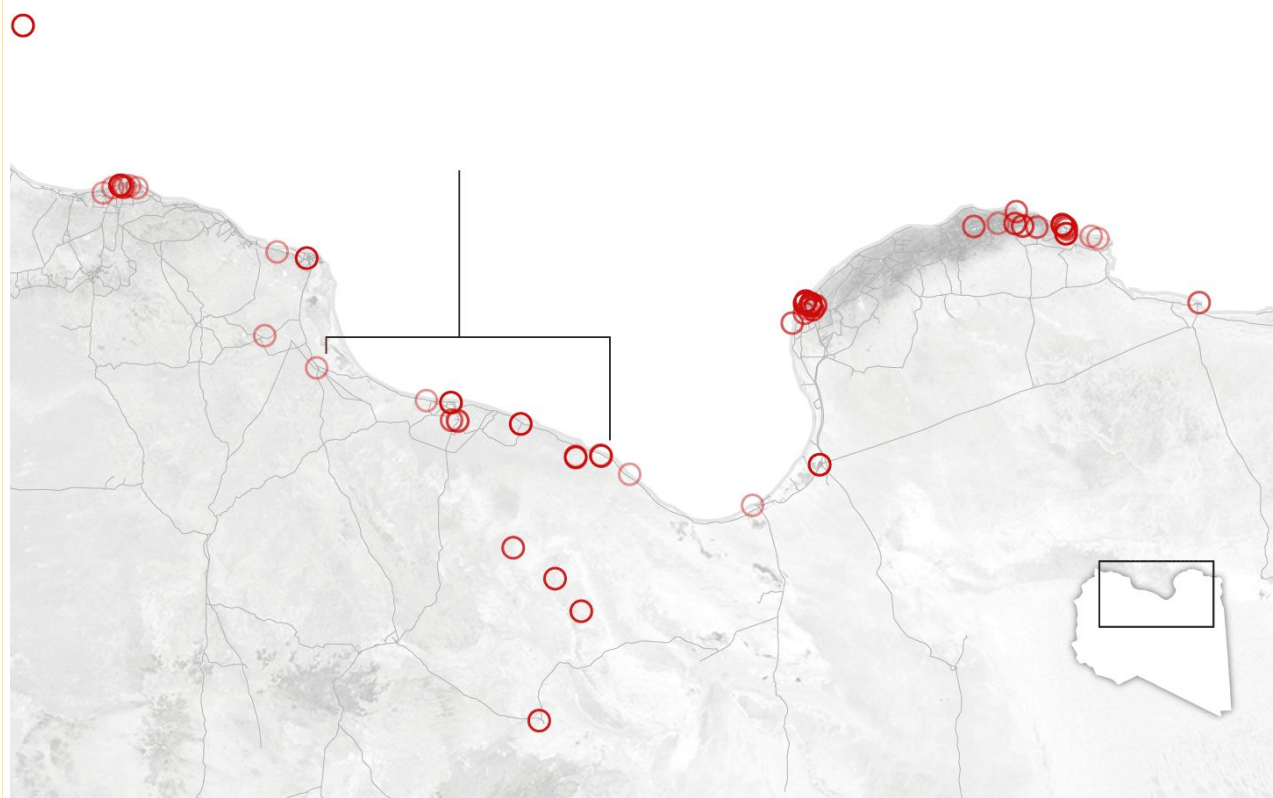

“It’s fair to say that we’re looking to take decisive military action against ISIL in conjunction with the political process” in Libya, General Dunford said. “The president has made clear that we have the authority to use military force.”

United States and British Special Operations teams have for months been conducting clandestine reconnaissance missions in Libya to identify militant leaders and map out their networks. Separate teams of American Special Operations forces have over the past year been trying to court allies from among a patchwork of Libyan militias that remain unreliable, unaccountable, poorly organized and divided by region and tribe.

In recent weeks, military commanders have intensified their warnings about the threat from the Islamic State in Libya, where Western officials believe the group now has about 3,000 fighters. Recruits are pouring into Libya weekly, as the journey to Iraq and Syria has become more difficult with Turkey tightening its border with Syria, intelligence officials said.

General Dunford said the United States, France, Italy and Britain are looking with urgency at how to stem the growth in the power of the Islamic State in Libya before it spreads throughout North Africa and the sub-Saharan countries. In particular, he said it was important to “put a firewall” between the Islamic State in Libya and other militant Islamic extremist groups on the African continent, while working to strengthen the ability of African militaries and governments to fight those groups themselves.

Where the Islamic State Is Active in Libya

Episodes of violence by ISIS or its affiliates in 2015

ISIS controls more than 150 miles of coastline around Surt

Meeting in Europe this week with counterparts from Britain, Italy and France, General Dunford discussed a broad array of military options to turn up the pressure on the Islamic State in Libya.

Officials said there was agreement that the United States and its allies needed to find ways of shoring up Libya’s new government of national accord — established just this week — with help from the United Nations but stuck, as of now, in a hotel in Tunis.

France, General Dunford said, will work closely with the United States Africa Command on a plan.

But that may be particularly challenging given that the new government has yet to gain support from the opposing parliaments in Tripoli and Tobruk, separated by the length of the country.

“Although I want to move quickly,” General Dunford told reporters traveling with him in Paris on Friday, “we’ve got to make sure we do this right.” He said that “unchecked, I am concerned about the spread of ISIL in Libya,” adding that he believed that “military leaders owe the president a way ahead.”

All this week, other top American defense leaders were sounding similar notes. “Libya will continue to be a challenge in the year to come, illustrating the new reality where small organizations wield undeserved power,” Defense Secretary Ashton B. Carter said in a speech in Paris.

“There is a concern about Libya,” Gen. Joseph L. Votel, the head of the military’s Special Operations Command, said at a conference in Washington this week. “It can’t all be about Iraq and Syria.”

Libya could present the West with challenges equal to those an American-led coalition faces in fighting the Islamic State in Syria and Iraq. In those two countries, the Islamic State is hemmed in by a host of armed groups with international backing and is being pummeled by American, British and other allied airstrikes.

In Libya, where a NATO bombing campaign helped overthrow Col. Muammar el-Qaddafi four years ago, there is no functional government. Warring factions are far more focused on fighting one another than on battling the Islamic State, and Libya’s neighbors are all too weak or unstable to lead or even host a military intervention.

On Tuesday, Libya’s Presidential Council announced a new government to bring together the groups. But the cabinet nominees still need to be approved by Libya’s internationally recognized Parliament, which sits in Tobruk, in the east.

The Islamic State already has established exclusive control of more than 150 miles of Mediterranean coastline near Surt , Mr. Qaddafi's hometown.

One of the Islamic State's most senior leaders, a former Iraqi Army officer under Saddam Hussein now known as Abu Ali al-Anbari, arrived late last year in Libya by boat from across the Mediterranean, residents and Western officials say. Another senior Islamic State operative from Syria, known as Abu Omar, also arrived in Libya recently to help cement the group's gains, American intelligence officials said this week.

Another senior Iraqi leader of the Islamic State — Wissam Najm Abd Zayd al Zubaydi, also known as Abu Nabil — may have served as the group's top commander in Libya until he was killed in November in an American airstrike near the eastern Libyan city of Darnah.

Counterterrorism officials regard the Libyan branch as the Islamic State's most dangerous affiliate, one that is expanding its territory and continuing to mount deadly attacks, including several this month.

"The ISIL branch in Libya is one that is taking advantage of the deteriorating security conditions in Libya, putting itself in the position to coordinate ISIL efforts across North Africa," Nicholas J. Rasmussen, the director of the National Counterterrorism Center, said in an interview on C-Span last month.

President Obama's top national security and foreign policy advisers have participated in several high-level meetings, called principals and deputies meetings, in recent weeks to discuss a range of diplomatic and military options for Libya.

"On ISIS in Libya, we have to be more assertive," said Ben Fishman, a former top National Security Council official on North Africa affairs and editor of a new book, "North Africa in Transition." "We have to increase bombing of ISIS while we are working to support the new unity government."

Answer is it's not your job to drive me anymore. John got back in the wee hours this morning (rather than tonight) and assuming he is up for it, we will both go. He is staying mum about it for now, however, as he doesn't know for sure how he will feel. (If it turns out he is too beat to go, I'll stay here with him.)

What time are you going? He now plans to come home about 8 pm and drive out from here with the idea of not staying long. Let's stay in touch. I suppose it is possible for the stars to align for the three of us to drive together if his timing works for you too.

JOHN MCCAIN'S STRIDENT opposition to drilling in ANWR provides a belated opportunity for clarity. Republicans would be better off viewing McCain as a Scoop Jackson Democrat living under the Republican "big tent." They should consider any typical Republican positions he takes aside from his unstinting correctness on national security issues a bonus. But Fred Thompson is perhaps the most substantive candidate to run for President in many years. He has taken the time to think about what should be the relationship between the government and the governed. He has framed his thoughts within the context of a set of bedrock conservative principles that animates his thinking and generates sound ideas about where America should be headed.

Confederate Flag Takes Center Stage Once Again (New York Times, 1/18/08)

The Republican presidential candidates on Thursday moved to appeal to different types of conservative voters before the South Carolina primary, with Mike Huckabee using colorful language to declare the Confederate flag a states' rights issue and Senator John McCain embracing a supply-side tax cut proposal.

IMPORTANT CONSUMER NOTICES

- Incorporated Terms - Your travel is subject to United's Contract of Carriage terms. The Contract is available for inspection at any UA ticketing facility, united.com or by calling 1-800-UNITED-1. Passengers have the right to receive the full text of the terms incorporated by reference free of charge by mail or other delivery service. The Contract terms include rules about limits on liability for personal injury or death and for loss, damage, or delay of goods and baggage, check-in times, overbooking, security issues, reservations, denial of carriage, refunds, claims limits and restrictions, including time limitations for filing a claim or lawsuit, and schedule changes and irregularities. The Contract of Carriage contains further detail of these terms.
- Additional Terms - Depending on the rules applicable to the fare paid, one or more restrictions including, but not limited to one or more of the following, may apply to your travel: (1) the ticket may not be refundable but may be exchangeable for a fee with another restricted fare ticket meeting all the rules/restrictions of the original ticket (including the payment of any difference in fares); (2) a fee may apply for changing/canceling reservations; or (3) travel may be restricted to specific flights and/or times and minimum and/or maximum stay may be required.
- Baggage Liability - On domestic flights, United's maximum liability limit for checked baggage is $3400 USD per passenger and United excludes liability for all unchecked baggage. For travel within the U.S., United excludes liability for fragile, valuable or perishable items carried in all baggage including jewelry, computers, cash, camera equipment and similar valuables. If any of these items are lost, damaged or delayed, you will not be entitled to any reimbursement. You can declare excess valuation on certain baggage at the airport, additional fees will apply.
- ADVICE TO INTERNATIONAL PASSENGERS ON CARRIER LIABILITY – Passengers on a journey involving an ultimate destination or stop in a country other than the country of departure are advised that international treaties known as the Montreal Convention, or its predecessor, the Warsaw Convention, including its amendments, may apply to the entire journey, including any portion thereof within a country. For such passengers, the treaty, including special contracts of carriage embodied in applicable tariffs, governs and may limit the liability of the Carrier in respect of death of or injury to passengers, and for destruction or loss of, or damage to, baggage, and for delay of passengers and baggage.
- Notice—Overbooking of Flights - Airline flights may be overbooked, and there is a slight chance that a seat will not be available on a flight for which a person has a confirmed reservation. If the flight is overbooked, no one will be denied a seat until airline personnel first ask for volunteers willing to give up their reservation in exchange for compensation of the airline's choosing. If there are not enough volunteers, the airline will deny boarding to other persons in accordance with its particular boarding priority. With few exceptions, including failure to comply with the carrier's check-in deadline which are available upon request from the air carrier, persons denied boarding involuntarily are entitled to compensation. The complete rules for the payment of compensation and each airline's boarding priorities are available at all airport ticket counters and boarding locations. Some airlines do not apply these consumer protections to travel from some foreign countries, although other consumer protections may be available. Check with your airline or your travel agent.

Rabin anniversary event at Rabin Square on October 24 or 31. Dates of key events marking the 20th anniversary of the assassination of Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin:

- The Rally at Rabin Square will take place either on Saturday Evening, October 24th or Saturday Evening, October 31st
- The official memorial at Mount Herzl, in the presence of the Israeli Prime Minister, President and MP's, will take place on Monday, October 26th at 3:00pm
- The "Yitzhak Candle" ceremony will take place at the President's residence on Sunday, October 25th at 5:00pm
- A conference featuring the authors who contributed to the compilation of articles focusing on Rabin's legacy and career will take place at the Yitzhak Rabin Center on Wednesday, October 21st in the evening

In terms of an event in NY, we have flexibility and are hoping to host the event in November 2015 – in proximity to November 4th – the Gregorian date of Prime Minister Rabin's assassination.

Main Topics: Cindy's mutual fund sale, McCain and GOP congressional races, McSame vs. McDifferent, NRA and McCain, Obama and McCain, Bush on Iraq

Summary of Shift:

In an unexpected move, John Edwards endorsed Barack Obama. This cut short Hillary's time in the limelight following her good showing in the WV primary. Last night's Democratic victory in the special House election in Mississippi sparked more questions about Republicans' chances in the fall. McCain coverage is scant, save brief mention of Cindy's shady mutual fund sale.

More than 15,000 are now believed dead in the Chinese earthquake. The Bush administration says it intends to continue aid to Myanmar, despite concerns of Burmese government misappropriation. Pres. Bush talked MidEast peace and celebrated Israel's 60th birthday in Jerusalem while Palestinian rocket attacks kill 30. Sandra Day O'Connor was on the Hill testifying on Alzheimer's. Polar bears are listed as a protected species.

Highlights:

1. Cindy McCain sells $2billion in mutual funds because of connections to Sudan
2. Dem victories in special elections spark questions about GOP strategy in the fall
 - a. Special election wins by Democrats force McCain to distance himself from Bush
 - b. GOP strategist considers McCain will help or hurt GOP Congressional candidates
3. NRA has differences with McCain but prefers him over "patronizing" Democrats
4. McCain fundraising in Ohio, distancing himself from Bush
5. Crist talks about McCain's Hamas/Obama remarks
6. Comparing McCain's policies to Obama's, Obama comes out on top
 - a. Joan Walsh: McCain's opposing votes on equal pay hurt him
 - b. David Corn: Obama has the better argument on economy and the war
7. Obama rejects McBush Plan of leaving non-corporate America alone "to fend for themselves"
8. Olbermann skewers Bush for "golf" comments, "fiasco" of Iraq policy and fear-mongering to get GOPs elected
 - a. Refers to McCain as "your [Bush's] twin Mr. McCain"
9. Republican youth support low because of war, economy

Cindy Sells $2B in Mutual Funds Because of Connections to Sudan (MSNBC 05/14/08 4:15pm)

CONTESSA BREWER: [...] The wife of Republican presidential candidate, John McCain, who of course criticizes the violence in Sudan—Cindy McCain now selling off more than $2 million in mutual funds, whose holdings include companies that do business in the Sudan. So apparently the AP had questioned Cindy McCain about investments in light of her husband's calls for sanctions against the Sudanese leadership. And now Cindy McCain is selling off some mutual funds that have companies that do business in Sudan.

Highlight #2

Republicans Losing Special Elections Will Force McCain to Emphasize McDifferent Line (FNC 05/14/08 7:03pm)

MARY LIASSON: Look, I think this is Watergate style proportions.

SHEPARD SMITH: Well, uh, then what does it mean for the national ticket?

LIASSON: McCain defies his brand. He runs better than the brand and I think that he will continue to do that. Of course it puts more pressure on him to differentiate himself from the brand and of course from Bush. I thought the statement that Tom Cole, who is head of the Republican National Committee, put out last was extraordinary. It was a real batten down the hatches, you know, every man for himself, you know, kind of Run! kind of statement . . .

GOP Strategist Discusses Whether McCain Helps or Hurts Republican Congressional Candidates (CNN 5/14/08 4:48pm)

WOLF BLITZER: The Democratic win in Mississippi for a seat that was open in Congress following a win in Louisiana, following a win in Denny Hastert's seat. 3 in a row – these open contests. Here's the question to you, as a Republican strategist. Should Republicans seeking to get elected in the fall in the House and the Senate run with McCain or against McCain?

DICK ARMEY: I think they need to run their own race on ideas. And I would say to the Republicans – much like Newt Gingrich has- if you can't get in the world of big ideas and stand tall and proud with some really good ideas and some show of commitment, you're not gonna—

BLITZER: He's very worried- Newt Gingrich. How worried are you that the majority the Democrats have in the House and the Senate is going to explode come November?

ARMEY: I think that their majority could explode. And for the same reason they won it in the first place: Republicans cannot thrive in a world of petty, small parochial ideas. The world that has the desire to vote for Republicans wants to vote for big people with large commitments to large ideas. That's what the Contract was, that's what Ronald Reagan was. And that's what they don't seem to be able to find today.

McCain Fundraising in Ohio, Distancing Himself from Bush (FNC 05/14/08 7:13pm)

TRACE GALLAGHER: And McCain's in . . . Ohio, campaigning and trying to raise some cash there. Important cash.

SHANNON BREAM: He is. He has been doing that virtually every ay while the Democrats--uh, Democrats continue to duke things out They've been doing exceptionally well. In fact Obama has been bringing in $3 for every $1 that McCain is pulling in. McCain is also, though, out there talking about green technology today, it's an issue that does put him at odds with the president. And it's his way of trying to emphasize that he does have some distance from the administration. We're also told that before he leaves Columbus tomorrow, he will make a major speech outlining exactly how his administration will look if he's elected . . .

McCain's Differences with the NRA Not Insurmountable (FNC 05/14/08 7:11pm)

TRACE GALLAGHER: McCain has also had his differences with the NRA, which could make things kind of interesting when he speaks to the group later this week. Shannon Bream is live in DC . . . McCain will argue, I'm guessing, that he's still a better bet for the NRA than either of the Democrats, right?

SHANNON BREAM: Trace, he'll certainly make that case and he's really been walking a bit of a tight rope with this group, because on one hand, he has voted against a ban on assault type weapons but he does favor mandantory backrgound checks at gun shows. NRA chief Wayne LaPierre says it is true that McCain isn't a perfect match for the group but he also says gun owners are not foolish enough to ignore the common ground they do have. As for Sens. Clinton and Obama, LaPierre says they're basically patronizing gun owners . . .

Crist Talks about McCain's Hamas/Obama Remarks (MSNBC 05/14/08 5:30pm)

WOLF BLITZER: I interviewed Hillary Clinton earlier today and I just want to get your reaction she said about John McCain, she was critical of him for criticizing Barack Obama and his stance on Hamas and Iran. I'm gonna play a little clip . . .

HILLARY CLINTON: I think that that's really, just an overstatement, an exaggeration of any kind of political meaning and I don't think that anybody should take that seriously.

BLITZER: She was referring to this notion that McCain would be Hamas's worst nightmare as opposed to Barack Obama who won the endorsement of the North American spokesman for Hamas. What'd you think?

CHARLIE CRIST: Well, I think it's very significant what Sen. McCain has said and I think he's exactly right. You know we have a great friend in Israel and Israel has been a loyal ally to the United States for a long time.

BLITZER: But don't you think Obama would be a strong supporter of Israel as well?

CHARLIE CRIST: I have no idea but what I know is that Sen. John McCain will be and always has been . . . and I think that time and time again Sen. McCain has proven his support for Israel, his support for moving forward in the Middle East, the peace process and having an endorsement or support from Hamas for Sen. Obama is not good.

Highlight #6

Joan Walsh: McCain's Equal Pay Vote Likely to Hurt Him (MSNBC 05/14/08 5:53pm)

CHRIS MATTHEWS: Even with the help of John Edwards, is he [Obama] ready to be the feminist leader, the man who says women's opportunities have to be expanded and championed? Is he that guy who can do that?

JOAN WALSH: I think he is. You know, I think he is that guy. I think he has said that. I think, you know, John McCain is now saddled with opposing legislation on making equal pay lawsuits easier. He's talked—he really hurt himself with that. I think Obama has better policies.

David Corn: Obama Has Better Arguments Than McCain on Economy and War (MSNBC 05/14/08 5:51pm)

DAVID CORN: [...] We're talking about an intraparty fight now. In the fall, it's going to be any Democrat versus John McCain. And any Democrat is more populist than John McCain is. So yes, I think having John McCain on his side is going to help Barack Obama. But while Hillary has outpopulisted Barack Obama in the primaries, John McCain will not be able to do that to Barack Obama in the general election. [...] I think Barack Obama is going to have the better economic argument and the better argument on the war when it comes to the fall.

Highlight #7

Obama Rejects McBush Plan of Leaving Non-Corporate America Alone "To Fend For Themselves" (MSNBC 05/14/08 8:11pm)

BARACK OBAMA: For the last 8 years, they've been told, you've been told that there's nothing this country can do to help you. That the best we can do is keep giving more and more of [to] those with the most and tell everyone else to fend for themselves. That's what George Bush has done for the last 8 years, and that's what John McCain is offering for the next four. Well John Edwards and I believe in a different America. Hillary Clinton believes in a different America. The Democratic Party believes in a different America. One America, where we rise and fall as one people, and that's why we are going to take Washington by storm this November.

Highlight #8

Olbermann Skewers McBush for Being Wrong on Iraq from Start to Finish (MSNBC 05/14/08 8:48pm)

PART ONE

KEITH OLBERMANN: Finally tonight, as promised, a special comment on two topics a lot of us had foolishly thought and had naively hoped we would not again have to address. And a third topic nobody thought a President would seriously ever mention in public. Unless perhaps he had just been hit in the head with something and was not in full possession of his faculties. How he expressed his empathy to the families of the dead in Iraq by giving up golf.

[Rolls footage of Bush and McCain together as Olbermann continues to rant]

OLBERMANN: The President has resorted anew to the sleaziest fear-mongering and mass manipulation of an Administration, of a public life dedicated to realizing the lowest of our expectations. And he has now applied these poisons to the 2008 presidential election on behalf of the party at whose center he and Mr. McCain lurk.

[end McCain-Bush footage]

OLBERMANN: Mr. Bush has predicted that the election of a Democratic president could "eventually lead to another attack on the United States. This ludicrous, infuriating, holier-than-thou and most importantly bone-headedly wrong statement came yesterday during an interview with Politico.com and online users of Yahoo. The question was phrased as follows: "If we were to pull out of Iraq next year, what's the worst that could happen, what's the Domsday scenario?" And the President replied: "Domsday scenario of course is that extremists throughout the Middle East would be emboldened, which would lead to another attack on the United States. The biggest issue we face is--it's bigger than Iraq, it's this struggle against cold-blooded killers who will kill people to achieve their political objectives." Mr. Bush, at long last has it not dawned you that the America you have now created includes cold-blooded killers who will kill people to achieve their political objectives? They are those in or formerly in your employ who may yet be charged some day with war crimes. Through your haze of self-congratulation and self-pity, do you still have no earthly clue that this nation has laid waste to Iraq to achieve your political objectives? This ideological struggle you speak of, Mr. Bush, is taking place within this country. It is a struggle between Americans who cherish freedom—ours and everybody else's--and Americans like you, sir, to whom freedom is just a brand name. Just like Patriot Act is a brand name or "protect America" is a brand name.

OLBERMANN: But wait, there's more. You also said, Iraq is the place where al Qaeda and other extremists have made their stand and they will be defeated. They made no stand in Iraq, sir, you allowed them to assemble there. As certainly as if that were the plan, the borders were left wide open by your government's farcical post-invasion strategy of 'they'll greet us as liberators.' And as certainly as if that were the plan, the inspiration for another generation of terrorists in another country was provided by your government's farcical post-invasion strategy of letting the societal infrastructure of Iraq dissolve. To be replaced by an American vice-royalty, enforced by merciless mercenaries who shoot unarmed Iraqis and then evade prosecution in any country by hiding behind your skirts, sir. Terrorism inside Iraq is your creation, Mr. Bush.

OLBERMANN: It was a Yahoo user who brought up the second topic upon whose introduction Mr. Bush should have passed or punted or gotten up and left the room claiming he heard Dick Cheney calling him: "Do you feel," asked an ordinary American, "that you were misled on Iraq?" [Bush replied:] "I feel like— I felt like there were weapons of mass destruction. You know, 'mislead' is a strong word; it almost some kind of intentional—I don't think so, I think there was not only our intelligence community, but intelligence communities all across the world shared the same assessment. And so I was disappointed to see how flawed our intelligence was." Flawed. You, Mr. Bush, and your tragically know-it-all minions threw out very piece of intelligence that suggested there were no such weapons. You, Mr. Bush, threw out every person that suggested that the sober, contradictory reality-based intelligence needed to be listened to and damned fast. You, Mr. Bush, are responsible for how intelligence communities all around the world shared the same assessment. You and the sycophants you dredged up and put behind the most important steering wheel in the world, propagated palpable nonsense and shoved it down the throat of every intelligence community across the world and punished everybody who didn't agree it was really chicken salad. And you, Mr. Bush, threw under the bus all of the subsequent critics who bravely stepped forward later to point out just how much of a self-fulfilling prophecy you had embraced and adopted as this country's policy in lieu of, say, common sense. The fiasco of pre-war intelligence, sir, is your fiasco. You should build a great statue of yourself turning a deaf ear to the warnings of the realists while you were shown the three-card-monte dealers, like Richard Pearle and Donald Rumsfeld and Dick Cheney. That would be a far more fitting tribute to your legacy, Mr. Bush, than this presidential library you are constructing as a giant fable about your presidency. An edifice you might as well claim was built from Iraqi weapons of mass destruction because there will be just as many inside your presidential library as there were inside Saddam Hussein's Iraq.

PART TWO

OLBERMANN: Of course, if there is one overriding theme to this president's administration, it is the utter, always-failing inability to know when it is time to quit when it is behind. So, Mr. Bush answered yet another question about this layered, nuanced, wheels-within-wheels garbage heap that constituted his excuse for war: "So you didn't feel you were given all of information you should have or right spin on the information?" "No, no," replied the president, "I was told by people that they had weapons of mass destruction." People. What people? The insane informant curveball? The Iraqi snake oil salesman, Ahmed Chalabi? The American snake oil salesman, Dick Cheney? "I was told they had weapons of mass destruction, as were members of Congress that voted for the resolution to get rid of Saddam Hussein. And, of course, the political heat gets on, and they start to run and try to hide from their votes." Mr. Bush, you destroyed the evidence that contradicted the resolution you jammed down the Congress's throat the way you jammed it down the nation's throat. When required, by law, to verify that your evidence was accurate, you resubmitted it with phrases amounted to "See, I done proved it," virtually written in the margins in crayon. You defied patriotic Americans to say 'the emperor has no clothes' only this time with the stakes, as you and the mental dwarves in your employ put it, being a mushroom cloud over an American city. And as a final crash of self-indulgent nonsense, when the incontrovertible truth of your panoramic and murderous deceit has even begun to cost your political party seemingly-perpetual political seats in places like North Carolina and, last night, Mississippi, you can actually say with a straight face, sir, that the members of Congress, the political heat gets on, and they start to run and try to hide from their votes while you greet the political heat and try to run and hide from your presidency and your legacy? 4,000 of the Americans you were supposed to protect are dead in Iraq with your only feeble pathetic answer being "I was told by people that they had weapons of mass destruction."

OLBERMANN: Then came Mr. Bush's final blow to our nation's solar plexus, his last reopening of common wounds, his last remark that makes the rest of us question not merely his leadership, or his judgment, but very suitability to remain in office. "Mr. President," he was asked, "you haven't been golfing in recent years, is that related to Iraq?" "Yes," began perhaps the most startling reply of this nightmarish blight on our lives as Americans, our history, "Yes, it really is. I don't want to mom whose son may have recently died to see the Commander-in-Chief playing golf. I feel I owe it to the families to be as- to be n solidarity as best as I can with them. And I think playing golf during a war sends the wrong signal." Golf, sir, golf sends the wrong signal to the grieving families of our men and women butchered in Iraq? Do you think the families, their lives blighted forever, care about you playing golf? Do you think, sir, that they care about you? You, Mr. Bush, you, who let their sons and daughters be killed? Sir, to show your solidarity with them, you gave up golf? Sir, to show your solidarity, you didn't give up your pursuit of this insurance scam, profiteering, morally and financially bankrupting war. Sir, to show your solidarity with them, you didn't even give up talking about Iraq, a subject about which you have incessantly proved without pause, or backwards glance, that you may literally be the least informed person in the world. sir, to show your solidarity with them, you didn't give up your presidency. In your own words, "Solidarity, as best as I can" is to stop a game? That is the best you can? 4,000 Americans give up their lives, and your sacrifice was to give up golf? Golf. Not gulf, golf.

OLBERMANN: And still it gets worse, because it proves that the president's unendurable sacrifice, the unbearable pain, the suspension of getting to hit a stick and ball together was not even his own damned idea. "Mr. President, was there a particular moment or incident that brought you to that decision or how did you come to that?" "I remember when de Mello, who was at the U.N., got killed in Baghdad as a result of these murders taking a good man's life. And I was playing golf – I think I was in Central Texas – and they pulled me off the golf course and I said, it's just not worth it anymore to do." Your one tone-deaf, arrogant, pathetic, embarrassing gesture and you didn't even think of it yourself. The great Bushian sacrifice. An Army Private loses a leg. A Marine loses half of his skull. 4,000 of their brothers and sisters lose their lives. And you lose golf. And they have to pull you off the golf course to get you to do just that, if it's even true. Apart from your medical files which dutifully report your torn knee pain which forced you to give up running at the same time. Coincidence, no doubt. The bombing in Baghdad which killed Sergio Viera de Mello of the U.N. and interrupted your round of golf was on August 19th in 2003, and yet there's an Associated Press account of you and photographs playing golf as late as Columbus Day of that year, October 13th, nearly two months later. Mr. Bush, I hate to break it to you, six and a half years after you yolked this nation and your place in history to the wrong war, in the wrong place, against the wrong people, but the war in Iraq is not about you. It is not, Mr. Bush, about your grief, when American after American comes home in a box. It is not, Mr. Bush, about what your addled brain produced in the way of paranoid delusions of risks that do not exist, ready to be activated if some Democrat and not your twin Mr. McCain succeeds you. The war in Iraq, your war Mr. Bush, is about how you accomplished the derangement of two nations and how you helped funnel billions of taxpayer dollars to lascivious and perennially thirsty corporations like Halliburton and Blackwater and how you sent 4,000 Americans to their deaths. For nothing! It is not, Mr. Bush, about your golf game. And sir, if you have any hopes that next January 20th will not be celebrated as a day of soul wrenching, heartfelt thanksgiving because your faithless stewardship will have come to a merciful end. This last piece of advice, when somebody asks you, sir, about Democrats who must now put this country back from the abyss you have placed us at, when somebody asks you, sir, about the cooked books and fake threats you put on the severed nation and your sacrifice, sir, of your gallant, noble, self-abnegating sacrifice golf game so as to soothe the families of war dead, this advice, Mr. Bush, shut the hell up! Good night and good luck.

Republican Party Having Trouble Attracting the Youth Vote (FNC 05/14/08 7:50pm)

TRACE GALLAGHER: This year's election season has seen 20-somethings showing up in flocks to vote blue, for Barack but there was a time . . . when the young ones voted red, for Reagan. So it's left the GOP wondering, "What went wrong?" John McCain would like to figure it out by November . . .

HEATHER NAUERT: It's hard to find Republicans on college campuses. But that wasn't the case a generation ago . . . in the 1980s, young voters helped Presidents Reagan and Bush win the White House. In the '84 and the '88 elections, they won the youth vote by twenty points . . .

NAUERT: . . . this generation has slipped from their grasp.

[. . .]

NAUERT: According to a new Rasmussen poll, Barack Obama leads McCain by 23 points among voters under 40, Hillary Clinton leads the Arizona senator by 10. So what happened? The war and the struggling economy and the Republican message isn't resonating . . .

ANDREA TANTAROS: The GOP organization is fundamentally broken. The way that they communicate is fundamentally broken . . .

NAUERT: Andrea Tantaros has worked on Republican campaigns and as a press secretary on Capitol Hill.

TANTAROS: The Democratic Party has really made an effort to reach out to young voters and the Republicans have not made that a priority. They cannot make that mistake this election cycle.

NAUERT: McCain is trying to win them over. He has a channel on YouTube. [. . .] He's a regular on Comedy Central. [. . .] And talks about the environment.

Subject: Obama campaign finances

 Election Night: Get a front row seat to history

John --

I'm the Chief Financial Officer for Barack Obama's campaign. I track the donations coming in and the expenses going out.

I asked for the opportunity to write to you directly so that I could try to explain what's happening right now.

This weekend the McCain campaign said they would outspend us by $10 million in the final days. This is on top of recent news that, as of October 15th, our opponents had $20 million more in the bank than our campaign and the DNC combined.

We knew the McCain campaign was saving its resources for a last-minute blitz, and now we know just how much they'll pour into it.

No matter what, we need to match what our opponents are spending in the final stretch. We can't slow down between now and Election Day.

If you give today -- any amount -- you could be one of 5 first-time donors who will have a front row seat for the big Election Night event in Chicago with Barack.

Make a donation of \$5 or more right now:

 Make a donation and you could get a front row seat to history

There's no doubt about it, supporters like you have fundamentally changed how presidential campaigns are funded. You drive this campaign.

That's why Barack wants you to be there on Election Night as the results come in.

If you're selected, we'll fly you and a guest in and put you up in a hotel. You'll go backstage at the big event and -- no matter what happens -- you'll have a front row seat to history as we celebrate the supporters who got us over the finish line.

Any donation counts -- whatever you can afford. Make a donation of $5 or more before midnight Sunday and you could have a front row seat to history on Election Night:

<https://donate.barackobama.com/frontrow>

These last 2 days, we have to redouble our efforts. And we're counting on you more than ever before.

Let's make this happen.

Thanks,

MM

Marianne Markowitz
Chief Financial Officer
Obama for America

P.S. -- If you can't make a donation, you can help get us across the finish line by volunteering to help get out

Subject: UPDATE: Law Center Telephone Connectivity Issues - Resolution Identified

Please be advised that the IST department along with UIS and Cisco have identified a server certificate problem as the root cause of the Law Center's telephone connectivity issue. In order to resolve the issue, IST technicians have already begun visiting each phone to make a 30-second configuration update. The IST team expects to complete all fixes within a 2-hour timeframe.

If you have any additional questions or concerns or if you have not received a visit from a technician within 2 hours, please contact the Technology Service Desk.

Once again, thank you for your patience.

John,

Thanks for taking the meeting with Tom and I. Hopefully, it proved useful.

Leo Hindery and his wife, Patti Wheeler, will max out for the primary on Monday. I tried to get him to you event on Sunday but he's recovering from hand surgery. Maybe another time?

Attached is my memo to Howard Paster, who was both a friend and a mentor. Somehow, it did not feel right to rewrite it; its core concepts are as relevant today as eight years ago.

Friend,

My philosophy has always been "everybody in, nobody left out."

That's my approach to governing, and that's how we're running this campaign, too.

But our way only works if everybody does their part.

A generous supporter is matching every grassroots donation between now and midnight. That means if you step up in the next few hours, your support will go twice as far.

This is one of those moments where we need everybody in -- even if it's just $1.

Chip in before midnight to double your donation:

Thanks for having my back.

Governor Quinn

Contributions are not tax deductible. State law requires that the occupation and name of the employer be reported for any individual who contributes over $500. Taxpayers for Quinn does not accept contributions from State employees. In addition, the Illinois Procurement Code prohibits certain businesses and their affiliates that have contracts, bids, and proposals with state agencies from making political contributions to state office holders responsible for awarding the contract. Hi John,

I hope this finds you well! I know you've been working with Jason on the Climate Change video. It just went Immortal -- which means over 80% funny and 100K views -- which is the highest honor we bestow on our site. So, congrats!

But I also wanted to introduce myself because a) I cast Ed Begley in this video, and b) I believe you've known my dad, Michael Sheehan, for many years!

Anyway I just wanted to say hello, and I look forward to more projects together.

All the Best,

agreed to be our autos industry interlocutor and become involved in helping formulate a real plan going forward. I told him he would be able to do most of this from NY. Will try to set up meeting between him and industry (and UAW) later in the week. I'm participating in Granholm call at 5 and will tell them about Josh. Jennifer told me that they'll want to know whether Obama will raise issue of immediate assistance with Bush tomorrow. What's right response on that point -- reiterate our view on need to disburse 25 bn and look to other authorities, indicate that I would expect the auto industry would be part of the conversation, but then if pressed say that of course I don't know exactly what he'll say?

Subject: Can you donate $500,000?

Of course you can't, John. I can't either. Heck, the legal contribution limit is $1,300.

But the L.A. Times just reported that the DWP union SuperPAC behind Wendy Greuel's campaign wrote a single check and bought $500,000 worth of television commercials. That's what we're up against. Special interests with deep pockets, devoting the next 3 weeks to tearing down Eric. That's why we're fighting back from the grassroots.

Click here to make a grassroots donation of \$500 before Saturday night.

If we can get to 1,000 grassroots donors by midnight Saturday, we'll send a strong message: We don't need special interest money when we've got people on our side.

Eric can't do this without you. Donate \$300, \$500, \$1300 or whatever you can, right now.

Already this week, more than 350 people like you have invested in this campaign. Those donations are already at work, buying materials for phone banks, printing fliers, and spreading our message via TV and radio. This is what a grassroots campaign looks like, but we still have a long way to go.

Please give.

Bucks County Residents Welcome "Bain Worker Bus Tour" to Sesame Place

Protesters Call for Mitt Romney and Rep. Fitzpatrick to Crack Down on Wall Street,

Not Sesame Street

LANGHORNE – Once again Big Bird will take center stage in the 2012 election with Mitt Romney and Rep. Fitzpatrick detractors welcoming the traveling "Bain Worker Bus" to Sesame Place on Wednesday at 5:30pm.

The Bain Worker Bus is a nationwide tour with a contingent of workers from companies owned by Bain Capital, the private equity firm Mitt Romney founded and continues to profit from.

The bus will stop in front of Sesame Place, where a crowd of local supporters, including a costumed Big Bird character, will welcome the Bain workers. The Bain workers will be speaking out, along with local unemployed, under-employed and outsourced workers about the dangers of a "Romney Economy" where good jobs are outsourced and minimum wage jobs, with no benefits, remain.

"We know that this election is not about Sesame Street, but it says a lot that politicians like Mitt Romney and Rep. Fitzpatrick would rather end funding for Big Bird than end tax breaks for big oil," said Earl Williams of Levittown.

WHAT: Sesame Place Showdown: Big Bird Meets Bain Capital

WHEN: Wednesday, October 10, 5:30 pm

WHERE: Sesame Place, 100 Sesame Road, Langhorne, PA

(in front of the Sesame Place main entrance)

WHO: Big Bird, local community members, Bain workers

For more information and updates on the bus tour, visit www.BainWorkerBus.org .

Joseph,

Good morning.

As you probably know, we only manufactured the shades, we did not install nor program. While we could certainly make a service stop, there would be a minimum service charge of $250 + tax for this kind of repair.

I suggest you contact International Blind who did both the installation and programming and who should still be providing this service. We of course are responsible for any additional window treatments we have and will be providing to residents.

Subject: Battleground States & Federal Races: The Priorities

As we come down to the end of this campaign, I thought it would be useful to let people know my final assessments based on polling and local political intelligence from around the country where to target your final efforts in terms of last minute contributions and national GOTV calling programs that several good groups.

Here's my reasoning for the suggestions below:

I think just about everyone with a political pulse understands that the presidential swing states all along have been NH, PA, VA, NC, FL, NV, CO, IA, WI, MI, and OH. All of them are still close, but based on public and private polls I have seen, early vote/registration numbers, and political intelligence on the ground, here's my assessment:

NC is not impossible, but it is tough, we're definitely underdogs there.

MI and NV seem to be trending our way, we have developed a small but steady and statistically significant lead.

I am a little nervous about PA because the polls have been tightening a little there both in the Senate and Presidential races, and the Republicans may make a major last minute push there, but at this point we are still clearly ahead.

FL remains incredibly close, but I have been skeptical from day one about FL in the end because the voter suppression is so strong there, and the entire political apparatus of the state is controlled by Republicans.

When you add it all up, while the campaign keeps a close eye on all of the above, what it boils down to at the end of the day is that NH, VA, CO, IA, WI (where we have been leading but is tightening up), and OH are currently the closest and most important states. In each case, the polling, demographics, and dynamics on the ground all show that the election there will be decided by an incredibly tight margin.

In each of the 6 tightest Presidential states listed above, there is at least one incredibly high priority House, Senate (or both) race that progressives should be prioritizing.

In Ohio, the great progressive champion Sherrod Brown is Karl Rove's top priority Senate candidate to take out, and Rep. Betty Sutton is a top-of-the-top tier House race for progressives.

In WI, Tammy Baldwin is one of the top 3 progressive Senate candidates in the country, locked in a very tight race with former Gov. Tommy Thompson.

In NH, both House races are hotly contested.

In IA, all 4 House races are competitive, and Christie Vilsack's race to defeat quite possibly the most right wing member of the entire Congress, Steve King, is dead even in the polls.

In CO, one of the best progressive House candidates in the country Joe Miklosi is also dead even with another extreme tea party right winger, Mike Coffman.

And in VA, Tim Kaine is in one of the closest Senate races in the country.

There's one other race not in a swing Presidential state which is a very, very high priority for the entire progressive community: Elizabeth Warren's Senate race. She has a razor thin lead, but without the Obama field operation targeting MA, she has to pay for the GOTV operation all on her own, and this race will be decided on turnout.

Based on these priorities, I have the following recommendations as specific places to send your last minute dollars. If you don't want to take the trouble to send money to each project on its own, I list at the end 2 places where you can give to joint funds that will cover a lot or all of these races:

If you want to help on the GOTV effort for Elizabeth Warren, give here: <https://secure.actblue.com/contribute/page/mdp-coordinated>

If you want to focus on Ohio, to help GOTV for Obama, Sherrod Brown, and Betty Sutton click to give here: www.ohiodems.org/supporters

If you want to help out Tammy Baldwin and Obama in WI, here is the place to give: www.wisdems.org/BaldwinVictory

If you want to help Christie Vilsack defeat lunatic right winger Steve King, and help Obama in IA, here is the best place to give: <https://services.myngp.com/ngponlineservices/contribution.aspx?X=qtLa6R6z%2fCMRFyAitirs4VEpXqtRdn9bp%2fENsuxOA8A%3d>

If you want to gin up GOTV in the all-important swing 6th CD in CO, helping both in that critical Congressional race and in Obama's efforts, you can give here: https://joemiklosi.nationbuilder.com/the\_gotv\_fund?

utm\_campaign=4600\_to\_go&recruiter\_id=61588&utm\_medium=email&utm\_source=joemiklosi

If you want to help Obama and Tim Kaine in VA, you can give here: <https://secure.actblue.com/contribute/page/vavictory2012>

If you want to help in NH with its 2 key Congressional races and the Presidential, the best place to give is this fund, and tell them the money should be used for NH. <https://services.myngp.com/ngponlineservices/contribution.aspx?X=Z52tDtP9qn36%2fAcfN%2fKYA%3d%3d>

If you don't want to mess with doing multiple checks or figuring out where to give, but want to help, send money to this Actblue page for our PAC and we will get the money out to the campaigns/GOTV efforts that need it the most: <https://secure.actb.ue.com/contribute/page/battleground-priorities>

I know that most of you have already given a great deal, but anything you can do here at the end when every vote counts in an incredibly close race would be most appreciated. And if you have a chance, let us know what you are doing so we have a sense of what money is going where.

Thanks you so much for everything you have done and are doing. Let's win this election!

Mike

Hi old boss man,

I hope you're doing good. You probably won't have time to get out to Truckee, CA anytime soon.

I'm swinging way above my weight class here. And I'm 100% sure this out of protocol.

I'm trying to land the campaign a big fat whale that can give between $100,000 to maybe $1 million if their ego can be reassured that they won't be just treated "just like any other donor."

With your permission, can I CC you in an email to these guys.

I'm work with Haim Saban's political director on these same guys.

If it's 100% inappropriate I understand.

If you're in Los Angeles , I would love to see ya.

Hello Minh,

Thank you for taking the time to discuss the Hillary Victory Fund (HVF) with the Hartfields.

As discussed, we hope they will consider contributing $200,000 to HVF by the end of 2015. There are no set events for the HVF in California as of now, but they will be invited once they are announced in 2016.

We truly appreciate their consideration. The Hillary Victory Fund is crucial to electing Hillary as our next president. I have attached additional information about HVF.

Please feel free to contact Stephanie Smith or Alex De Ocampo for any further questions.

Best regards,

Dennis

RELEASE: HRC's Jeff Krehely to Return to CAP as Senior Vice President for Domestic Policy

April 17, 2015

Contact: Tom Caiazza

Phone: 202.481.7141

Email: tcaiazza@americanprogress.org

Washington, D.C. — The Center for American Progress has announced that Jeff Krehely, vice president and chief foundation officer for the Human Rights Campaign, or HRC, will be rejoining CAP as the new Senior Vice President for Domestic Policy. Prior to his work at HRC, Krehely was the founding Director and Vice President for CAP's LGBT Research and Communications Project and the research director for the Movement Advancement Project.

"When Jeff first came to CAP, he was tasked with launching the LGBT program and establishing CAP's policy role on these critical issues," said Neera Tanden, CAP President. "By the time he left four years later, he had built a team that consistently did award-winning research and advocacy and paved the way for the excellent work the team has done since. We are thrilled to have him back at CAP applying his talent and strategic thinking across a wide range of critical domestic policy issues."

Most recently, Krehely served as HRC's vice president and chief foundation officer, where he oversaw six major program areas for the organization, including workplace, school, child welfare, faith community, and health care issues. He also led the organization's fundraising efforts. Prior to his work at HRC, Krehely built and led CAP's LGBT Research and Communications Project, where he researched, wrote, and edited publications on a wide range of LGBT issues, including workplace discrimination, gays in the military, youth homelessness, and economic security, among others.

As Senior Vice President for Domestic Policy, Krehely will oversee a portfolio of the Center's domestic policy work, working closely with the policy and executive teams to advance CAP's policy goals.

For more information on this topic or to speak with an expert, contact Tom Caiazza at tcaiazza@americanprogress.org or 202.481.7141.

If you are asking if I talked to any press or anyone outside of our internal team about our plans, I have not.

I have a 20 year reputation of not leaking and not starting now.

I have not even spoken to anyone at the White House about this.

In fact, I have removed myself from WH discussions about emails. Think that is cleaner for both sides. Told Eric he should call Philippe to help with prepping Josh.

Two Morning Joe clips - first a story about potus, Feinstein interviews, then Chuck Todd did a longer piece on their secretive nature, foreign donors etc. Then Mika said they hear she will be addressing it this week and "take it head on." Then they banter about what she should do - turn over her server, is there a connection to foreign money in her emails, etc. Started talking about if others should run - John Hickenlooper, O'Malley. Both Joe and Mika said she should have used a .gov account. Were pretty harsh.

Second story on the show - it is Senator Klobuchar who said HRC will address her emails this week. "You are going to hear something this week and I'm fairly certain it will be soon." Then Mika say, "we've heard this too - that she will address it this week." Senator Cornyn said she needs to hand over her server.

The Rapidly Rising Number of Uninsured and Underinsured

46.3 Million Americans Have No Health Insurance. "Nationwide, the number of uninsured has increased from 39.8 million in 2001 to 46.3 million in 2008." [U.S. Department of Health and Human Services, Press Release, 9/16/09 ]

25 Million Americans Are 'Underinsured.' "The number of underinsured U.S. adults -- people who have health coverage but are not adequately protected from high medical expenses -- has risen dramatically. A Commonwealth Fund study published by the journal Health Affairs in June finds that as of 2007, there were an estimated 25 million underinsured adults in the U.S., 60 percent more than the 16 million who were underinsured in 2003." [CommonwealthFund.org, 7/28/08; Accessed, 9/16/09 ]

14,000 Americans are Losing Their Coverage Each Day. "Even when the economy was growing, 46 million people in America did not have any health insurance. Since the recession began, an estimated 4 million additional Americans have lost their health insurance and 2 million have become uninsured. The recent turmoil in the job market is likely increasing the number of uninsured at the rate of 14,000 a day.” [Center for American Progress, February 19, 2009 ]

A full one in six Americans with employer-sponsored insurance in 2006 lost that coverage by 2008. If this trend continues, one in six Americans with employer coverage today will lose their job-based health insurance over the next two years. [U.S. Department of Health and Human Services report, “Insurance Insecurity: Families Are Losing Employer-Sponsored Insurance Coverage,” accessed, 9/16/09 ]

Half of all Americans Will Lose Their Health Coverage Sometime in the Next 10 Years. “A new report from the Treasury Department shows that about half of all Americans under age 65 will lose their health coverage at some point over the next ten years. The report also found that more than one-third of Americans will go without coverage for longer than one year.” [Treasury Department , 9/20/09]

More than half of the uninsured—26 million Americans—are small-business owners, employees, or their dependents. Small businesses pay higher premiums than their larger counterparts, and many cannot afford to offer coverage as a result. Among firms with 3 to 9 workers, fewer than half are able to offer health benefits to their workers. [Families USA, July 2009 ]

Fewer Small Businesses Are Offering Insurance: “From 2000 to 2007, the proportion of non-elderly Americans covered by employer-based health insurance fell from 66% to 61%. Much of this decline stems from small business. The percentage of small businesses offering coverage dropped from 68% to 59%, while large firms held stable at 99%.” [U.S. Dept. of Health and Human Services, “Helping the Bottom Line: Health Reform and Small Business,” accessed 9/17/09]

About 10% of small businesses are considering eliminating coverage over the next year, up from 3% in 2005, according to a recent survey by National Small Business Association. [Wall Street Journal, May 26, 2009]

A full 32 percent of working age adults and their families had a gap in health insurance coverage for at least one month in 2006 and 2007. [U.S. Department of Health and Human Services report, “Insurance Insecurity: Families Are Losing Employer-Sponsored Insurance Coverage,” Accessed, 9/16/09 ]

And an estimated 87 million people were uninsured at some point during 2007 and 2008. [U.S. Department of Health and Human Services report, “Insurance Insecurity: Families Are Losing Employer-Sponsored Insurance Coverage,” Accessed, 9/16/09 ]

Exploding Health Care Costs

The Average Family Premium Is $13,375, Up 131% Since 1999. “In 2009, the average annual premiums for employer-sponsored health insurance are $4,824 for single coverage and $13,375 for family coverage. Premiums for family coverage are 5% higher than last year ($12,680)...Since 1999, average premiums for family coverage have increased 131%.” [Kaiser/HRET Survey of Employer-Sponsored Health Benefits, 2009, 9/15/09 ]

Health Care Premiums Cost $1,100 More for the Insured Because of Cost Shifting from the Uninsured. “The Center for American Progress has updated a 2005 analysis by Kenneth Thorpe for Families USA and found that, on average, 8 percent of families’ 2009 health care premiums—approximately $1,100 a year—is due to our broken system that fails to cover the uninsured...The uninsured pay more for care—and get less—than those with insurance. But when the uninsured cannot pay, health care providers shift those costs to those who can pay—those who have insurance coverage. This leads to higher premiums for those who buy their insurance on the individual market, as well as workers who get insurance for themselves and their families through their job.” [Center for American Progress Action Fund report, “The Cost Shift from the Uninsured,” 3/24/09]

Employer-sponsored health insurance premiums have nearly doubled since 2000, a rate three times faster than wages. [Kaiser Family Foundation; Employer Health Benefits Survey 2008. ]

Average family deductible increased 30 percent in just two years. “A deductible is the amount of money a person must pay out of his or her own pocket before health insurance begins to cover the cost of medical expenses. Deductibles have risen substantially over time. For preferred provider organization (PPO) plans purchased through an employer, the average family deductible increased 30 percent in just two years, from $1,034 to $1,344. This effect is more pronounced for small firms, where PPO deductibles increased from $1,439 to $2,367 — a rise of 64 percent.”

[\[U.S. Department of Health and Human Services, "Hidden Costs of Health Care Report: Why Americans Are Paying More But Getting Less," accessed 9/24/09\]](#)

Families Will Be Paying 1/3 of their Income on Health Care Without Reform. "A new report from the Center for American Progress shows that without reform, health care costs will eat up fully one-third of the average family's income by 2019 – equivalent to a second rent or mortgage payment every month for many families." ["Family Health Spending to Rise Rapidly," Center for American Progress, 9/15/09 ]

Without significant marketplace reforms, if current trends continue, annual health care costs for employers will rise 166 percent over the next decade, from $10,743 per employee today to $28,530 by 2019. [Health Care Reform: The Perils of Inaction and the Promise of Effective Action; A Report to Business Roundtable by Hewitt Associates LLC; September 2009]

If nothing changes, by 2019, total health care spending will reach $4.4 trillion, consuming more than 20 percent of the U.S. Gross Domestic Product. [Health Care Reform: The Perils of Inaction and the Promise of Effective Action; A Report to Business Roundtable by Hewitt Associates LLC; September 2009 ]

72 million, or 41 percent, of nonelderly adults have accumulated medical debt or had difficulty paying medical bills in the past year. "In fact, one recent survey estimated that 72 million, or 41 percent, of nonelderly adults have accumulated medical debt or had difficulty paying medical bills in the past year. A full 61 percent of those with difficulty had insurance." [U.S. Department of Health and Human Services report, "Insurance Insecurity: Families Are Losing Employer-Sponsored Insurance Coverage," accessed, 9/16/09 ]

Nearly three-quarters of Americans who tried to buy health coverage in this market never actually purchased a plan. "Over the last three years, nearly three-quarters of people who tried to buy coverage in this market never actually purchased a plan, either because they could not find one that fit their needs or that they could afford, or because they were turned down due to a preexisting condition." [The Commonwealth Fund; "Failure to Protect: Why the Individual Insurance Market Is Not a Viable Option for Most U.S. Families," July 2009 ]

The Average American Spends About $7500 a year on Health Care. "Health spending in the United States averaged \$7,421 per person in 2007, totaling $2.2 trillion, or 16.2% of our nation's economy, up from 7.2% of GDP in 1970 and 12.3% of GDP in 1990." [Centers for Medicare and Medicaid Services, Office of the Actuary ]

Employers Are Spending 131% More On Health Insurance To Cover Their Employees. "Since 1999, family premiums for employer-sponsored insurance have increased 131 percent, while wages have gone up 38 percent and inflation has gone up 28 percent." [Kaiser/HRET Survey of Employer-Sponsored Health Benefits, 1999-2009 ]

Per Capita Health Spending Has Increased Faster Than The Consumer Price Index. "Over the past 25 years, annual increases in national health spending per capita have exceeded increases in the Consumer Price Index, most recently 5.1% vs. 2.8% in 2007." [Kaiser Family Foundation calculations using NHE data from Centers for Medicare and Medicaid Services, Office of the Actuary, National Health Statistics Group]

The United States Spend Much More on Health Care Coverage Per Person Than Any Other Country. "The U.S. spends substantially more per capita on health care than other developed countries. ($6,567 in the U.S. in 2006 compared to, for example, $4,311 in Switzerland, $4,223 in Luxembourg, $3,505 in Canada, $3,353 in France, $3,247 in Germany, in current health expenditures)." [Organization for Economic Co-operation and Development ]

One-Third of all Young Adults Report Problems with Paying Medical Bills. "A lack of adequate coverage also can have devastating consequences for people just starting their financial independence. In a recent survey, more than one-third of all young adults (with or without health insurance) reported problems with paying medical bills, including having trouble making payments, being contacted by a collection agency, or significantly changing their way of life in order to make payments. One in four young adults reported medical debt. This problem is significantly worse for those without insurance. Nearly half of uninsured young adults (49 percent) reported problems with medical bills, and nearly 40 percent carried medical debt. [Young Americans and Health Insurance Reform: Giving Young Americans the Security and Stability They Need; U.S. Dept. of Health and Human Services, accessed 9/22/09 ]

A 2008 survey found that one in four adults responded that they had passed up another job opportunity, stayed at a job they would have quit, or declined to retire early in order to retain employer-provided health insurance. [Health Care Reform: The Perils of Inaction and the Promise of Effective Action : A Report to Business Roundtable by Hewitt Associates LLC; September 2009]

Between 2000 and 2008, the percentage of firms offering health insurance coverage to their employees declined from 69 to 63; for firms employing less than 10 workers, the decline was even greater – from 57 to 49 percent. [*“Insurance Insecurity: Families Are Losing Employer-Sponsored Insurance Coverage.”* U.S. Department of Health and Human Services, accessed 9/22/09]

Between 2001 and 2005, employers dropping dependent coverage accounted for 11 percent of the decline in employer-sponsored insurance overall. [*Insurance Insecurity: Families Are Losing Employer-Sponsored Insurance Coverage*; U.S. Department of Health and Human Services, accessed 9/22/09 ]

A family that buys insurance on the individual market pays nearly 60 percent more in out-of-pocket costs such as deductibles and co-payments than a family that gets insurance through work. [*Insurance Insecurity: Families Are Losing Employer-Sponsored Insurance Coverage*; U.S. Department of Health and Human Services, accessed 9/22/09]

The Consequences of Doing Nothing: Tens of Thousands Die Each Year Due to Lack of Health Insurance

137,000 Americans Died From 2000 through 2006 Because They Did Not Have Health Insurance. “In 2002, the Institute of Medicine (IOM) estimated that 18,000 Americans died in 2000 because they were uninsured. Since then, the number of uninsured has grown. Based on the IOM’s methodology and subsequent Census Bureau estimates of insurance coverage, 137,000 people died from 2000 through 2006 because they lacked health insurance, including 22,000 people in 2006,” according to a January 2008 report from The Urban Institute, “Uninsured and Dying Because of It: Updating the Institute of Medicine Analysis on the Impact of Uninsurance on Mortality.” [*The Urban Institute, January 2008*]

The Consequences of Doing Nothing: Bankrupt Families

Almost two-thirds of all U.S. bankruptcies are from medical bills. “In 2007, medical problems and expenses contributed to nearly two-thirds of all bankruptcies in the United States, a jump of nearly 50 percent from 2001...Most of those bankrupted by medical problems were “solidly middle class” before they suffered financial disaster -- two-thirds were homeowners and three-fifths had gone to college.” Even those with health insurance had to declare bankruptcy after racking up $17,749 in bills. [*American Journal of Medicine, 6/4/09* ]

Every 90 seconds another family files for bankruptcy due to medical bills. “In 2007, before the current economic downturn, an American family filed for bankruptcy in the aftermath of illness every 90 seconds.” [*American Journal of Medicine, 6/4/09*]

The Consequences of Doing Nothing: Millions of Americans Avoiding the Care They Need

The results of a recent study showed that two-thirds of the uninsured (68 percent) go without needed care – including seeing a doctor when sick, filling prescriptions, and following up on recommended tests or treatment – and 51 percent of the uninsured report difficulty paying bills, being contacted by collection agencies for unpaid bills, or changing their way of life to pay medical bills. [*“Insurance Insecurity: Families Are Losing Employer-Sponsored Insurance Coverage.”* U.S. Department of Health and Human Services, accessed 9/22/09]

U.S. Health System Ranked # 37 in the World Despite Spending a Higher Portion of GDP Than Any Other Country

“The U. S. health system spends a higher portion of its gross domestic product than any other country but ranks 37 out of 191 countries according to its performance,” according to the June 21, 2000 report “The World Health Report 2000 – Health systems: Improving performance” by the World Health Organization. The same report ranked Costa Rica’s health system #36 and Slovenia’s health system #38. France’s health system was ranked #1. As *geographic.org notes*, “The World Health Organization’s ranking of the world’s health systems was last produced in 2000, and the WHO no longer produces such a ranking table, because of the complexity of the task.” [*World Health Organization press release, June 21, 2000*]

Health Care Costs Doubled From 1996 to 2006, and are Projected to Rise to 25 percent of GDP in 2025. [*U.S. Department of Health and Human Services report.* “Insurance Insecurity: Families Are Losing Employer-

Health spending in the United States averaged $7,421 per person in 2007, totaling $2.2 trillion, or 16.2% of our nation's economy, up from 7.2% of GDP in 1970 and 12.3% of GDP in 1990. [Kaiser Family Foundation, accessed 9/16/09]

Over the past 25 years, annual increases in national health spending per capita have exceeded increases in the Consumer Price Index, most recently 5.1% vs. 2.8% in 2007. [Kaiser Family Foundation, accessed 9/16/09]

Astronomical Insurance Industry Profits and What They’re Spending to Protect Them

For the five top-earning insurance companies in 2008, average profits were $1.56 Billion; That year, CEO compensation for these companies ranged from $3 million to $24 million. [Families USA, July 2009 ]

Health Insurance Company CEOs Total Compensation in 2008 :

- Aetna, Ronald A. Williams : $24,300,112

Is It Any Wonder Insurance and HMO Industries Spend Nearly $700,000 Per Day to Kill Health Care Reform Measures; Industries have spent $585.7 million since 2007 on lobbying and campaign contributions.

An analysis of insurance and HMO political contributions and lobbying expenses by campaign finance watchdog Public Campaign Action Fund “found the industries spent $126,430,438 over the first half of 2009 and $585,725,712 over the past two and a half years to influence public policy and elected officials. The analysis also “found that in the first part of 2009, the industries were spending money at nearly a $700,000 a day clip to influence the political process and that the monthly pace of political spending this year has increased by nearly $400,000 over the average spent per month in the previous two years.” [Public Campaign Action Fund, press release, 9/15/09 ]

Negligible Competition in the Private Insurance Market = Higher and Premiums

94% of All Markets Have A Near Monopoly When It Comes to Individual Insurers. “The American Medical Association reports that 94 percent of insurance markets in the United States are now highly concentrated. Shrinking competition among health insurance companies is a major cause of these spiraling costs. In the past 13 years more than 400 corporate mergers have involved health insurers, and a small number of companies now dominate local markets...Contrary to industry assertions, these mergers have undermined market efficiency: premiums have skyrocketed, increasing more than 87 percent, on average, over the past six years.” [American Medical Association, 2008]

Outrageous Insurance Industry Practices

In 45 states, insurance companies can discriminate against people based on their pre-existing conditions when they try to purchase health insurance directly from insurance companies in the individual insurance market. [Insurance Insecurity: Families Are Losing Employer-Sponsored Insurance Coverage: U.S. Department of Health and Human Services, accessed 9/22/09]

12.6 Million Americans Seeking Insurance Were Discriminated Against In Last Three Years Because of a ‘Pre-existing Condition. “A recent national survey estimated that 12.6 million non-elderly adults<sup>24</sup> – 36 percent of those who tried to purchase health insurance directly from an insurance company in the individual insurance market – were in fact discriminated against because of a pre-existing condition in the previous three years. Another study found that among those with a health problem trying to purchase insurance in the individual market, 70 percent found it difficult or impossible to find affordable coverage, and roughly half were turned down or discriminated against. [Insurance Insecurity: Families Are Losing Employer-Sponsored Insurance Coverage: U.S. Department of Health and Human Services, accessed 9/22/09]

In eight states and D.C., it is still legal for insurers to reject a woman's health insurance application if she is a victim of domestic violence. "The eight states that still allow it are Idaho, Mississippi, North Carolina, North Dakota, Oklahoma, South Carolina, South Dakota and Wyoming, according to a report by the National Women's Law Center." [National Women's Law Center , accessed 9/16/09; Huffington Post, 9/14/09 ]

20,000 Americans lost their health insurance in the last five years through a shady insurance industry practice called "rescission." "When a person is diagnosed with an expensive condition such as cancer, some insurance companies review his/her initial health status questionnaire. In most states' individual insurance market, insurance companies can retroactively cancel the entire policy if any condition was missed – even if the medical condition is unrelated, and even if the person was not aware of the condition at the time. Coverage can also be revoked for all members of a family, even if only one family member failed to disclose a medical condition. A recent Congressional investigation into this practice found nearly 20,000 rescissions from three large insurers over five years, saving them $300 million in medical claims – $300 million that instead had to come out of the pockets of people who thought they were insured, or became bad debt for health care providers." [U.S. Department of Health and Human Services report, "Coverage Denied: How the Current Health Insurance System Leaves Millions Behind: "Pre-Existing Conditions" Affect Millions of Americans." HealthReform.gov, accessed 9/16/09 ]

During a 2007 investigation, California regulators uncovered more than 1,200 violations of the law by Anthem Blue Cross in regard to unfair rescission and claims processing practices. "In March 2007, the California Department of Managed Health Care fined Anthem Blue Cross $1 million after an investigation revealed that the insurer routinely canceled individual health policies of pregnant women and chronically ill patients. In order to drop individual policies, the insurer must show that the policyholder lied about their medical history or preexisting conditions on the application. As part of the state's investigation, regulators randomly selected 90 cases where the insurer had dropped the policyholder. In every single one, investigators found the insurer had violated state law. During the investigation, California regulators uncovered more than 1,200 violations of the law by Anthem Blue Cross in regard to unfair rescission and claims processing practices." [Americans Association for Justice, "Tricks of the Trade: How Insurance Companies Deny, Delay, Confuse and Refuse," accessed 9/17/09]

In the past 18 months, California's five largest insurers paid almost $19 million in fines for marooning policyholders who had fallen ill. That includes a $1 million fine against Health Net, which admitted offering bonuses to employees for finding reasons to cancel policies. [Washington Post, September 8, 2009 ]

One in 10 People with Cancer Unable to Obtain Health Coverage; Six Percent Said They Lost Their Coverage. "In another survey, one in 10 people with cancer said they could not obtain health coverage, and six percent said they lost their coverage, because of being diagnosed with the disease." [U.S. Department of Health and Human Services report, "Coverage Denied: How the Current Health Insurance System Leaves Millions Behind: "Pre-Existing Conditions" Affect Millions of Americans." HealthReform.gov, accessed 9/16/09 ]

In most states, insurers can reject women for coverage simply for having previously had a Cesarean section (C-section). "In most states, insurers are free to reject individuals applying for coverage in the individual market. Many women face such rejection at this underwriting stage of purchasing insurance for a wide range of reasons. For example, women have greater health needs than men and are more likely than men to suffer from a chronic condition requiring ongoing treatment, like asthma or arthritis. These conditions can lead to rejection of coverage. In addition, if during the medical underwriting process the insurer discovers that an applicant underwent a past C-section, the company may charge her a higher premium, impose an exclusionary period during which it refuses to cover another C-section or pregnancy, or even reject her for coverage altogether unless she has been sterilized or is no longer of childbearing age." About 805,000 Californians have insurance policies that specifically exclude maternity coverage. "The number of individual health insurance policies that do not include maternity coverage has risen dramatically in recent years, prompting concern among consumers and a legislative effort to require California insurers to include the benefit. Any news on location? When are you arriving?

I realized this morning that I haven't said anything to Federico about this. Have you? He's sort of stepped back from the process (due to other campaign commitments), so I don't know what his expectations are.

Looking increasingly like a three horse race -- NDP's decision to stick to Tories by pledging to remove deficit seems to be damaging them, and making it hard to explain how they will run a progressive agenda. Trudeau has contrasted, saying he will run small deficits to fund infrastructure as Canada needs that, and has been backed up by Paul Martin -- who may Canadians still revere.

Team,

Attaching an oped reflecting initial feedback from Amanda and Lorella that the political team would like to run in La Opinion / regional Spanish-language papers timed to the start of Hispanic Heritage Month / the second Republican debate. The idea is to lay out a passionate case for why HRC stands with the Latino community and call out the Republicans for their rhetoric, rather than leaning on policy positions.

Please send comments/edits/approvals my way by 7pm if possible so we can get this to HRC for approval overnight and out for translation tomorrow.

Thanks all,

Kristina

Subject: checking in on my book idea

Dear John,

I sent you an email several weeks ago but you might have missed it, so I thought it would make sense to just email you once more, and cc Jen. Long story short, I have been discussing the idea of writing a third book with my agent and my editor at Knopf/Pantheon. In the course of those discussions, I have tentatively settled on the idea of a book that would look at the role you have played in the Democratic Party over the course of the last few decades. This would allow me to examine pivotal moments in two presidencies and one presidential campaign, as well as key ideas (including what does it mean to be a progressive and key environmental decisions).

As I'm writing up my proposal, it would be helpful to know whether you'd be willing to cooperate with such a book. I would imagine you would have reservations about a book that would be akin to a biography, but that's not really what this would be. I'm aiming to write a book that helps explain how Washington works, by examining how someone behind the scenes has helped moved the levers of government and operated the machinery of campaigns. And of course, if the book doesn't garner a good advance I won't write it, because I've got plenty of other things on my plate. But I think it could be an interesting project, and it would be great to know to what extent you'd be open to talking to me about this.

I know both of you are very busy, but just drop me a line when you get a chance. I will be traveling in Canada from Friday to Tuesday, but will be reachable all of the usual ways.

Best, Juliet

How Euro Area Deepening Can Reduce the Risk of Brexit

Daniela Schwarzer

May 29, 2015

BERLIN—While British Prime Minister David Cameron is travelling Europe from The Hague to Paris, from Warsaw to Berlin to kick off negotiations on Britain's relationship with the EU, German and French political leaders are working behind the scenes on how to deepen the euro area. In a recently leaked joint letter addressed to European Commission President Jean Claude Juncker, French President François Hollande and German Chancellor Angela Merkel argue for a deepening of the euro area without a change of the EU Treaty. This leaked letter was widely interpreted as a rebuff to Cameron, telling him there will be no treaty change to accommodate British interests to renegotiate the EU — or at least, British membership — ahead of the British referendum planned for 2017. But the Franco-German initiative is actually more about the risk of Grexit (a Greek exit from the euro area) than Brexit (a British one from the EU), and it might even help Cameron, if only indirectly.

It is true that Paris and Berlin have made their reservations about treaty change clear and they did so well before the leaked letter. The motivation behind this Franco-German initiative, though, is not about the U.K.. It is about the euro area, which still faces serious fragilities: in political, economic, social, and financial terms. This is as much a question of policy as it is of architecture. With regards to policy, the euro area struggles to get some of its most badly hit regions and countries back on track for economic growth, employment, and sustainable public finances. On questions of architecture, the governance mechanisms for economic and budgetary policy coordination are not nearly robust enough, and the overall governance set-up lacks democratic legitimacy. Moreover, there are good arguments to complete the Banking Union and to equip the monetary union with stronger tools to manage financial crises and a fiscal capacity.

All this has been known for a while, and yet the political process to improve the governance set-up of the euro area has stalled for almost two years. In summer 2013, when the European Central Bank announced its "we'll do what it takes" policy of buying potentially unlimited amounts of sovereign bonds (known as the Outright Monetary Transactions program), markets calmed down and policymakers relaxed. They no longer saw a pressing need to pursue the process of deepening the euro area further, which has already advanced so much that it touches upon sensitive questions of sovereignty, EU interference, financial solidarity, and risk sharing.

In 2015, two factors combined to bring renewed impetus to the debate on euro area deepening. The show-down with Greece on its debt payments and the non-negligible danger of a Grexit is one factor. The other is the new EU leadership with an entrepreneurial Commission president deeply familiar with all the core weaknesses of the currency union after spending eight years chairing the Eurogroup (the meeting of finance ministers of the euro area).

At the European Summit on June 24-25, 2015, a second report on euro area deepening by the four presidents of the European Commission, the euro area, the European Central Bank, and the European Council will be presented. The first one, "Towards a Genuine Economic and Monetary Union" contained far reaching suggestions for further integration in the field of financial, economic, and budgetary policy as well as proposals how to improve democracy and legitimacy. This time around, in particular following the Franco-German initiative, it is less likely that this report will simply be shelved like the previous one was two years ago. Although a big leap forward with a substantive transfer of competencies is unlikely, the eurozone will make moves to grow closer. The risk of a Grexit is accelerating these dynamics, firstly, because the conflict with Greece has pushed the others closer together and strengthened joint perceptions about governance deficiencies, and secondly, because euro area countries know they may have to restore credibility and strengthen the euro if it is to survive a Grexit.

Cameron can but watch this happening from the margins of the EU. It is now clear that there will be no big treaty revision and no intergovernmental conference that would simultaneously debate a deepening for the euro area while loosening the U.K.'s membership. Cameron's claims that he will renegotiate and change the EU are illusory.

While the new Franco-German initiative is not targeted at Cameron, it could politically suit him. If the political deepening of the euro area moves ahead, Cameron will be able to argue at home that the U.K. is much less integrated into the EU than the core countries are — currency-wise, institutionally, politically, and also in terms of risk sharing and financial solidarity. So while Cameron might not be able to reshape the EU according to British ideas, a Franco-German reshaping of the euro area could help him rebrand British EU membership by default.

QUOTE OF THE DAY

'You are an example of what's possible when, in the face of tragedy and hardship, good people come together' - President Obama speaking in New Orleans yesterday. This weekend is the 10th anniversary of Hurricane Katrina.

SKIMM THIS f t i

DESTINATION EUROPE

THE STORY

Yesterday, up to 70 migrants were found dead in the back of a truck in Austria.

WHAT HAPPENED?

The truck, sans driver, was found on the side of the road near the Hungarian border. Investigators are trying to figure out what happened, but illegal smuggling of migrants is common in the region where the truck was found.

WHAT'S THE BIGGER PICTURE?

Europe is facing a really big migrant crisis right now. Hundreds of thousands of people have made it into the EU this year, and many have died trying. They're coming from not-so-stable places (think: Syria and Iraq) and countries with struggling economies (think: Bangladesh and Serbia). And they're willing to do almost anything to get to Europe and find a job. That often means paying smugglers to help them get there. Some countries (like Hungary) have tried to install fences to keep them out, but others (like Greece) have resorted to keeping people in stadiums.

So far, the question of how Europe is going to deal with the migrant crisis is being answered with a resounding don't know.

REPEAT AFTER ME...

WHAT TO SAY WHEN YOUR MOM ASKS YOU TO MAKE PLANS THROUGH HER ASSISTANT...

How about I just talk to you? Yesterday, the National Labor Relations Board (NLRB) made a ruling that could mean major changes for the fast-food industry. Big companies like McDonald's and Burger King have always said that local franchises have the control when it comes to things like setting wages and working conditions. Which makes it really hard for unions to try to negotiate on behalf of US fast-food workers. But yesterday, the NLRB changed that. The board says parent companies are now responsible for employees even if they don't directly work with them. Translation: a union might soon be able to negotiate directly with McDonald's HQ on behalf of fast-food workers. For years, low-wage workers around the country have been protesting for a $15 minimum wage (aka $31,000 a year in a full-time job). This ruling could be a big leg up for them.

WHAT TO SAY WHEN YOUR CO-WORKER COMPLAINS THAT YOU'RE ENCROACHING ON HER DESK SPACE...

I completely disagree with you. That's what Google told the EU yesterday. Earlier this year, EU regulators slapped the company with major anti-trust charges. Europe says Google uses its no. 1 status in online search to undermine competitors in related businesses. Example: if you Google something, it might not rank Amazon shopping ads very high in its results. The EU says that's major monopoly behavior. Yesterday, Google officially responded for the first time. The company said 'wrong, wrong, wrong': the EU's charges are twisted, and oh by the way, it doesn't have the legal justification to make The Big G change its ways. This is one of the biggest anti-trust cases in years. If Google loses, it could have to pay billions in fines and change how it does business. And no matter what, it'll take a loooong time for this to be over.

Yesterday, the storm slammed into the small Caribbean island of Dominica, killing at least four people. It brought flooding and landslides, leaving most of the country without electricity or running water. Erika's expected to make a pit stop at islands including the Dominican Republic and Cuba before hitting Florida.

Subject: Sunday Show Q&A

Not sure exactly how we think this question will come, but here are some thoughts on how she could talk about her message and posture in New Hampshire:

What's your message in New Hampshire?

- I love campaigning in New Hampshire. The people of this state have been so good to me and my family over the years. As I've been telling folks here, New Hampshire's never quit on me and I'm not going to quit on them.
- This is Senator Sanders' backyard and he's doing very well here. But a lot of voters are still shopping. In New Hampshire, everyone takes a second look. Maybe even a third or fourth look. So I'm competing for every vote and making my case for why I'd be a better President.
- Senator Sanders and I share a lot of big, progressive goals for our country, but I'm the only one who's laid out plans that can actually achieve those goals and make a real difference in people's lives. I'm fighting for everyone who can't wait for ideas that only sound good on paper, and I'm not making promises I can't keep.
- I want to break down all the barriers holding Americans back from achieving their dreams. We have to make our economy work for everyone, not just those at the top. But we also have to take on other forms of inequality, like the cradle-to-prison pipeline that holds back so many communities of color, like women being denied equal pay, like the fact that in many places LGBT Americans can still be fired just because of who they are and who they love. We also have to deal with the quiet challenges that hold people and families back, like addiction and mental illness.
- I believe we have to break through all these barriers and make sure all our people have the opportunity to live up to their full potential. Because that's how we'll build a future we can all share and succeed in.

We wouldn't email you FOUR times in the last 24 hours if our need wasn't so urgent.

-- Boehner's Super PAC launched a MASSIVE ad blitz against Brad TODAY.

-- and now, another outside group has dumped $100,000.00 on Chicago T.V. to defeat Brad.

It's a potentially devastating combo of bad news: in fact, Republican spending in Illinois's 10th district just passed a staggering $6 MILLION.

But there's good news too: at 10:52 pm last night, we received a $25 donation to UNLOCK THE MATCH.

John, the fate of Brad's reelection is at stake. Please don't waste this opportunity.

Based on our conversation on Friday, we put together notional teams of "report writers" and "vetters" attached.

Let us know if you have any concerns on this list.

Marc – can we have campaign start vetting these folks? If you want, I can send this list to Karuna (unless there is someone else you prefer do this) and copy you. I won't tell her what it's for. Some of these folks should have already vetted by her/her team for other campaign activities.

Jim -- we should hold on reaching out until we finish vetting and get sign off on this list from HRC. John will discuss with her.

Thx

Subject: Boehner just announced

We're running out of time -- so we won't waste any:

Last night, we got word that Speaker Boehner's unleashing a $1.85 MILLION ad campaign against Brad.

Boehner knows if he can outspend us right now -- in the critical moments before the election -- the damage could be irreversible.

We just ran the numbers: we need 200 more donations in the next 24 hours to take on Boehner's attacks.

So John, if you were planning to chip in for Brad's progressive campaign, do it now, while there's still time to fight back.

John,

Sorry to bother you with this. I was with Mike McWherter, Governor Ned McWherter's son and the 2010 Democratic nominee for Governor, last Thursday evening and he would like to talk to whomever in the campaign has responsibility for Tennessee. I told him I would try to find out who that was. Mike lives in Jackson, TN, and is the President of Central Distributors, Inc. His email address is mrm@cdi-budweiser.com. His telephone number is (731) 423-3676.

The appropriate person can either contact Mike or if you want to give me his or her name and contact information, I will pass it on to Mike so that he can contact that person.

Hope you are doing well. Give my best to Mary.

Sepp, old buddy, great to be back on an email chain with you.

11:30am also works fine for us, arguably even better.

So window is 3/3, 10am-11:30am.

We have a 12:30pm lunch with a Senator.

Thanks!

Hey John!

So by Tuesday March 3rd you're a free-ish man?!

Could you possibly meet with the Tech CEO Council CEOs 10am that day at the Hay Adams.

Pretty please?

(Valerie has suggested a POTUS meeting is likely the afternoon before, but they'd like to visit with you separately, to look at bigger pictures and trends)

Penny,

Thanks so much for all your help. I've attached my resume and my cover letter to John Podesta.

Please let me know if you need anything else.

John:

Not really put together yet. Joel, et al are working on the research bullets —haven't gotten them yet.

Attached are the pre-HRC call arguments that we need to go over, add to, modify.

Below I've pasted the trump, bernie, joe arguments.

Below I've pasted the key message elements.

So this is not assembled or modified.... And needs to change. But take a look and give us feedback.

As you know, we're trying to keep this pretty simple, straightforward.

Opponent arguments:

THE CASE: Bernie Sanders should be president because he's the only candidate taking on the billionaire class that's rigging our economy and our democracy. He understands now is not the time for thinking small or tinkering with a broken system. The only way to reduce inequality, the great moral issue of our time, is a political revolution. No one else can or will lead that revolution other than Bernie.

THE CASE: Joe Biden should be president because no one else is as prepared to defend and build on the progress we've made in the past eight years. He has the INTEGRITY and experience to defeat the Republicans and keep growing our economy from the middle out, not the top down. We've come too far to stop now.

THE CASE: Donald Trump should be president because he's the only candidate who can make America great again. He's a terrific manager, can't be bought by the special interests, and isn't afraid to tell it like it is. Our country's a mess and we need a businessman, not a career politician, to turn it around.

Key Message elements:

1. Families: None of the other candidates focus on people and their lives. Bernie talks ideology. Biden and Trump talk about themselves. For HRC, this is all about making a real difference for people, for families. This is what has always been the work of her life and really resonant given her gender.
2. Fairness: The central frustration that people feel is that no matter how hard they work, they can't get ahead and stay ahead. The deck is stacked. We can't leave this populist critique to Bernie (and Biden). We're not going to rail against billionaires, but we still have to be clear that we understand people's frustrations with corporations and those at the top who write their own rules and block people's progress.
3. Future: Particularly if Biden gets into the race and we're running against two old guys, HRC should be the candidate that understands the new challenges facing families, offering solutions that work for them.
4. Fight. HRC's tenacity, her no-quit determination and her record of getting things done against tough odds are critical to people believing that she will actually deliver.

If there are objections, let us know, but we are not going to be able to have a conversation with each other until tomorrow afternoon. She did not seem concerned about getting the

More broadly, it would be great to get from the group any modifications, additions, suggestions based on the feedback today. If you can shoot your ideas our way tomorrow, that would be excellent.

Max-

Thanks for reaching out on Secretary Clinton, her comments with respect to the debate and her relationship with the financial sector services industry. From my perspective, these relationships have been formed over 2 decades from the Secretary's past roles as First Lady, NY Senator and Secretary of State and the real reason she is garnering so much support is she is incredibly smart and experienced on the 2 main key issues which will form much of the debate on deciding our next President: the economy (jobs, wages, income inequality) and foreign policy. For example, whether you agree with her or not on Too Big Too Fail concerns, she certainly has been the only one in either party to understand that AIG/Lehman and the entire shadow banking system are not bank holding companies and thus would not be impacted by going back to Glass Steagall. She has also been the only one to understand Dodd Frank and the resolution authority rules that came out of it and has been clear that if she needed to use the "living will" provision, she would. Thus, I do not think Wall Street is taking her comments lightly.

With respect to the 9/11 comments, there is no question that Wall Street and our local and state politicians came together and formed a relationship that we will always remember out of all having the same goal of rebuilding lower Manhattan and Wall Street back to being strong and vibrant. Whether it was Mayor Giuliani, Senators Schumer and Clinton and others, everyone put partisan political on the shelf for the better of our country. Even today, I have a soft spot for Mayor Giuliani even though I could not disagree with him more on his politics, so no, I am not surprised that many support Secretary Clinton from those days of working closely with her. Lastly, I should remind you that in 2008, many of the top contributors to President Obama's campaign came from financial services (maybe half of his top 10) and I am pretty sure that no one was saying that he was going to be soft on Wall Street or that they were agreeing with his hardened tone on regulation. So, maybe just maybe, the financial services industry contributes to a candidate based on many other things than his or her profession and may look many other issues as well like immigration, education or social issues and who is truly best to run our country ....I know I do.

Hope this helps,

Mr. Wolf: Here's an important little note for you on this crisp Sunday. I'm sure you saw the intense moment last night when Sec. Clinton explained her relationship to financial donors by reminding the debate audience that she represented NY after 9/11.

It's a good moment to pause and explain why some financial industry folks appreciate her. Is it because of her New York ties? Is it her financial proposals? A longtime mutual respect? Or a combination? I'd love to get on the phone (my cell's 914 645 4094) or have you send one or two sentences in the next few hours.

We're putting together a piece for Monday morning that will be really special. Thanks and best, sir,

Subject: CGI Monthly Tracking Report for April 2013

Members of the CGI Board of Advisors, Tina (for President Clinton) and Huma (for Secretary Clinton), Attached is the monthly tracking report for April for membership and sponsorship for the Annual Meeting, CGI America and CGI U. We will begin reporting progress for CGI Latin America next month. Results reflect activity through April 30th.

Annual Meeting

- Sponsorship:
  - Rockefeller Foundation renewed and increased its sponsorship from $350K to $1 million.
  - NRG renewed its sponsorship at $375K.
  - Ford Foundation renewed its sponsorship at $400K.
  - HP has agreed to provide at least $100K cash in sponsorship support (in addition to in-kind technology support). HP has been a sponsor for many years, but did not provide cash in 2012 due to financial challenges at the company.
- Membership: The overall positive trend continued during the month, with paid memberships at 294, an increase of 51 over last year at this time. New memberships are 22 ahead of 2012, while renewals are ahead by 29.

CGI America

- Sponsorship: Sponsorship stands at $2.3mm versus a final sponsorship level of $2.1mm for 2012. We have a few serious prospects still in the pipeline and hope to improve sponsorship further over the next month.
- Paid Attendance: Total paid attendees stands at 239, versus 140 at this time last year.

CGI U

- The final sponsorship amount is $1.635 million versus $945k for the event last year.

Please let me know if you have any questions.

Best,

Bob

Just talked to Jennifer Duck—about our favorite son. He's meeting with OSC today, which is good and a step in the right direction, but nothing yet public. Jennifer said she'd heard—but second/third hand (and not from son) that IC IG was handing out anti-HRC clips to journalists. Have we gotten any inkling of that happening? I certainly haven't, and it seems weird.

Subject: Announcing the 2014 O'Neill Institute Colloquium - Wednesdays 1:20-3:20pm (Hotung 2001)

Dear Colleagues,

Last week's first O'Neill Institute Colloquium on Ebola was wonderful and moving, with thanks to Bill for kicking us off. It showed the best of our university— both in scholarship and service. Please see below a schedule of events this semester, all taking place on Wednesdays at 1:20-3:20pm in Hotung 2001 (Faculty Dining Room). You are all most welcome to attend any and all of the sessions. Tomorrow's session is on the national and global response to HIV/AIDS with Chris Beyrer (President of the International AIDS Society), Gregorio Millett (amfAR), and the O'Neill Institute's own Jeff Crowley (former White House chief on AIDS).

Looking forward to seeing you at the colloquium.

With warm wishes, Larry

Announcing the 2014 O'Neill Institute Colloquium

The purpose of the Colloquium is to engage leading experts, Georgetown Law students and faculty, and interested members of the public in an enriching dialogue surrounding current and pressing issues in global health law, policy and governance.

This year, the Colloquium will have the following ongoing themes:

- What are the big ideas that will drive national and/or global health in the next decade and shape of the future?
- What will be the major challenges, what are likely to be the big new ideas guiding actions and pushing us towards new solutions?
- We are bringing into the conversation senior thought leaders from government, NGOs, private sector, international organizations.

The O'Neill Institute Colloquium is scheduled for Wednesdays at 1:20-3:20pm in Hotung 2001 (Faculty Dining Room).

Scheduled Speakers

September 10: Focusing on Men who Have Sex with Men (MSM) and Key Populations in the National and Global Response to HIV/AIDS

Subject: Washington Post Endorsement

Dear John & Mary,

Did you see Joseline's tremendous news! Yesterday, we received our biggest endorsement yet—The Washington Post.

We had an incredible Weekend of Action capped off with an incredible endorsement.

Our office is buzzing with excitement.

When I joined this campaign to elect Joseline to Congress, I knew we would have a fight on our hands, but your passion and energy is making the real difference in this race. But as Joseline said yesterday, we can't quit now. With six weeks left we have the momentum. Can we count on you to power this campaign forward?

With only a few weeks away from Election Day, we are mounting a powerful grassroots effort to reach the voters of Maryland's 4th District. Please help again by making a contribution today.

Sincerely,

Mollie Binotto

FOR U.S. CONGRESS

Dear John & Mary,

I have amazing news and it's all because of you!

Thank you for standing with me since the beginning. All along we have been making things happen. We have turned this scrappy effort into a highly-competitive, grassroots-powered campaign. Today we were rewarded with our biggest endorsement yet—The Washington Post.

In their endorsement, the Washington Post calls me "...a doer with a knack for making things happen." But without your support and tireless effort, I could not have made this campaign happen.

The Post's endorsement solidifies what we have known from the beginning; that the people of Maryland's 4th Congressional District need a worker, a champion and the toughest fighter. I will never quit on the people of Prince George's and Anne Arundel Counties and I will never quit on you.

Today's endorsement is the beginning of the last leg of this race. With six weeks to go, we cannot rest now. We are still up against some of the toughest competition in the State of Maryland, only together will we be able to compete to the end.

Will you make a donation of $10, $25, $50 today to keep the momentum going? If you've saved your payment information with ActBlue Express, your donation will go through immediately:

John,

I hope you will join us for our next PAL Luncheon with Fox News' Maria Bartiromo.

Maria Bartiromo joined FOX

Business Network as Global Markets Editor in January 2014. She is the anchor of Opening Bell with Maria Bartiromo <http://www.foxbusiness.com/on-air/opening-bell/index.html> and hosts Sunday Morning Futures with Maria Bartiromo (10-11 AM/ET) on FOX News Channel.

Ms. Bartiromo has covered business and the economy for more than 25 years and was one of the building blocks of business cable network CNBC. She launched the network's morning program, Squawk Box; anchored The Closing Bell with Maria Bartiromo; and was the anchor and managing editor of the nationally syndicated On the Money with Maria Bartiromo, formerly The Wall Street Journal Report with Maria Bartiromo.

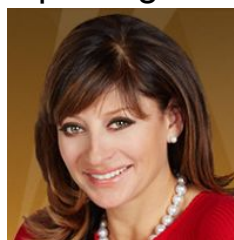

Maria Bartiromo has been a pioneer in her industry. In 1995, she became the first journalist to report live from the floor of the New York Stock Exchange on a daily basis. She joined CNBC in 1993 after five years as a producer, writer and assignment editor with CNN Business News, where she wrote and produced some of CNN's top business programs.

Ms. Bartiromo is a member of the Board of Trustees of New York University; Board of Directors of the New York City Ballet; the Girl Scout Council of Greater New York; as well as PENCIL, Public Education Needs Civic Involvement and Leadership. She is a member of The Council on Foreign Relations, The Economic Club of New York, and the Board of Governors of the Columbus Citizens Foundation.

Subject: HELP ... Neck-and-Neck!

Dear John,

A just-released DailyKos/Research 2000 poll has the race:

Sestak 45% - Specter 43%, with 12% undecided.

We are in a "neck-and-neck" race, and are in a tough, closing fight to win this -- but we need your help NOW more than ever.

We just began broadcasting our new ad called "The Scorecard":

This ad will show the remaining 12% of undecided voters who the true Democrat is.

To win, we need to broadcast this new ad -- these last 4 days -- across Pennsylvania in critical mass rotation. Please make a contribution ... to get our ad in critical mass rotation!

It's time to elect the best Democratic candidate; it's time for a new generation of leadership ... it's time for Pennsylvania's future.

Together ... let's make this happen ... we need your help NOW more than ever to win this race!

Warmly,

10/18/2016

Joe

Dear Friends,

As the Washington Director for Common Sense Media, I have had the privilege to be part of their advocacy and research efforts for almost nine (9) years. Now that Common Sense has evolved into one of the largest non-profits in the country focused on the well-being of children, our next big step is into the funding of research and understanding of media and its impact on the health of our nation's kids. As such, I am thrilled to announce some research which John and I have helped support and which was recently completed by Vicky Rideout. The study focuses on the use of media by Tweens and Teens (e.g. differences in technology use between girls and boys, the means by which technology is differently utilized according to social and economic factors.) The findings of this seminal research is being launched at an event on the morning of November 4th at the Kaiser Conference Center 1330 G Street , NW Washington DC. There will also be an accompanying panel discussion with CSM Founder Jim Steyer, Northwestern Professor Ellen Wartella, an FCC Commissioner, Mike McCurry, and Gary Knell, CEO of national Geographic. A copy of the invitation to this event is attached, and I would love it if you are able to attend this launch if it fits into your morning schedule.

In addition, if you are unable to attend the launch, John and I are hosting at our Capitol Hill home a cocktail reception the night prior to the launch. The reception will be on November 3rd at our home at 628 East Capitol Street, NE from 6 30 to 8 00 pm. In attendance will be the panelists, staff of Common Sense Media from San Francisco, our Washington Advisory Council and various thought leaders in the area of kids, education and media. For those on the Washington Advisory Council, this reception will be in lieu of our fall meeting. I would really love it if you could especially stop by this event at the house and pick up some materials related to this study and also to meet again our CSM team. I have attached both invitations with all the key details, and I thank you again for your continued friendship and support.

If you should desire further information, please do not hesitate to contact my assistant, Carey Snyder. She can be reached at carey@delaneyoffice.com or by telephone at 203-561-6731.

Warmly,

April

R+W Works PR in Afghanistan Election Mess

By Kevin McCauley

<image001.jpg>Roberti+White inked a $100K-per-month, one-year agreement effective June 25 to provide PR support here for the Transformation and Continuity political group that supports Afghanistan presidential candidate Ashraf Ghani Ahmadzai.

Preliminary results show Ghani leading rival Abdullah Abdullah by a million votes, but the tally is clouded by reports of massive voter fraud.

President Obama called both men this week, urging them not to declare victory until fraud allegations are fully investigated. He threatened to cut off US aid if supporters of either man to seize power use "violent or extra-constitutional" methods.

The Wall Street Journal today ran "Afghan Crisis Risks Splitting Country" as its lede, reporting that Abdullah will soon decide whether to form his own government despite US threats. "We will not allow a fraudulent government for a day," he told a large rally in Kabul.

R+W's contract covers PR, political consulting, issue formulation and media counsel.

Its contract may continue beyond June 2015 expiration date on a month-to-month basis. The pact may also be terminated any time after 30 days notice.

A top Democratic strategist Vin Roberti, who has counseled powerful politicians such as New York Senator Chuck Schumer and Congressman Steve Israel, who heads the party's Congressional campaign efforts, chairs R+W.

John: As always, great food and a wonderful evening.

To reiterate, we're IN.

If you really think a fundraiser here is worthwhile, we can give it some thought.

Our sense is that the effort and time might better be invested elsewhere.

Do let us know what we can do to help - and when you think the time is right.

A special treat to meet Tony & Kate - and Ben, for the first time.

If any of you are ever anywhere near Huntsville, do give us the pleasure.

Why We Can't Wait

We have walked this earth now for many a mile and many a year, and there are times when it seems like every step of the way, we have been told to wait.

In various times and places, on the path from Selma to Montgomery with Martin Luther King Jr., to the struggle in South Carolina, even the sincerest of people often greeted our cries for civil rights with a plea for patience.

"You're right," they'd say, "but the timing isn't. Couldn't you wait just a bit?"

We walked in Dr. King's footsteps after his assassination, assuming leadership in the Civil Rights Movement and marching for an end to the war in Vietnam. And politicians told us, "We know this war is a disaster, but the political climate isn't right for ending it. You'll have to wait."

Today, we are proud to march alongside one of the most inspiring leaders our country has seen in a generation. His name is Barack Obama, and he holds out the promise of a new politics steeped in possibility. And once more, we're hearing that tired old refrain.

"Yes," the skeptics say of Barack, "he surely is an extraordinary leader. And yes, he most certainly was right to oppose the war in Iraq back when other politicians were backing it blindly. And, why, of course he's right about all those aching and unmet needs here at home. But he hasn't spent enough time in Washington, D.C. Why doesn't he wait?"

Well, in most respects, we have grown more patient with age. But this time around, we hope you won't begrudge our sense of urgency when we tell you:

We do not have time to wait.

We do not have time -- and too many young lives are at risk -- to wait for sanity to prevail and this disastrous war in Iraq to end. Only Barack Obama had the foresight and fortitude to oppose it from the very beginning. And only Barack has shown backbone sufficient to detail a specific plan to bring every last one of our troops home within a year.

We do not have time -- and too many of our neighbors are hungry and ill -- to wait for someone to deal with America's twin crises of poverty and health care. These are national shames in a nation of abundance and plenty, and Barack will tackle them with the urgency they demand.

We do not have time to wait for bold leadership on global warming, on education and opportunity here at home, on genocide in Darfur and AIDS in Africa, on the many issues our politics seem too small to confront. We do not have time to wait for a politics enlivened by possibility, a politics broad and deep enough to accommodate both our needs and our dreams.

We do not have time to wait for a different face of American leadership, here at home and across the globe. We don't have time to wait for that day when little brown boys and girls look up and see the President of the United States, and notice someone that looks like them. And we do not have time to wait to see how that moment will fundamentally alter not just our politics, but our very minds.

We do not have time, in short, to wait for Barack Obama to be President of the United States.

Our moment is now.

Now, we hope you won't misunderstand. We may have walked many a mile and many a year, but these legs of ours are willing to walk many miles farther -- as many as it takes to see our country's promise of hope made real.

We just need America to walk with us. Just as young and old, Black and White, Christian and Hindu and Muslim and Jew, joined together to break the bonds of Jim Crow, we need you to join us now and break free from old and stale politics and usher in a new era in our country, and our world.

We wouldn't ask you to do this just for a few men who do not have time to wait. We are asking you to stand with Barack for a country that's facing too many challenges -- and too many opportunities -- to wait for the bold and hopeful leadership Barack Obama offers.

We cannot wait. We must not wait. Our moment is now.

Sen. Barack Obama speaks to over 30,000 people in Columbia, South Carolina during his campaign rally with Oprah Winfrey.

Oprah can't help Barack Obama nail Hillary Clinton in Iowa, New Hampshire, or even South Carolina. The throng of Oprah groupies that pitched camp in front of the Obama campaign headquarters in Columbia, South Carolina to get free tickets to her and Obama's appearance at the Colonial Center in that city were there to ogle, and if they are lucky, touch the garments of America's favorite TV earth mother at the auditorium.

But after ogling and touching Oprah, it doesn't mean they'll vote for Obama. A Pew Research Center poll after a big Oprah fundraising bash in September found that by a crushing margin respondents said that Oprah's tout of Obama won't sway them the least bit. And it shouldn't, at least not because, Oprah says so. Despite all the talk about Oprah being a transcendental force that supersedes mere celebrity mortals she's still just that, a celebrity. The thousands that clawed for tickets to rub shoulders with her at her Obama pep rally in Columbia, South Carolina were there precisely because of her star power and the insatiable celebrity mania that grips far too many star struck Americans.

Yet, celebrities fail miserably every time to do much for their political picks. Willie Nelson, Madonna, Jon Bon Jovi, Martin Sheen, and in reverse, George Clooney are big money celebrities and virtual household names.

Kucinich. Bon Jovi endorsed John Kerry. Sheen endorsed Howard Dean. Madonna backed Wesley Clark. One of their picks went down to flaming defeat. The other three never came close to getting the Democratic presidential nomination.

As for Clooney, he publicly declared that he hoped that his non-endorsement of Kerry probably helped him at the polls. It didn't. Though Clooney now backs Obama he's still very mindful of the potential liability of celebrity hood and has publicly said that he thinks campaigning for a candidate hurts a candidate. Clooney recognized a political truism that's etched in stone. That's that a celebrity pump of a presidential candidate does little to boost the candidate.

The one group that Obama hopes is the rare exception to the rule is black women. He banks heavily that Oprah can help him smash through the Hillary fest that many black women have with Clinton. In South Carolina, black voters make up nearly half of the Democratic voters, a greater proportion than any other state, and black women make up a significant proportion of that vote. Though most adore Oprah and are well aware of her long standing backing of Obama, that hasn't shaken their support of Clinton the least bit. Nearly three times more black women say they'll back Hillary over him, and that's especially true among lower income working class

That's also not to say that Oprah's endorsement will hurt Obama. The hype, promotion, and allure of Oprah have some value in bumping even higher Obama's media visibility.

The "O" and "O" show has caused the tongues to wag, eyebrows to rise and they will draw legions to their campaign stops. But it won't be the knock out wallop Obama counts on to floor Hillary. Celebrities simply don't and shouldn't pack that kind of political punch. And neither does Oprah.

That's not to say that endorsements don't help a candidate. But they have to be the right endorsements. The right ones come from seasoned politicians and respected industry, labor, or public interest groups that have the trust and confidence of voters, and a solid track record in fighting for legis-regarded by many black women as a strong advocate for health care and women's interests. Selling Obama is not like selling one of Oprah's handpicked authors that the mere mention of on her show will send their book hurtling to the top of the charts. Voters make their decisions about politicians on a combination of factors, party affiliation, their stance on the issues, their political beliefs, and their experience at getting the job done. Few will rely on Oprah's word that Obama is the best to handle global warming, tax policy, the Iraq war, terrorism, job creation and inflation, failing public schools, criminal justice issues and judicial appointments.

A candidate, and only the candidate, has to sell his or herself that they have a sound grasp of the issues, and can forcefully and Democratic presidential hopeful Hillary Clinton's campaign launched an aggressive effort to mobilize black voters through the faith community - crisscrossing two segments vital to winning her party's nomination in this state - during her first visit to Spartanburg as a candidate Tuesday. About 60 pastors from around the Upstate joined her on stage at the Marriott at Renaissance Park - all but two of them were black - and her campaign said another 20 or so were in the audience. The crowd, more than 400 strong, was about two-thirds white.

30,000 people, including Oprah Winfrey, attend Barack Obama for President rally at Williams-Brice Stadium

By Patricia Abraham
COLUMBIA

The weather on Sunday was delightful. It just had to be. Oprah was coming to town.

Nearly 30,000 poured into USC's Williams-Brice Stadium to see television talk show host and self-made billionaire Oprah Winfrey host a presidential campaign rally for Senator Barack Obama. Oprah drew them in, but it was the Obama show once he took the stage.

By the time the rally started, many in the crowd had been waiting for several hours. The crowd was entertained by local musicians, such as Daniel Davis, an 18-year-old "hip hop" violinist from Charleston, marching bands from Manning and Timberland High schools. To further pump up the crowd, up-and-coming pop rock-band "The Working Title" performed before yielding the stage to "Arrested Development", who gave a rousing rendition of their hit song "Everyday People."

Then it was time to get down to business. Michelle Obama, introduced as "First Lady to Be" Michelle Obama, took the stage. She was just as lively and energetic as the entertainers. The crowd cheered and showered her with their love. She thanked crowd for coming and also thanked Oprah for her support. And she stated the theme of the campaign: It's time for a change. "We can't do Presidential candidate Barack Obama addresses the crowd while wife Michelle and Oprah Winfrey look on. Nearly 30,000 people attended the rally.

Barack and Michelle Obama break out into a dance near the end of the rally.

Oprah Winfrey tells the crowd that for the first time, she is "stepping out of her pew" and getting involved in a political campaign because she believes in Barack Obama.

it by ourselves," she said. "We need your support."

Michelle Obama then introduced Oprah Winfrey as the "First Lady of Television." Everyone was on their feet.

"I'm stepping out my pew," Oprah said, adding that she felt like this was something she had to do. "This is the time."

Oprah went on to say that she has been inspired by a new vision, like Dr. King dreamed a dream. "But we don't have to dream the dream any more. We can vote that dream into reality. We can make the difference, but we must be together. Because he (Obama) can't do it by himself."

"This is not a book club meeting," she continued, "this is a monumental event. We've got to step out of the box. And yes, you may have to do some things you've never done before. But if you do the same thing you've always done you'll get the same thing..." And the crowd yelled "You've always got."

Oprah revealed why she rarely has politicians on her show. "First of all, because the show is only an hour long," she said as the crowd chuckled. They (politicians) can be eloquent as they tongue dip in the truth."

All throughout her speech she expressed her love for Michelle and Barack. She said that she supports Barack because he stood with clarity and conviction on his stance against the war. "He's an evolved leader that can bring an evolved leadership," she said.

Oprah then introduced Obama as The Next President to Be. By the roar of the crowd, you would have thought that Barack was already president. As he entered the stadium he took time to shake the hands of the everyday people from the crowd.

Barack praised the size of the crowd, saying that it was his largest crowd to date. He went on to say he was not just happy about the size of the crowd but also happy about the crowd's make up. There were whites, blacks, yellows and browns -- all colors and religions of people coming together for a common good.

He then laid out his reasons for wanting to be President of the United States. "In America that people are working for less, and that it's harder to save and even harder to retire," Barack said. "And it feels as if our leaders can't do anything about it. It's no wonder people are cynical about politics. We are at a defining moment in our history."

Barack said that we can't run the same type of campaign and live in fear of losing or being too timid. He said The Democratic Party now needs to stand for something. He then outlined some of the things he wants to accomplish if he is elected president:

- Taking the tax break from the corporations that are putting our jobs overseas and give the tax break to the working poor that are right here.

- Making sure that the American people have health insurance plans just as good as a member of Congress -- not a couple years down the road but during his first year in office.

- Get our troops out of Iraq within 16 months and focus on the fight in Afghanistan.

- Investing some of that billions of dollars from Iraq right here in SC.

- Instituting a justice system that is colorblind so that we won't have any more Jena 6's

O'rama reminded everyone that the reason that he has the opportunity to run as president is because somebody stood up when they weren't suppose to.

"Now is the time for change, but I can't do it myself," Barack said. "I'll need your support."

Judging from the crowd's reaction, he got it. As they took up a chant of "Fired up! Ready to go!" He reminded them that they can make a difference with their votes on January 26, 2008.

And with the love and adoration of the crowd, Barack, Michelle and Oprah exited the stage. And South Carolina politics will never be the same.

Barack Obama brings the crowd, as well as wife Michelle Obama and Oprah Winfrey, to their feet.

John,

Today marks the start of a very exciting weekend we call Get Out The Caucus weekend. This is when our field staff and our volunteers work all day to knock on doors and make calls to mobilize those caucusing for Governor O'Malley.

We have volunteers from all over the country, from California to North Carolina, all taking time off from work and school to help us have a great caucus night.

Here is what I need from you: help us have a successful GOTC weekend by donating \$10 right now.

Your $10 will help us get our volunteers out across the state. A $20 donation will help get a gas card so a volunteer can knock on 150 more doors. A $30 donation will help buy pizza for the volunteers at tonight's phone bank.

With matching funds, your donation may be doubled for our campaign. This means your $10 donation will be worth $20 for Iowa.

Will you chip in to help Team Iowa #HoldStrong this weekend?

Thanks,
Jake

Subject: some more details on Friday and upcoming meetings

On Friday, we're planning to meet from 9:30 a.m. until 2 p.m. (with some possible time modifications on the start or end time to accommodate schedules). As for the agenda of the meeting, I'll circulate something in the next few days, but some of the topics we'd like to cover are:

- Quick updates from the working groups, with an emphasis on what needs to happen the first two weeks after Election Day (meetings, decisions, events, opportunities)
- Discussion about the organizational structure of the transition and how the transition planning work product will be handed off to the incoming administration
- Initial discussion of the communications plan
- Discussion of logistics and operations decisions (budget and facilities)

As for future meetings/calls, here's what we're thinking about:

Friday, Oct. 17 – Conference call – probably around an hour or so

Friday, Oct. 24 – Meeting in D.C. – 9 a.m. to 2 p.m. (again with some possible time modifications)

Friday, Oct. 31 – Conference call – probably around three hours or so.

Subject: HRC Clean Energy and Environmental Team / Group / Supporters

Hi John, Great to see you last week at Mike Driver's house. We have been moving forward with assembling a group of supporters as discussed at Mike's house. As a matter of fact, when I told Mike what about it – he said he will engage and help form this group as well. This group has been very successful in impacting elections, writing op-eds, doing events, raising money and acting as eyes and ears on the ground around the country to address issues in advance –and had rapid response prepared as well. The team also provided high level surrogates as well - in the Environment & Energy Universe.

I'm sure Mike will talk a little about it when he sees you tomorrow. I wish I could be in NYC for gathering. It was my plan until things went haywire - roller coaster issues with mother's health and my schedule blew up. The Obama E&E team became quite sophisticated. Heather Z. was engaged, Cathy Carson, many others you know. Ed Markey and Carol Browner did events – they're just a few names that come up. We had all the big green groups. Tom Steyer helped too - with Ken Berlin. Surely this group will be different – a mix of old and new. We're pretty excited and ready to start!

Dear Mr. Podesta,

John West here, the gentleman and his husband who had the honor to drive you to O'hare after the Chicago finance committee meeting.

Wanted to thank you for the picture and conversation regarding some of our grass roots efforts by many long time Hillary Supporters - many who were 2008 delegate that have been corralled into one very organized Facebook Group and contact list by Kim Frederick, from Houston, Texas.

Kim Frederick also had wonderful ideas for the QR code and for assigning merchandise I.D's to lower dollar fund raisers to encourage folks to take part in promoting sales which I shared at the meeting and in the packet I shared with you. She's a Hill Starter and has raised $11,000 to date and has a local Houston fundraiser this evening as well as been a big help in assisting the Texas Field Organizer on identifying key strategically located folks for helping with setting up organizing events throughout the massive state of Texas. Beyond Texas, she has been key in getting the top volunteers in contact with field organizers throughout the country and providing a forum for both field organizers and super volunteers to coordinate and exchange information efficiently.

I have an urgent request I was wondering if you could help with. Kim Frederick will be in NY for work from tomorrow night through Sunday and being a leader and organizer of 50 states worth of very capable, motivated and experienced grass roots organizers - I was hoping she could get an invite for one of the events in New York as well as an audience with someone to discuss how best to utilize this amazing resource of folks she has assembled and keeps organized and engaged. It appears Adam will be travelling at that time - and they will be missing one another unfortunately. Kim has even organized a 50 person super volunteer get together at 6 p.m Friday evening at O'Reilly's Bar and Kitchen while she is in town. I can attest to Kim's long time dedication and hard work already. She was a state level delegate in 2007 and is involved heavily in organizing in Texas for the Democratic Party. It would be really helpful to the grass roots effort and really energize folks to see one of their own have some audience and a photo op. IT's also her birthday so I can't help but feel compelled to at least send a hail Mary email. Anything would help to make sure there isn't a wasted opportunity with her business trip to New York (at someone else's expense!)

Can we use any real examples of the problem (maybe Bush era)?

Can we emphasize some of the environmental examples -- which might be more credible than Wall Street? People from oil industry, coal etc?

Is it possible to use more colloquial "foxes guarding the hen house" kind of language ?

My two cents: I don't think the average voter will be sensitive to alienating people who go in and out of government. My concern from a primary perspective is appearing to protect the status quo, which I think people will believe (with a bit of prompting from Warren and others) is corrupted.

Looks good. Two comments:

10/18/2016

1) in next to last graph how about 'not worrying about former or future bosses at expense of American public' rather than 'not enriching themselves at ....'? I think better as it is more accurately captures what can happen and lowers tone.

2) maybe in reference to Elijah Cummings in 2nd half where it says 'work with Tammy' on passage of bill.

Dear Mr Podesta,

My name is Stelios Georgoulas. I am very honoured to be writing this letter to you, with which I would like to express my passion and desire to support you as a volunteer in your role as Chairman of Secretary Clinton's campaign.

I am a 36-year-old Ophthalmologist with a PhD from University College London and a Masters of Science in Management, Organisations and Governance (with Distinction) from the London School of Economics. During my medical studies, I did internships at the Memorial Sloan Kettering Cancer Centre in New York and the University of Pennsylvania. I also served as President of the Scientific Association of Hellenic Medical Students, which is one of the largest non-governmental organisations in Europe. This is where my deep interest in politics and interest in shaping my environment arose. During this period, my team and I achieved significant milestones for the medical community and Greece in general. Over the last ten years, I have been working in London as an eye surgeon, having been accepted into one of the most competitive ophthalmology training programmes in the world. Alongside medicine, I am involved in non-profit medical work in Greece and the UK for underprivileged people and young doctors.

With this letter I express my humble request and strong passion to be part of your personal team for Secretary Clinton's Presidential Campaign. I believe that by being close to you, I will learn skills that are not just important to my career but to my life. Being part of your team will allow me the unique opportunity to watch you in action, to observe your thought and decision-making processes, and how you lead and inspire others.

For many years, I have been following, with great interest, your work as Founder and Chairman of the Centre of the American Progress and with the Obama Presidency. Your ethos, evidenced in your work, for example, in promoting the global and American environmental agenda, makes me hopeful for the future when power and influence is given to the right people. It inspires me immensely that you, coming from an immigrant background, and with whom I share Greek roots, have left such a significant global footprint while still maintaining your integrity and abiding by your principles.

Likewise, I wish to make my imprint in Greece, by giving hope and a better future to my people. Greece now faces insurmountable problems. My desire is to contribute into the transformation of Greece into a more innovative and less bureaucratic society, with effective mechanisms that will enable creativity and entrepreneurship to flourish. This should ultimately translate into increased employment, which Greece sorely needs to curb the groundswell of emigration and the 'brain drain' it is currently suffering from. This should also ultimately stimulate improved education and healthcare and equality of access, to better meet the needs of the nation. In the medical field, solving my patient's problems has given me great satisfaction. However, doing this for my country is my lifelong passion.

I trust that I can contribute significantly to your work. I am a passionate individual, and am willing to work very hard both individually and as part of a team to support you. In addition to my mixed medical and management background, combined with the analytical and problem solving skills, I possess deep insight into European politics, which will be important to you since the ISIS, immigration and financial crises are currently key topics in the presidential debate. I also have significant work experience with an advanced public healthcare system, the UK National Healthcare System, which displays commonalities with your new, improved and more democratic US Healthcare system.

In conclusion, it has taken many years of hard work for me to get to this position of writing this letter to you. I am willing to travel to Washington to discuss this in person with you. As I have seen from your life and the lives of many American Presidents, all things are possible so long as we are willing to strive hard for them.

I am attaching my CV and I very much look forward to hearing from you.

Kindest regards,
Stylianos Georgoulas MBBS, MSc, PhD, FEBO

Note: Sources include Western intelligence, US intelligence and sources in the region.

1. With all of its tragic aspects, the advance of ISIL through Iraq gives the U.S. Government an opportunity to change the way it deals with the chaotic security situation in North Africa and the Middle East. The most important factor in this matter is to make use of intelligence resources and Special Operations troops in an aggressive manner, while avoiding the old school solution, which calls for more traditional military operations. In Iraq it is important that we engage ISIL using the resources of the Peshmerga fighters of the Kurdish Regional Government (KRG), and what, if any, reliable units exist in the Iraqi Army. The Peshmerga commanders are aggressive hard fighting troops, who have long standing relationships with CIA officers and Special Forces operators. However, they will need the continued commitment of U.S. personnel to work with them as advisors and strategic planners, the new generation of Peshmerga commanders being largely untested in traditional combat. That said, with this U.S. aid the Kurdish troops can inflict a real defeat on ISIL.

2. It is important that once we engage ISIL, as we have now done in a limited manner, we and our allies should carry on until they are driven back suffering a tangible defeat. Anything short of this will be seen by other fighters in the region, Libya, Lebanon, and even Jordan, as an American defeat. However, if we provide advisors and planners, as well as increased close air support for the Peshmerga, these soldiers can defeat ISIL. They will give the new Iraqi Government a chance to organize itself, and restructure the Sunni resistance in Syria, moving the center of power toward moderate forces like the Free Syrian Army (FSA). In addition to air support, the Peshmerga also need artillery and armored vehicles to deal with the tanks and other heavy equipment captured from the Iraqi army by ISIL.

3. In the past the USG, in an agreement with the Turkish General Staff, did not provide such heavy weapons to the Peshmerga, out of a concern that they would end up in the hands of Kurdish rebels inside of Turkey. The current situation in Iraq, not to mention the political environment in Turkey, makes this policy obsolete. Also this equipment can now be airlifted directly into the KRG zone.

4. Armed with proper equipment, and working with U.S. advisors, the Peshmerga can attack the ISIL with a coordinated assault supported from the air. This effort will come as a surprise to the ISIL, whose leaders believe we will always stop with targeted bombing, and weaken them both in Iraq and inside of Syria. At the same time we should return to plans to provide the FSA, or some group of moderate forces, with equipment that will allow them to deal with a weakened ISIL, and stepped up operations against the Syrian regime. This entire effort should be done with a low profile, avoiding the massive traditional military operations that are at best temporary solutions. While this military/para-military operation is moving forward, we need to use our diplomatic and more traditional intelligence assets to bring pressure on the governments of Qatar and Saudi Arabia, which are providing clandestine financial and logistic support to ISIL and other radical Sunni groups in the region. This effort will be enhanced by the stepped up commitment in the KRG. The Qataris and Saudis will be put in a position of balancing policy between their ongoing competition to dominate the Sunni world and the consequences of serious U.S. pressure. By the same token, the threat of similar, realistic U.S. operations will serve to assist moderate forces in Libya, Lebanon, and even Jordan, where insurgents are increasingly fascinated by the ISIL success in Iraq.

6. In the end the situation in Iraq is merely the latest and most dangerous example of the regional restructuring that is taking place across North Africa, all the way to the Turkish border. These developments are important to the U.S. for reasons that often differ from country to country: energy and moral commitment to Iraq, energy issues in Libya, and strategic commitments in Jordan. At the same time, as Turkey moves toward a new, more serious Islamic reality, it will be important for them to realize that we are willing to take serious actions, which can be sustained to protect our national interests. This course of action offers the potential for success, as opposed to large scale, traditional military campaigns, that are too expensive and awkward to maintain over time.

7. (Note: A source in Tripoli stated in confidence that when the U.S. Embassy was evacuated, the presence of two U.S. Navy jet fighters over the city brought all fighting to a halt for several hours, as Islamist forces were not certain that these aircraft would not also provide close ground support for moderate government forces.)

8. If we do not take the changes needed to make our security policy in the region more realistic, there is a real danger of ISIL veterans moving on to other countries to facilitate operations by Islamist forces. This is already happening in Libya and Egypt, where fighters are returning from Syria to work with local forces. ISIL is only the latest and most violent example of this process. If we don't act to defeat them in Iraq something even more violent and dangerous will develop. Successful military operations against these very irregular but determined forces can only be accomplished by making proper use of clandestine/special operations resources, in coordination with airpower, and established local allies. There is, unfortunately, a narrow window of opportunity on this issue, as we need to act before an ISIL state becomes better organized and reaches into Lebanon and Jordan.

9. (Note: It is important to keep in mind that as a result of this policy there probably will be concern in the Sunni regions of Iraq and the Central Government regarding the possible expansion of KRG controlled territory. With advisors in the Peshmerga command we can reassure the concerned parties that, in return for increase autonomy, the KRG will not exclude the Iraqi Government from participation in the management of the oil fields around Kirkuk, and the Mosel Dam hydroelectric facility. At the same time we will be able to work with the Peshmerga as they pursue ISIL into disputed areas of Eastern Syria, coordinating with FSA troops who can move against ISIL from the North. This will make certain Basher al Assad does not gain an advantage from these operations. Finally, as it now appears the U.S. is considering a plan to offer contractors as advisors to the Iraqi Ministry of Defense, we will be in a position to coordinate more effectively between the Peshmerga and the Iraqi Army.)

Friend,

When a generous supporter agreed to match every grassroots donation to the Quinn campaign, we had no idea the response would be this huge.

The donations that have poured in over the past few days are giving this campaign a huge boost, right when we need it most.

There's still time to take advantage of this moment. Chip in before midnight and your donation will be doubled:

Subject: Follow Up - Univision/Fusion

Hola John, hope all is well.

As we had discussed when we had breakfast with Isaac in NY, we've been thinking about ideas for Univision/Fusion and Hillary.

I had dinner today with Teddy and discussed some opportunities.

The number one priority for us right now is Snapchat, across both companies. Fusion is launching on the Snapchat Discover US platform this coming Monday, December 7th and we'll have a run until Jan 27th, 2016.

We will be giving this a massive promotion across the companies' platforms.

Would be great if we can invite Hillary to 'curate' one of our daily Snapchat editions. Snapchat reaches 100 million daily users who view 4 billion videos per day on the platform. Fusion will be one of only 19 select media companies that are part of Snapchat Discover.

This should be a small lift in terms of time commitment, and a high impact opportunity to deliver a message to millions of young people in the U.S. and around the world and highlight the topics she'd like them to be aware of. And for us, it would be great to have her featured on our Snapchat channel right after launch.

Would love your thoughts on this and advice on how to best proceed to make this happen.

All the best,

Boris

Attachments: ethicscodedefinal.081808.doc

I've attached a copy of the code of conduct. If you haven't already done so, please review the document and follow up with me if you have any questions.

Here's a quick recap of main points of our call this afternoon:

- Cassandra will get the code of conduct to anyone on the call who hasn't already signed one.
- We need a memo spelling out the various kinds of executive actions and how they differ. Beth Nolan and Todd will review the Cass Sunstein memo from 1992 and will see whether it suffices or we need something new. Once we have a suitable memo, I will circulate to group.
- Rob Weiner proposed that a memorandum on agency contacts with the White House (what's appropriate, what's not, etc.) should be one of the items prepared early. In the same category as ethics. Cassandra -- we should discuss to see whether (a) you want to fold that into the work you're going to do with Bob Bauer and others on ethics, or (b) this should just be put on a separate track.
- Sally will discuss with her working group tomorrow a plan for reviewing the spreadsheet that Chris's research team put together on all of Bush Administration's executive orders. Sally and Todd will then talk to see if anything else needs to be done to make sure that this spreadsheet gets properly reviewed.
- Chris will have his researchers do a spreadsheet on presidential memoranda -- to the extent that such memoranda can be found in the public record.
- Sally's group will be tracking potential last-minute regulations that will be candidates to be stopped or potential reversed through the Congressional Review Act.
- The following work product on executive actions should be prepared by (a) Sally's group, with respect to the Agency reviews, and (b) the policy working groups:
  - A list of relevant executive orders/actions, highlighting those that are candidates for early rollback.
  - A list of new executive orders/actions that are candidates for early action.
  - This work product should be completed on the same time schedules as the principal memos that the agency groups and policy working groups are already working on.
  - Candidates both for rollback and new actions will ultimately be evaluated with both substance and communications in mind, as important signalling opportunities for the President-elect.
- For present purposes, everyone should take Beth Nolan and Rob Weiner to be our initial legal team available for consultation on legal issues relating to new potential executive actions.
- If anyone has other points that I've missed, please let me know.

Thanks for participating in this. Todd

Revised. Please take another quick look as I think we should get to her asap. Two questions:

- 1) What do we do about Powell? Here I've mirrored language from the Q&A, which says "consistent with the practice of prior Secretaries of State," but are we comfortable with that?
- 2) Am i sending her this and the spox statement or Jen, so you want to do that? Either way, we'll need to explain the two options.

Here is a revised open letter attached to the current version of the fact sheet from the website. This is shorter, more direct, and more even-handed. Not defiant but not particularly contrite either. See what you think. (Will leave it to Nick, Heather, Brian, etc to review fact sheet and make any updates as needed.)

Subject: I'll be damned

John --

Huge news:

We finally closed the gap. We outraised Mitt Romney and the Republicans $114 million to $111 million in August.

Unbelievable. After three straight months of getting beat -- and not by a small margin -- more than 1,170,000 supporters made a donation to close the gap.

We can't let up for one second. These August numbers don't reflect outside group fundraising or spending -- and in that category we're still getting thrashed.

Right before the conventions, we were being outspent by super PACs alone in Colorado, Florida, Iowa, North Carolina, Virginia, and Wisconsin. That margin was more than 2 to 1 in Florida, Iowa, and North Carolina.

Already, more than 3 million grassroots donors have stepped up to make sure they can't drown us out. According to our records, you weren't among them. Are you going to let this campaign go by without joining in?

Stand up and be counted -- donate \$5 or more today to help build on this momentum.

We recently learned Karl Rove is rounding up the most powerful Republican donors to give all they've got to beat Barack Obama.

And it's clear the Romney campaign has been building up a cash advantage that would allow them to blanket the airwaves with negative ads even if we did close the gap. Last week a Romney-Ryan official compared their latest ad campaign to the "daisy cutter" bombs used in the Iraq War. Another adviser to the campaign said their goal from now to Election Day is to "carpet bomb" President Obama and Vice President Biden.

After all our hard work over the past 17 months, I'll be damned if the Romney campaign, Karl Rove, the Koch brothers, and a handful of anonymous billionaires "carpet bomb" the President and end up deciding this election for millions of Americans in the last 57 days.

We just proved we can go head to head with Romney and the Republicans and win. That can't stop now.

This will be a tight race to the end. Donate $5 or more today:

<https://donate.barackobama.com/August-Numbers>

Together we're proving that ordinary Americans -- not special interests or super PACs -- will decide this election. I'm proud to be a part of this campaign, and even more determined to make sure our hard work translates into a win for President Obama in November. I hope you feel the same way.

Thanks for all you're doing.

Before we get started, I'd like to take a minute to talk about the topic...of emails.

I think there has been some confusion out there about my emails as Secretary of State, so I want to talk about it directly.

When I was in the Senate, I used a Blackberry for both work and personal emails. When I got to work as Secretary, I wanted to do the same thing. So I opted to use my personal email account - which was permitted by the department - because I thought it would be easier to carry just one device for my work and for my personal emails, instead of two.

A lot of you know, I'm not exactly a technological whiz.

Looking back, it would have been better if I had simply used a second email account and carried a second phone, but at the time, this certainly didn't seem like an issue.

I sent my work emails to government employees at their government addresses, which meant they were immediately preserved on the system at the State Department.

After I left office, when the Department asked for all emails from former secretaries of state sent from their personal accounts, I responded right away and we have turned over all of my work related emails, which total roughly 55,000 printed pages.

I have also asked that the State Department make all of these emails public so everyone can see them for themselves.

Dear Friends and Colleagues,

Progress Now and our 21 state affiliates have been busy this past week! From the SCOTUS decisions on DOMA and Prop 8, to Texas Senator Wendy Davis's 11 hour filibuster on an anti-abortion bill, and President Obama's announcement about the Keystone XL, we have been working hard to keep voters informed. These are just 3 of our 21 states doing what we do every day – make progress happen, and happen NOW.

Courage Campaign Celebrates the Defeat of Prop 8 and DOMA!

 Marriage Equality

"Today the nation took another historic step towards creating a more perfect union...Love should not be legislated or litigated. We hope today's rulings settle this issue once and for all as we celebrate loving couples marrying in California and across the country in the coming weeks, months and years."

This statement by Rick Jacobs, Executive Director of Courage Campaign, highlights the historic decisions around marriage equality made by the Supreme Court on Wednesday June 26. The Courage Campaign has been fighting against Proposition 8 since March 2009 and kept citizens informed of the courts decisions through live updates online at equalityontrial.com . On Wednesday their work was validated when the Supreme Court ruled that the ballot proponents of Prop 8 did not have standing to defend the law in Court. This means that the case is sent back to the Ninth Circuit to dismiss the appeal for lack of standing. In short same sex couples in California now have the right to marry!

Californians will now join the 12 other states and the District of Columbia in fully accepting same sex marriage as a legal form of marriage. But that's not all! Since the Supreme Court struck down DOMA as unconstitutional these couples will have every federal right they deserve! While this is a huge win for the LGBT equality movement, government bureaucracy tends to slow down the implementation process. We want to make sure that this does not happen. By donating today , you can help ensure that all 1,138 federal rights are granted as fast as possible. We will be able to monitor implementation and push our federal bureaucracy to speed up the process!

Progress Texas Applauds Senator Davis’s 11-Hour Filibuster

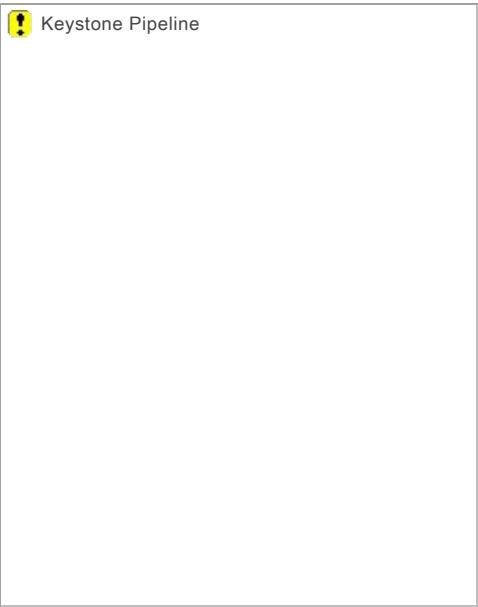

At 3:01 am on Wednesday June 26, Texan Lt. Governor Dewhurst announced , “Senate Bill 5 cannot be signed because it passed after midnight.” This came after an 11-hour filibuster of the bill by Senator Wendy Davis. If passed the legislation would have prohibited abortions after 20 weeks of pregnancy and reduce the number of abortion clinics in the state from 42 to 5! Without food, water, or even the ability to lean on her desk, Senator Davis spoke for 11 hours and ultimately was successful. Her actions spurred national attention evident in the fact that over 200,000 people watched the live feed online and President Obama even showed his support .

When the Davis’s filibuster was finally stopped after three violations ruled against her, more than 400 protesters halted the proceedings 15 minutes before the roll call could be completed. The commotion inside the chamber continued until the midnight deadline had passed, making the vote irrelevant. The actions of Senator Davis and the citizens who made their voice heard, helped protect women’s reproductive rights in Texas and send a message nationwide. These are the types of actions that Progress Texas stand behind. They fight for issues that are shared by a growing majority of Texans, but not always represented by a majority of our public officials, and will continue to do so with your support.

Bold Nebraska Joins President Obama’s Call to Climate Action

On Tuesday June 25, President Obama laid out his administration’s Climate Action Plan to cut carbon pollution while making the switch to clean energy. In the speech, the President said that he would not approve Keystone XL if it contributes to climate pollution. As the Congressional Research Service has already made clear, the Keystone XL would in fact increase U.S. greenhouse gas emission by 3 million to 21 million metric tons. The President has made a huge step towards rejecting Keystone XL, and Bold Nebraska is working to make sure that he will follow through with action.

That is why Bold Nebraska is collaborating with the Sierra Club, 350.org, and Nebraska Farmers Union to organize the Build Our Energy project. Together they are working to build a wind turbine and solar-powered barn directly inside the Keystone XL pipeline route in Nebraska. By doing so, they are sending the message that they embrace clean, local, renewable energy, and that they are serious about protecting their precious water and land for future generations by opposing this risky tarsands pipeline. By donating to the Build Our Energy, you can help make this project a reality and create the clean energy future we all need.

CLINTON CALLS ON BUDGET COMMITTEE TO MAKE FUNDING FOR GREEN COLLAR JOBS INITIATIVE A PRIORITY IN BUDGET RESOLUTION

Full Funding of Green Collar Jobs Programs Authorized In 2007 Energy Bill Is Vital To Ensuring America's Economic Growth and Global Competitiveness

Washington, DC – Senator Hillary Rodham Clinton joined several of her colleagues in calling on the Senate Budget Committee to show their commitment to the future of energy independence and new job growth by fully funding a Green Collar Jobs Initiative in the upcoming budget resolution. In a letter to the Chairman and Ranking Member of the Budget Committee, the senators stressed that a strong Green Collar Jobs Initiative to fund priority energy policies would be a catalyst for creating new, good paying jobs, a cleaner environment, and would be a key step in asserting our nation's energy independence. With these goals in mind, the lawmakers are requesting that a full $7.5 billion in the budget be provided to fund priority alternative and renewable energy policies from the Energy Bill.

"Growing green collar jobs doesn't just move America towards the benefits of energy independence, and a cleaner environment; it opens a whole new growth sector of the economy that will produce new, higher paying jobs that are positioned to be the careers of the future," said Senator Clinton. "By providing full funding for this initiative in the Energy Bill, we are opening the door to new economic opportunities and a host of new possibilities that will help ensure that our nation remains a global leader in this promising industry."

Last year, Senator Clinton and Senator Bernie Sanders (I-VT) secured Senate approval of their green job training proposal, which would authorize new programs to train workers for "green collar jobs" that involve the design, manufacturing, installation, operation, and maintenance of renewable energy and energy efficiency technologies. The Sanders-Clinton initiative, which is highlighted in the letter to the Senate Budget Committee, would establish an Energy Efficiency and Renewable Energy Workforce Training Program to be administered by the Department of Labor in coordination with the Department of Energy.

The recently enacted Energy Independence and Security Act of 2007 provides Congress with opportunities for a Green Collar Jobs Initiative that will help move the country towards energy independence and will build a new and growing sector of the economy. Providing full funding at a level of $7.5 billion is critical in ensuring that we can create green jobs at home, in a growing sector that produces clean and efficient homes, appliances, vehicles, fuels, and energy.

A copy of the letter to the Chairman and Ranking Member is attached -

The Honorable Kent Conrad
Chairman
Senate Budget Committee
624 Dirksen Building
Washington, DC 20510

10/18/2016

The Honorable Judd Gregg
Ranking Member
Senate Budget Committee
624 Dirksen Building
Washington, DC 20510

Dear Chairman Conrad and Ranking Member Gregg:

The recently enacted Energy Independence and Security Act of 2007 provides this Congress with a great opportunity for a Green Collar Jobs Initiative to fund priority energy policies. It is time for Congress to turn its attentions to the vital policies within that can move this country towards energy independence and create new green collar jobs. With this in mind, we are writing to request that the budget provide full funding—$7.5 billion—for a Green Collar Jobs Initiative which will fund priority alternative and renewable energy policies from the Energy Bill.

Funding a Green Collar Jobs Initiative will not only move us towards energy independence and provide a cleaner environment, but it can also bring about another important benefit: new, good-paying jobs. Investing in new green job opportunities will result in more energy efficient buildings, solar panels, wind turbines, advanced technology vehicles with advanced electric batteries, and renewable biofuels and energy.

The United States has the opportunity to improve our economy and global competitiveness by creating green jobs at home, in a growing sector that produces clean and efficient homes, appliances, vehicles, fuels, and energy. Investing domestically now will ensure we do not have to import renewable energy technologies such as solar, wind, and advanced biofuels. Moreover, with the right incentives we will have American workers and manufactures building the next generation of automobiles and advanced technology batteries. Overall, with all these new green industries, green job training can help many unemployed/underemployed workers find new and better-paying jobs.

While there are many programs in the Energy Independence and Security Act of 2007, fully funding these priority areas will make a Green Collar Jobs Initiative a reality for 2009:

- Weatherization, Commercial Building Initiatives & Energy Efficiency and Conservation Block Grants
- Incentives for Advanced Battery Production and Storage Capability (vehicles, solar, wave and wind)
- Energy Efficiency and Renewable Energy Worker Training Program
- Loans for retooling factories for the production of advanced technology vehicles (i.e. hybrids, plug-ins hybrids and fuel cells)
- Advanced Biofuels Production and Infrastructure)

We sincerely appreciate your consideration of this request in addition to existing research and deployment initiatives. We look forward to working with you to provide a real commitment to energy independence and a clean environment, as well as, to spur the green jobs that will benefit our great nation.

Sincerely,

Attachments: Bryan Wood - Final Paper (6-20-14).docx

Judge Leon and Professor Podesta,

Attached is my final paper for the 6/20 deadline for non-graduating students. Please let me know if you need any additional resources from me.

Thank you for a great semester and have a good weekend.

Best Regards,

Bryan

Hope Mary gets to your mittens soon.

Thanks again for a fabulous weekend. Despite getting horribly lost, I had a wonderful experience. Without question, one of my favorite races yet.

Subject: memo and follow-up (confidential)

John,

I read the memo. Good analysis. Here is my confidential--for your eyes only--review of the memo. It is negative on some things. So, please keep this as eyes only.

Overall, as I'm sure you are thinking I'd push more on building a campaign strategy. For example, should we continue to invest in big GOTV efforts in Pennsylvania? Or Oregon? Winning or losing will ride on that sort of analysis more than good tactical execution.

This is going to sound like I'm dwelling on the negative side but I just want to give you my straight due diligence. Here it is. There are a couple of small factual errors and assumptions about different groups that worry me. For example, I think we're over-selling the capacity of some of the America Votes groups. This is, in some ways, the big challenge we face. Where is the real capacity in expertise for the voter contact work? Figuring this out and getting it done in 2008 is our biggest challenge as a movement right now.

One overstatement worries me--USAction. They don't have a voter contact program, a political director, a voter file manager or the ability to run a program. I was really surprised to see them listed as a voter contact delivery vehicle. They certainly could, but they don't have that expertise right now. I've directed hundreds of thousands of dollars to them for advocacy work in the field. They are a good partner for advocacy.

I also think that Working America was significantly undersold and that the Labor movement's political issues are getting in the way. Having Working America funded at their capacity is probably the single most important voter contact investment that can be made in my view. This might explain the USAction issues. Anna is a long-time supporter of USAction. She might be trying to build their own thing through USAction as a rival to Working America. I think that would be a huge mistake. I was at the AFL-CIO for the birth and growing pains of Working America. It wasn't always pretty but after 8-9 months it was a thing of beauty. This is not something we should ask another group to figure out in the middle of the 2008 election. But let me be clear, if they can do it they should be funded. I just think there are other projects to fund first--like Working America.

I also think the memo was very uneven in how it treated the AFL-CIO. The work they did in 2006 was critical. SEIU also over-states their 2006 program. They barely showed up and when they did it was very late. I don't want to deride anybody's work. I'm just surfacing for you the labor politics I'm seeing develop here. This worries me if it diverts resources from important efforts. However if everybody has the resources they need, I know that the staff-level folks across all these organizations will work well together. But if we short-change the best people in the business, that would be a mistake.

Another small error, I appreciate the enthusiasm of First Tuesday Media but they didn't do any big work for VoteVets last year. I know because I supervised the production and ad buys for VoteVets last year. Their ads were shot by the MoveOn ad firm. First Tuesday fixed an edit for VoteVets on one ad. In full disclosure, I screwed up a business deal with First Tuesday earlier in the year when the second round of financing from Soros didn't come through. That is a relationship I need to fix. I handled that badly. I want to figure out a way to work with them. Maybe we can just bring all of these efforts together. I was enthusiastic to work with them until I didn't get another check from George.

On the good side of the memo. I think that Catalist and Atlas are well-run projects doing good work. Catalist is, finally, an important part of the progressive political architecture. There are some folks grumbling about it because of the costs. For example, ACORN is a little annoyed about costs. Donors need to start adding an "overhead charge" to help these groups use catalist.

Atlas is exciting because we'll have better vote goals and plans for how to pull them off than in the past. But, again, I worry about who will do the voter contact work.

We badly need to find somebody to lead the Latino voter piece ASAP. That is so critical for 2008 and the long-term.

I'm also glad that you are driving the argument that we need the messaging capacity. If we can put the GOP candidate on defensive right out of the gate and then again mid-Summer it is a huge advantage.

So, that's my feedback on the memo. Considering it was 16 pages these are minor quibbles. But I wanted to call out the red flags. Because I am intimately familiar with all of these groups I can help do due diligence as needed. I've seen all their work up close and personal.

Next I will turn to the start-up plan and strategic memo for the messaging campaign. I will try to merge all of the projects mentioned together. My impression is that Rob McKay will work with whomever. He was in discussions with Wes and I. The key is that the entrepreneurs--you, me, Susan--need to make the jump.

Talk to you soon.

-Tom

Dear Mr. Podesta,

It was a pleasure meeting you at the Mandalay Bay convention center where President Obama just spoke. Thanks for allowing me to get a picture with you as well and listening patiently to President Obama's fairy god mother.

I have not been successful in meeting President Obama and getting a photo with him though. He forgot his fairy godmother, although, he recognized me today after 34 years as he smiled and waived after the speech. I still cannot believe I saw him for the first time after 34 years.

I am writing a book on this brief but life changing meeting for President Obama, his mom and his family and friends. I wanted to include his picture. I have just not been lucky enough to get a photo with him.

Can you please suggest which agent I should approach and how I can meet President Obama.

I wish you all the best with Mrs. Hillary Clinton's campaign. I'll pray for your success.

Take care and God bless.

Election 2012: Sex, lies and videotape

By Susan Brooks Thistlethwaite

A man fills out paper work to participate in the final day of early voting at the Lancaster Board of Elections on Nov. 5, 2012 in Lancaster, Ohio. (AFP/GETTY IMAGES) President Obama's Christian faith, or the Mormon faith of Republican presidential candidate Mitt Romney, did not become important issues after the primaries of election year 2012. Even the fact that Romney is a significant leader in the Mormon Church did not really emerge as noteworthy after he was selected as the GOP nominee.

There was, of course, faith activism all over the political and faith landscape. But the real "religious" questions of 2012 were theological. To me, the most important theological questions were: Are women fully human or not? Does lying matter and why? Is there one nation, or are there 47 percent of Americans who don't matter?

All of these questions were highly politically contested and religious interpretations figured prominently in those ideological struggles.

Sex: War on Women

In 1949, French philosopher Simone de Beauvoir analyzed the persistence of women's inequality, calling women "The Second Sex." In the 2012 election year, this is better termed the "War on Women." The "War on Women" is a political designation for a host of Republican initiatives at the local, state and federal level to restrict women's rights, especially but not exclusively women's reproductive rights, that took central stage in 2012.

The "War on Women," however, is also a theological issue. The underlying presumption of those who would pursue policies that limit women's reproductive choices, or allow it to be legal for women to be paid less than men who do the same job, is that women are not of equal dignity and worth. They also presume that women do not have "freedom of conscience" and can exercise it equally well as men.

The important visual for the idea that 2012 was a year when the GOP was conducting a "War on Women" was the photo of an all-male panel on contraception conducted in House of Representatives. Sandra Fluke, a Georgetown University Law School Student, was excluded from the panel because, it was said, "the hearing wasn't about 'birth control,' it was about 'freedom of religion and conscience.'"

So, for me, as a Christian, that became a core theological question: Don't women have consciences? Don't women have religious freedom too?

The "War on Women" is, at its base, an attack on women's freedom and dignity. It had, however, so many manifestations in the 2012 election year, it is difficult to name them all. From Romney's promises to defund Planned Parenthood, to the huge struggle in Virginia over an internal ultrasound procedure, the "trans-vaginal probe," being required for women seeking an abortion, to how rape is "defined" as in the infamous comments by Rep. Todd Akin that "legitimate rape" rarely causes pregnancy that became such an issue in that Missouri Senate race, and beyond, there were numerous examples.

Theological polarization ran in parallel to political polarization and this was well illustrated per Akin and his views. Progressive and moderate Christians contested Akin's "legitimate rape" comments and the religious right supported him. The religious right is credited as the force that kept Akin in the race.

But the "War on Women" is not confined to reproductive rights issues. Workplace discrimination, and equal pay for equal work as now required in the Lilly Ledbetter Fair Pay Act signed by President Obama, is another collection of political issues that are also theological issues. Are women human? Are they equal in theological dignity and worth?

At the end of the day, the host of issues dubbed "The War on Women" are theological issues having to do with, as in the Christian tradition, "male and female" being created in the image of God (Genesis 1:27). Theologically speaking, then, I believe women are equally and fully human in dignity and worth, women do have consciences, and they can act on their religious consciences and make informed moral choices about their reproductive lives.

Lies: The "Post-truth" election

It is scarcely unusual for politicians to frame events and policies so that they can be claimed to support their views. Thomas Jefferson, for example, in part interpreted prohibiting "establishment" of religion as a tax issue and got it included in the Constitution. Politicians have been widely known to state opinion as "fact" and ignore facts not of their liking. Yes, politicians have even lied to get themselves elected. No one is shocked to hear this.

Election 2012, however, was the year of “post-truth.” For the first time, the idea emerged that political lying simply didn’t matter. This is a profound theological issue.

One political party, the Republican Party, put out statements and ads that were lies, that is, proven to be factually incorrect, and simply said it didn’t matter. And they did it over and over again, while denigrating “fact-checking.” The Romney campaign declined, as one surrogate said, to let their campaign “be dictated by fact-checkers”.

A false equivalence emerged, where media outlets often chose not to pursue the policy of repeated, systematic and deliberate lying by the Romney campaign and chose instead to focus on ‘they both do it.’

Politicians lie. It’s the case. But that’s not the story of the 2012 election. The story is the complete contempt Republicans showed for being caught in lies, and instead of issuing “corrections,” merely repeated the lie. An example of this kind of lying is the canard that after being elected, President Obama went on an “apology tour.” This lie was repeated over and over again, with relative impunity from the press. President Obama himself called out this lie as a “whopper” in the last presidential debate with Mitt Romney.

It’s not just hamburgers and fries that are supersized in America these days. The lies have been supersized as well. But it is not the size of the lie that is the deeply troubling theological issue. The issue is a spreading contempt for the idea that truth versus falsehood even matters.

In my view, this is the first “post-truth” election, and if it is allowed to continue, “Be warned: ‘post-truthfulness’ will inevitably bleed into all areas of our lives as a result, from intimate relations to our social and work lives. It is the essence of the amoral, where individuals or whole nations are unable to perceive or are indifferent to questions of right or wrong.”

Political lying as deliberate strategy, one can argue, was first crafted by Richard Nixon. Nixon developed the art of political lying throughout his campaign and his presidency, and continued to tell lies despite corrections. Richard Nixon began this as a candidate and pursued it through his deeply destructive presidency. According to Rick Perlstein, in “Nixonland: The Rise of a President and the Fracturing of America,” lying was Nixon’s default, as “Nixon would lie about anything.”

“Post-truth,” defined as ‘lying doesn’t matter,’ needs to be called out and explicitly rejected as Republican policy. This needs to be done without false equivalence. Now, of course, any politician or party who deliberately lies should be called out and forced to issue a correction.

The future of “post-truth,” however, is not in the hands of politicians of either party. It is in the hands of the electorate and each voter needs to examine her or his conscience on this development.

Ask yourself this: don’t I, at some level, want my preferred version of reality to be true, even if it’s not? “Post-truth” works because people desire their own version of reality, and in the age of the Internet, you can get it if you want it.

Moral reasoning should lead you to reject that temptation.

Videotape: the 47 percent

Election 2012 was the year Americans stopped being one people. Occupy Wall Street, the protest movement begun in the fall of 2011, contributed the language of the 1 percent, the American mega-rich, versus the rest of America, called the 99 percent. This language has entered the American lexicon and is the greatest success of Occupy.

The “47 percent” burst upon the 2012 political scene with the now infamous videotape of candidate Mitt Romney telling attendees at a “$50,000-a-plate dinner that 47 percent of Americans—those who back President Obama—are ‘victims’ who are ‘dependent upon government’ and ‘pay no income tax.’ He noted: ‘My job is not to worry about those people. I’ll never convince them they should take personal responsibility and care for their lives.’” The video went viral and added the language of the 47 percent to the election lexicon.

This videotape summed up the deep, deep polarizations of the American political landscape today, a polarization that is, in fact, approximately 50-50.

Now, of course, the idea that Americans have always been ‘one people’ and suddenly we stopped is a myth, in fact itself a big lie. For nearly the first century of the democracy, we were legally a slave society and after that a nation of racial discrimination codified in laws called “Jim Crow,” as documented in an excellent PBS series, “The Rise and Fall of Jim Crow”.

In the 2012 election, a host of voter disenfranchisement legislation enacted at the state level in the 2012 election season is bringing back the era of “Jim Crow.” It is an effort to deliberately create barriers for racial ethnic minorities and younger voters to able to legally vote.

Women were not part of “one people” until the passage of the 19th amendment in 1919 gave them the right to vote . The “Equal Rights Amendment” that would have prohibited unequal treatment under the law “on account of sex,” was not ratified, so it can be argued that women are still not fully part of one people. Lesbian, gay, bi-sexual and transgender Americans are legally discriminated against today despite the language of the 14th Amendment that guarantees “equal protection under the law .” Equal unless you are gay, that is.

The language of the 47 percent captures some of this broader American fragmentation in a better way than the 1 percent versus the 99 percent.

But beyond these specific divisions, a broader gulf is opening. It is the “makers versus the takers” ideology that reveals a morally untenable split in the nation.

In this emerging view, there can be no “war on poverty” argument where the idea is taking hold that those who are in need, who are elderly or very young, who are disabled, out-of-work or underemployed, or who are discriminated against deserve their unequal treatment. These “victims” deserve their victimization and unless help is denied to them they will not “take personal responsibility and care for their lives.”

In this perverse view, “helping the poor” will only harm them.

In my Christian faith, however, Jesus teaches that in caring for the hungry, the thirsty, the stranger, the sick and the prisoner you “did it to me,” that is, to Jesus himself. (Matthew 25:41) And when you fail to care for these, the poor, the sick, the suffering, you will be judged and condemned. (Matthew 25: 45-46)

It is a perversion of the Christian faith to argue that the “poor” deserve their fate and helping them is immoral. That is deeply, even profoundly, morally perverse.

Theology Matters:

Ada Maria Isasi-Diaz , a significant Hispanic woman theologian, would frequently say, “La vida es la lucha.” Life is struggle.

This is the basis of the theological interpretation I bring to Election 2012. My Christian faith teaches me that history is a struggle between good and bad, between selfishness and generosity, between cruelty and compassion, and thus between right and wrong. I think an uncritical equivalence, whether political or theological, hides this struggle.

You have to choose.

Subject: Thinking Phone Networks (TPN) Pilot Agreement for Legal Review

Hi Linda.

Attached is an Evaluation agreement for a company called Thinking Phone Networks (TPN) which is a competitor to Star2Star in the VoIP over broadband space and at this point is looking like the more likely vendor to win the ABCR local market POTS line business based on product, pricing and ease of doing business. Along with the evaluation agreement is an order form which TPN also refers to as a Customer Service agreement (CSA). Please have these reviewed from a legal prospective. The Order form / CSA needs to be better tied into the Evaluation agreement. The following language from the Order Form signature page needs to be improved upon. I would definitely appreciate it if you could prioritize this request. With the potential savings opportunity, the voice operations team is anxious to start the pilot.

Thanks... Vinny

This sets forth the terms of the Customer Service Agreement ("Agreement") made this 29th day of June , 2015 , (the "Effective Date") by and between Thinking Phone Networks, INC ("THINKING PHONE NETWORKS"), and Avis Budget Car Rental, LLC ("Customer"). The term of this Agreement is per the Evaluation Agreement.

Hi Vinny,

Here is the approved pilot agreement back from TPN. We were able to get approved your requests and increased the pilot period to 90 days too. Now, it needs the Avis legal review.

Thanks,

Subject: This isn't The Apprentice

John,

It's been clear from the very beginning of this race that power brokers in Washington are trying to rig the debate schedule and deny voters a chance to hear directly from the candidates.

Not only did they decree that we would have only four debates before the Iowa caucus, but also that these debates would be hidden on weekends and during the holiday season to discourage people from watching.

This morning, the situation got even worse. We learned that NBC is trying to further rig the rules and change standards for the last debate before the Iowa Caucus. They want to let pollsters decide which candidates voters like you can hear from.

This is not how our democracy is supposed to work. This isn't The Apprentice. Media executives in New York shouldn't be able to fire candidates from the debate stage or rig the rules for no good reason.

We should choose our President in a caucus room or voting booth, not through shady, smoke-filled backroom deals by elites in Washington and New York.

Voters in Iowa, New Hampshire, South Carolina, and Nevada won't stand for it, and I won't either.

I call on all of you to raise your voices and not let special interests take your decision away from you. Elections are decided by voters, not pollsters, party bosses, or the media.

Tweet now to say you think NBC should not get to make your decision for you:

Our political system is broken, and it's leaving too many Americans behind. I will never quit fighting to fix it.

Let's take a stand together and say "no" to letting special interests deny your right to hear from every Presidential candidate.

Thanks,

Our thinking, based on feedback from a few of you, is that this would help keep the consultant team abreast of day-to-day press/strategic communications items and give all of us a quick chance to discuss other items that may otherwise fall through the cracks.

We figure some of these calls will be 5 minutes, others will take the full 30, depending on what's going on that day.

Items to discuss on tomorrow's call:

1. News clips – new system going forward
2. HRC's WED briefing
3. May launch – locations?
4. Long version Q/A doc

Subject: Help Us Reduce Smog and Advance Cleaner Cars

LEAGUE OF CONSERVATION VOTERS

Dear John,

I have an urgent request.

There are two critical decisions the Obama administration will make in the coming weeks. These decisions have the potential to save consumers billions of dollars at the pump, reduce our dangerous dependence on oil, and save thousands of lives.

As a member of LCV's Environmental Majority Council, we need your help to ensure that the administration moves ahead with the most protective health standard for smog and the strongest new vehicle efficiency standards.

Reducing Smog, Saving Lives: The current smog standard, set by the Bush administration in 2008 falls far short of what level scientists agree is needed to protect public health and has been challenged in court by public health and environmental organizations. The EPA has been working to strengthen the smog standard for over a year and after delaying action several times has set a late July deadline to announce a strengthened smog standard. We believe that the EPA and the White House are making these key decisions in the next couple of weeks.

Advancing Cleaner Cars, Reducing Dangerous Oil Dependence: The administration is currently considering the next round of car fuel efficiency and global warming pollution standards (from 2017 to 2025). Last year the administration finalized historic fuel efficiency standards for cars sold through 2016, which will save over 1.8 billion barrels of oil. In March, the President set a goal of reducing our nation's oil dependence by one-third by 2025. The single biggest step the administration can take to reach that goal is to set strong car efficiency standards that achieve at least 60 mile-per-gallon by 2025. Facing pressure from the auto industry, we are concerned that the White House may opt for a lower standard that won't deliver the innovation in car technologies or oil savings that we need.

Make your voice heard by calling the White House switchboard at 202-456-1414 today. Below is a sample of what we are urging our supporters to make clear to senior White House officials:

Sample Message:

I am calling about two opportunities to protect public health and reduce oil dependence that are very important to me. The first issue is the updated smog standard. The White House should let EPA Administrator Lisa Jackson set a national smog standard that follows the science, the law, and protects public health. Jackson has rightly said the current smog standards are "not defensible" and I want to see her issue a standard that truly protects public health this summer.

The second issue concerns the next round of car fuel efficiency standards. I strongly support the President's goal of reducing our nation's dangerous dependence on oil and the single biggest step he could take to achieve this goal would be setting fuel efficiency standards of at least 60 miles per gallon by 2025.

Please let us know if you are willing to make your voice heard. The White House switchboard number is 202-456-1414, and the key officials to contact are:

Richard Daley, Chief of Staff

David Plouffe, Senior Advisor

Jon Carson, Director of Public Engagement

Stephanie Cutter, Assistant to the President

Heather Zichal, Deputy Assistant to the President for Energy & Climate

If you have any questions on these issues, please contact a member of our legislative team, either Tiernan Sittenfeld at Tiernan\_Sittenfeld@lcv.org or (202) 454-4582, or Sara Chieffo at Sara\_Chieffo@lcv.org or (202) 454-4581.

Thank you for your leadership and for all you do to protect our environment.

Warmly,

Gene

 2011 Health Care Day of Action

Dear Friend,

Join me, along with hundreds of Coloradans, as we advocate for health care at the State Capitol on the one-year anniversary of the Affordable Care Act on Wednesday, March 23rd.

You might know me from appearances on MSNBC, CNN, CBS, ABC, Air America and NPR. I'm a whistleblower who has exposed the deceptive practices of insurance companies who boost profits at the cost of leaving many Americans uninsured. Having spent 20 years working at CIGNA as the head of corporate communications and as chief corporate spokesperson, I know all about the industry's heartless and deceptive practices. I have revealed these strategic efforts to U.S. Senate and House committees, briefed members of Congress and spoken at numerous public forums.

Almost a year ago, President Barack Obama signed the Affordable Care Act - comprehensive health reform - into law. Already the law has helped hundreds of thousands of uninsured and underinsured Americans-- including individuals who can no longer be dropped from policies due to an expensive diagnosis, seniors who have seen prescription drug cost relief and young adults who can continue to be covered by their families until age 26.

I'm coming to Colorado next week to stand up for protections for Coloradans and against policies that keep Americans from getting the care they deserve. We've worked hard to bring comprehensive national reform to law - and now, we must work together to bring health care home.

I hope that you will join me in-person on Wednesday, March 23rd 2011 at 8 a.m. for The Colorado Consumer Health Initiative's 5th Annual Health Care Day of Action: Bringing Health Care Home. From small businesses, to young adults, to individuals with pre-existing conditions, let's come together to work for access to quality, affordable health care for all Coloradans.

Sincerely,

Wendell Potter

Got it - but we should remember obligation was on foundation to pre-approve, so it does have foundation exigencies that should be considered.

Happy to do a call later today if desired. My point was a larger one - should we get in practice of a place where folks can get foundation perspective on issue after issue (a sort of fact check place if you will).

Subject: Jeb Bush vs. Granny

John,

Remember Granny and her fight against Paul Ryan? We successfully stopped Ryan and his Republican friends from destroying Medicare as we know it - but now they're at it again.

Last night Jeb Bush said publicly that he wants to "phase out" Medicare, a program that literally keeps old people from dying.

Wow.

At least he's being honest. At least now Americans – 50 million of whom are on Medicare - can know exactly what they are voting for when they vote for people like Jeb Bush. And by "people like Jeb Bush" I mean Republicans. Republicans hate Medicare, they have always hated Medicare and they will not stop until they end Medicare.

If you want your grandmother to die, vote Republican. If you want your grandfather to die, vote Republican. It is less expensive than hiring a hit man. And don't believe that "voucher" nonsense. Vouchers won't keep up with medical costs.

Instead of letting Jeb Bush and his Republican friends "phase-out" Medicare, we need to phase-out Jeb Bush.

Click here to contribute and help us bring Granny back so she can roll over Jeb Bush and the Republican plans to destroy Medicare as we know it.

Together we can stop them.

Thanks for all you do,

Erica Payne

Subject: John -- a question on FTC and transition
Hi John:

As I discussed with you a while ago, a great deal of my work over the past couple of years has been on issues concerning the FTC. The privacy and data security obviously, and my work at CAP and elsewhere on the Internet and the future of consumer protection. I also teach antitrust law, and my writing on antitrust and privacy has been picked up by Commissioners and staff as the way to think about those issues. In addition, this fall my seminar at Ohio State is a policy conference on how the FTC should respond to the hot issue of online/behavioral advertising.

I would be very glad to play a role on transition work concerning the FTC. Could you help me become engaged in that?

One specific reason for acting now is that I have been invited to speak on "The Future of the Bureau of Consumer Protection" on October 24. The FTC is holding a "FTC at 100: Toward Our Second Century" event. I think it would be good if my preparation for that talk could be integrated into whatever transition thinking would apply to the Bureau.

Much thanks for anything you can do here.

Best,

Peter

Subject: TOMORROW, March 8th: Confirm your polling location

Dear John D.,

It's been incredible to watch Team Hillary set up shop in Michigan -- knocking on doors, making phone calls, and having real conversations about what's at stake in this election. She did a fantastic job in the debate last night, and I know she'll be just as strong in tonight's forum in Detroit.

Now it all comes down to primary day: Tomorrow — March 8th. If you're with Hillary, I need you to do this right now: Confirm your polling location.

Hillary's the only person in this race who we can trust to be ready to fight for us in the White House from day one, and we have to do our part to get her there.

Dear John –

My father issued an important challenge: 1,000 donations to drive forward the Clinton Foundation's mission for a better world.

We're just a handful of gifts from reaching his goal. We are counting on you to be a part of this important moment.

As Vice Chair of the Clinton Foundation, this work is so important because I recognize the power of one voice, one force for change, to make an impact in the life of someone else – and for that impact to ripple outward, often far beyond what anyone initially imagined.

Will you give now to help us reach 1,000 donations and show you still support our vision for changing and saving lives through the Foundation?

Through the global work of the Clinton Foundation, we try every day to change someone's life.

Your gift is an investment in proven solutions for the people who need them the most. Will you step up now to help us meet our goal and reach as many people in as many places as possible?

I hope you will support our life-changing work.

Thank you,

Chelsea

The meeting served an important purpose and the Members feel better.

Some of the Members just want to vent because they are getting pressured by their people to get involved in the campaign. They mean well.

They just want to be more involved and that's great but it's very difficult to explain that Iowa, New Hampshire, SC and Nevada are the campaign's top priorities now and you have to run these Presidential campaigns state by state and not jump too far ahead.

Congressman Cleaver is a leader and former CBC Chair and he wants to be helpful in facilitating communication with the Caucus in a quiet way.

I spoke with him after the meeting and we are going to have lunch next week.

Coming from Kansas City he is only a few hours away from Iowa by car.

He has been there before for us and is looking forward to going back again.

A few additional thoughts post call:

Q7 picking up on Binder, should we use some formulation like climate change and the environment.

Q14 investment point I made on the call--apples and oranges in the Q

Q15n cutting taxes for two income families seems weird, maybe supporting families by cutting taxes for households with two earners.

Q23 education bank is pretty standard fare. This is probably more a policy than a polling question, but we should probably do something more innovative maybe around technology access there.

Q28 I don't get the first half of the question.is that pie in the sky or are you testing a specific policy?

Q30f should we straightforwardly test whether all income should be taxed at the same rate whether earned or capital gains?

Q30m cant imagine people will know what high frequency traders are so this will just be testing that sort of sounds evil (which it is) but I don't think the answer tells us much.

Q32/33 climate questions without clean air and reducing asthma likely don't test intensity of the way this will play out in campaign. Recent Nyt polling amongst Latinos interesting on that point.

Q40 on free trade, my own view is this is sort of a dog, but should we try to test the proposition that trade deals are bad unless they have high standards on labor and the environment.

Sorry to run on.

Attached you will find the first draft of the Policy Poll. There is a lot going on in this poll and a lot that we all want to know but naturally there are time limitations on what we can do in one instrument. We will have future policy polls that will build on this one and dive deeper into specific issue areas.

We are attempting to do several things in this poll:

- 1: Measure the importance voters put on different issues
- 2: Measure isolated support or opposition of policy proposals
- 3: Determine the prescriptions that voters have when policy proposals are stacked against each other
- 4: And on some issues, see if proposal stand up to opposition arguments.

We have also focused on the following issue areas — almost all economic related:

- 1: General Issue salience (most important issue that leaders should focus on)
- 2: Importance of new investments in a variety of areas that could help families and the economy
- 3: The importance of different policy proposals to improve the economy and incomes
- 4: Dissecting the needs of small businesses and what is needed to help them succeed and grow
- 5: Proposals that would improve public education (K-12) and college debt
- 6: Tax reform and tax policy options (OK, tax increases)
- 7: Climate changed focused mostly on the Pollution Tax (carbon tax), including opposition arguments
- 8 Paid Family Leave including opposition arguments

9: Baseline measure on trade

10: Proposals for retirement security

That is a lot for one poll and it is certainly too long but we wanted people to be able to get the full flavor or issues we have discussed on past policy calls and strategy meetings. This will allow us to put issues side by side and then make decisions on priorities and what we might be able to wait for future polls.

As you review think to yourself what might not be needed in this round of research. If you feel strongly that there are items missing that should be included please be ready to let us know what you would cut to fit it in the poll.

I also want to give a shout out to the Policy Team. Their memos, calls and endless emails we sent to Jake, Dan and Ethan have been invaluable and we could not have put this draft together without your effort. Thank you.

We have a call on Monday which gives everyone the weekend to kick the tires (Happy Valentines). Feel free as you review and ponder to shoot me, Jeff Liszt, and Matt Hogan, an email on your comments and suggestions (and questions) and then we can attempt to put a second draft together before the call. That would make the call more efficient.

Thanks for everyone's time and effort.

A couple of updates:

1. The team had call this morning to discuss our work in light of recent market developments. Bill will also be coordinating with Jason.
2. On October 2nd, we are having a “dress rehearsal” for our October 17th Review Board meeting.
3. For the October 17th meeting, we’ve confirmed Reich, Rubin, Mulcahy, Ferguson, Tyson. Summers and Volker have been invited and are trying to work our schedules.
4. We think it would be helpful to have a dialogue with the team working on cap and trade. Jack Lew will coordinate from our end. Could you please let us know with whom he should work on the energy side?

Thanks,

Josh

Thought you would appreciate an update on our attendance at the Birthday Party for Hillary at the residence of Phil and Barbara Sellinger in Morristown, New Jersey on Tuesday, October 27th. We have worked with and for the Clintons since 1992.

My wife Marilyn, our granddaughter Erica and I had a wonderful evening, an opportunity to talk with Hillary and photos of our granddaughter Erica with Hillary.

This was a very special and joyful time for our granddaughter. Erica and her three sisters were adopted from an orphanage in Acuna, Mexico by our daughter and son-in-law. Without the help of Secretary of State Hillary Clinton, the adoption of these four orphan sisters would not have happened. We will always be eternally grateful to her.

Having been adopted at the age of 6 from an orphanage in York, Pennsylvania, I know the importance of having a family who loves and supports you. Their three year journey in Faith is an amazing story of Christian Love, never giving up and overcoming the impossible. Attached please find the details.

Hillary's remarks that evening were sensational. She is so much better prepared to be President than she was in 2008. Her performance in the first debate, her performance in the congressional hearing and her performance at the birthday party were all Presidential!

Kindest regards,

Ed

Subject: Iraqi-Kurdish refugee intro at Marguerite Thompson's house

Dear John,

It was beyond a pleasure to meet you and speak with you last week at Marguerite's house. It is so inspiring to be part of this movement to get Hillary elected, something I've been dreaming of since my family and I were evacuated to the US by President Clinton after my father was assassinated by Saddam's regime in front of our eyes. She's the inspiration that made me realize public health is the way to take responsibility for my part of the world, and not take this American Dream for granted. And I literally used to watch her speeches on my computer as prep, when I was with PEPFAR and later USAID, after coming back from WHO & UNDP in Iraq.

I meant to write immediately last weekend, but unfortunately had a shoulder injury just the next day, and I'm just recovering from it (and the anti-inflammatory medicines). But I did make it to the event with Robby last night, and I was glad to be part of that support platform, and also meet Amanda in person, with whom I'm following up to work on Virginia diaspora relations for the campaign. I'm currently working on a few startups and new NGOs, one of them on countering extremism through youth engagement, entrepreneurship, and economic growth in Iraq, and the other two across global LGBT civil society capacity building, and HIV vaccine.

I know you're quite busy and I'm just happy to have met you after so many years of professionally stalking your work in service of our country and also CAP--a place I would love to be a part of some day--but I do hope to keep in touch and see you and talk more about how I can help now with fundraising, comms, and operations and later with Middle East, global health, and inclusive economic growth.

Sincerely,

Rebeen

Eric:

President Obama stated today at his news conference that Democratic voters who support gun control should vote against Democratic Senators and Members of Congress who oppose gun control, acting as one-issue voters as the president put it, for a few election cycles.

My question for an upcoming column is:

Is the president aware that his plan will lead to the election of more Republicans to the Senate and House after the next election, and does the president therefore believe that the election of more Republicans to the House and Senate after the 2016 elections would be a desirable outcome?

Thx in advance for your response. Brent

! ProgressNow Colorado

Dear Neighbor,

The right wing is going off the rails in Colorado.
Are you ready to fight back?

Earlier this week, Republican Sen. Vicki Marble of Fort Collins shocked the entire room in a poverty reduction hearing, launching into a rambling speech about "problems in the black race" with diet and health, even though "everybody loves" chicken and barbeque "down south." She then discussed how "Mexicans in Mexico" are "much thinner down there than they are up here." As of this writing, Sen. Marble has refused to apologize despite growing nationwide outrage over her blatantly racist remarks--telling a reporter "I went there because somebody had to start the dialogue." [1]

! rmgno.jpg

And here's the real shocker: the same people who brought you Sen. Vicki Marble are promoting the radical, wasteful recalls of two Colorado Senators--whose only offense was doing their jobs.

In 2012, Sen. Marble defeated a moderate Republican in a bitter primary with help from the Rocky Mountain Gun Owners--the same extremist pro-gun group running TV ads against Senate President John Morse today in the recall elections. [2] In recent years, the influence of groups like RMGO has pulled the Colorado Republican Party farther and farther to the right, and Sen. Vicki Marble is a perfect example of the consequences.

Enough is enough. Sign our pledge, hosted by our partners at MoveOn.org, to reject the influence of RMGO and the radical right in Colorado--from Sen. Vicki Marble's racist babble to the radical, wasteful recalls in Colorado Springs and Pueblo.

In only two and a half weeks, Colorado faces a test: are we a state that elects disgraces like Vicki Marble while recalling good public servants and community leaders, or are we better than that?

Sign our pledge: show everyone that Sen. Marble and the extremists pushing these recalls do not speak for Colorado. We'll be in touch with more ways to take action in the critical weeks ahead.

Thank you,

Alan Franklin

Attached is the MOU for the Clinton foundation which needs your signature, it would be great if you could sign this and pdf it back to us this morning.

At the request of the Chairman and Ranking of the Senate Foreign Relations Comm., we plan to deliver a confidential copy of the MOU this afternoon and have a briefing on it tomorrow morning with Kerry and Lugar staff. So we'd like to have the signed copy to go to the Hill.

thanks,

Subject: sick of it

John:

I'm sick of John Boehner and the Tea Party.

They're tossing common sense out the window and playing politics with our country. Boehner is wasting OUR money suing the president! In fact the Tea Party - led by non-other than Sarah Palin - is calling for Obama's impeachment!

We need more Democrats in the House to stop this crazy talk once and for all. My friends at House Majority PAC - the only super PAC dedicated to electing more Democrats to Congress - are going to be the ones who make sure we can kick Boehner out of the speaker's chair and the rest of the Tea Party out of Congress.

There's so much we could do if President Obama had a Democratic majority - but we can't move the ball forward if House Majority PAC can't fight back against the onslaught of the Koch brothers' Tea Party money.

Hi John

Since we're moving forward on the Keystone decision, I think it would be helpful to have Mike on the 4:30pm policy call today. Not that we can script how Wednesday goes, but I think Mike can be helpful as we prep for the audience with this announcement.

Any objection to including him now? I just want to make sure you're ok.

I need your help. In all 50 states. Because I'm not taking a single primary voter or caucus goer for granted. From Alabama to Wyoming and every state in between, we are organizing hundreds of thousands of volunteers nationwide for this primary, building an organization that can win races up and down the ticket. Not just in the blue states, but in the so-called red states. Because every office matters--and every state party matters--every one. When our state parties our strong, we win. It's that simple. And I hope you will join me -- because we're building something that will last, and keep winning races long after next November.

Posted to Facebook. He's continuing to hit on the stand down order

<https://www.facebook.com/RepTreyGowdy/posts/1054497231273593>

The movie "13 Hours: The Secret Soldiers of Benghazi" is now in theaters. I have not seen it, but the Select Committee on #Benghazi has interviewed a majority of the authors who wrote the book on which the movie is based. If anyone is entitled to tell the world what happened there on the night of September 11, 2012, it's the heroes who fought and bled to save American lives and the people who witnessed the terrorist attacks firsthand. That's why the Benghazi Committee has interviewed seven eyewitnesses to the attacks that had never before been interviewed by Congress.

There are witnesses who say there was a "stand down" order, and there are witnesses who say there was not. I respect everyone who serves our country, especially those who did so in one of the most dangerous places in the world. I wasn't there, so the best I can do is tell the American people what the witnesses say and then let you determine what to believe.

As soon as the Benghazi Committee receives the documents it has requested, and as soon as we have been able to interview everyone we think we need to hear from, we will release a report that explains all of the new information we have learned from our investigation. The facts matter, and we're going to get them.

Hello John,

Ambassador Cui is requesting a meeting with you. Passing on the inquiry below from his team. Haven't bugged them for more detail about what he hopes to discuss, would be happy to do so if that's helpful. Copying Milia.

If you do take the meeting it would be great to mention how much we appreciated his embassy's assistance reaching out to Beijing offices for our CAP trips in March and June of this year.

Hope all is well on your other project.

Subject: Iraq escalation campaign

Friends,

I spent a little time today going through results from Senate and House races and comparing them to our Iraq work in 2007. (See lists below.) Of the 23 wins that the DCCC has so far, 19 of them were AAEL/Iraq Summer targets in 2007. This obviously constitutes the bulk of the House wins this year. Among these districts most of them had paid organizers in them, all of them had our calling program going into them, some of them had advertising in them. Most were Iraq Summer targets as well.

In the Senate, the Iraq Campaign in 2007 targeted seven senators in-cycle. Four of them were defeated. There were other Iraq Senate targets who were not in-cycle. And other competitive Senate races this year that were not Iraq campaign targets.

It is a record to be proud of.

While obviously the work we did was advocacy, the public did fulfill part of the promise of "political extinction."

With president-elect Obama we can now hope and pray for peace.

Subject: remember when?

John --

How easy it is to forget that at this time four years ago, I was considered a long-shot at best, being out-pollled and out-spent by an incumbent and dismissed by the pundits. But I remember when you came through for me.

Now, John Douglass – who has fought battles much tougher than my 2008 victory – has a real shot to defeat Congressman Robert Hurt and deliver a major blow to the corporate-controlled Congress that has disappointed and downright frightened 90% of the American people.

Sunday night is the most important FEC deadline John's campaign will face. This is the time when my campaign turned the tide, and everyone knows John has the tenacity and commitment to economic fairness to do his part. But all eyes right now are on us – will we have his back and give him the resources to win this race. They are just $7,450 away from their goal – and we have the power to get him over this line.

Can you chip in today? Even \$5 can go a long way to showing our people-powered movement can trump the billionaire-backed Republican attack on Medicare, moms, and the middle class. Join the fight today for Virginia's 5th.

Thank you for standing with us!

Dear Lisa,

Following up on our conversation in NYC last month, I've discussed with several friends the idea of creating a "Japanese Americans for Hillary" group to increase the contributions to Hillary's campaign.

Sheridan Tatsuno, a Silicon Valley entrepreneur based in San Jose who is a good friend from our student days at Harvard in the 1970s, has agreed to serve as Vice President of the organization, and I would serve as its President.

We'd like to launch it with a kick-off party in the San Francisco Bay Area in December. It will start small, but I think the group would have the potential of getting Japanese Americans who may otherwise not be interested to contribute to the campaign.

Keith Kamisugi has volunteered his time to create a website we can use to advertise, promote, and expand the organization and to solicit contributions.

I assume there are two ways to proceed: (1) create the organization as a stand-alone group independent of Hillary for America and (2) create the organization within the existing Ready for Hillary organization. Which do you prefer?

FYI below - CCI folks estimate the islands program (as envisioned/discussed on Friday) would cost us $1 million or less, and they believe UNDP would cover it.

This doesn't really answer our other question about what would happen to the CCI staff currently working on "clean energy". I'm checking on that.

I also can't tell the extent to which Ira has signed off on this, vs. to what extent this is being driven by CCI staff (Darien) without Ira's blessing.

Hi Ami,

As discussed, a few thoughts on a potential budget for an island energy program. These are very preliminary estimates, while the exact collaboration between the Clinton Foundation and UNDP is still being defined. I would be very happy to discuss further.

Cheers,

Darien

A few notes:

The first phase of a Clinton Foundation/UNDP island program (or competition) is expected to encompass three islands; one in the Caribbean, one in the Pacific Rim and one in the Indian Ocean/Africa region.

The bulk of the work will begin in June once the three initial islands are selected.

For illustrative purposes, names are attached below of CCI staff with significant expertise and longstanding private sector relationships in the relevant area. The assumption is the program will require 25% of their time, and they have all indicated a strong desire to participate -- if it can be arranged with C40. If it is instead necessary to hire new people, the salary component of the budget may increase as much as 2x.

The UNDP has indicated they are willing to cover Clinton Foundation costs of this magnitude (e.g. $500K-1mn) via existing technical assistance budgets. However, they have also indicated that they could support a much larger scope, as well as sign off faster, if the Clinton Foundation can contribute matching funds.

Subject: *ICYMI (Greenville News): Hillary Clinton: Invest in Women Who Work Hard*

Friends-

I hope all of you had a great weekend.

'Wanted to make sure you had a chance to read the op-ed Hillary Clinton authored that ran in today's Greenville News, highlighting South Carolina small business owners and the importance of investing and empowering women.

Thanks!

Op-Ed: Hillary Clinton: Invest in women who work hard

Greenville News
By Hillary Clinton
June 8, 2015

<http://www.greenvilleonline.com/story/opinion/contributors/2015/06/06/hillary-clinton-invest-women-work-hard/28569643/>

Ask anyone who owns a small business (or grew up around one) and they'll tell you there are two things you need to succeed: determination to see your business through tough times, and faith that if you keep at it, your efforts will pay off. On my last trip to South Carolina, I was fortunate to sit down with women business owners who have both. They accomplish incredible feats in the span of a single day, from running their business to running their child to band practice.

They're pulling their weight and then some — and they deserve a champion in their corner. I'm running for president because I want to be that champion. Helping women and families succeed isn't a side issue; it's fundamental to our country's economic future.

Take Kiki, who opened Kiki's Chicken and Waffles with her husband a few years ago. They got off to a slow start, but Kiki kept the faith and stuck with it. Thanks to word of mouth, social media and the red velvet waffles, things started to pick up. These days, business is going strong.

Then there's a mother-and-daughter team, Dana and Miss Rosa, who started a bakery with money from their 401(k) accounts. After years of hard work, the leap of faith they took to open their business is paying off. Their recipes are a secret handed down from generation to generation, but their coconut-pineapple cake is the talk of the town.

It's not enough to talk about economic growth and opportunity; we need to invest in women and families who work hard every day to make those words mean something. We need smart solutions that take into account how the economy has changed for women —and how women have changed the economy.

Take the issue of equal pay. Today, women are business owners and community leaders and heads of household. Forty percent of mothers with young children are now the sole or primary breadwinners in their family. It's no secret that too many women still earn less than men on the job, and for women of color, it's even worse. And there are things we can do right now to address the wage gap head-on in South Carolina and across the country.

We need to pass the Paycheck Fairness Act, which gives women the legal tools to fight discrimination at work.

We need to promote pay transparency to ensure women have the information they need to negotiate fairly. You can't stand up for equal pay if you don't know whether you're paid equally.

We need to raise wages for the lowest paid jobs in America and implement workplace policies like paid leave and flexible scheduling for parents. South Carolina is the second worst state in the country, including the District of Columbia, for working mothers; dead last for professional opportunities for women, measured by the number of female executives; and 47th in childcare quality. We should be making it easier for women to take care of their families and succeed at work.

And finally, with nearly 120,000 women-owned businesses in South Carolina, we need to make sure that women have the support they need to start and grow their businesses. That means cutting unnecessary red tape, increasing access to capital, simplifying tax filing, and expanding access to new markets.

Every person I meet on the campaign trail restores my own faith and determination that together, we can and must meet the challenges we face. I carry with me the stories of people like DayzJohna, a young woman I met who was celebrating her high school graduation. She joined the JROTC, and is now planning to serve our country in the military. I want DayzJohna to have every option open for her future — not just to be invited to the table, but to earn her place at the head.

This is the 21st century, and no one's potential should be limited by problems that are within our ability to solve.

Hillary Clinton is seeking the Democratic nomination for president. She has been the U.S. Secretary of State, a U.S. senator and the country's first lady.

Thanks Vanessa -

Research is done hiring for now - digital has a few more roles open (but will have another set open up at the end of summer). The vast majority of hires right now are technical - software engineers and data scientists, so the difficulty here is that there just aren't that many non-technical / generalist roles at the moment.

The best bet is to wait for potential advance assignment to start building relationship with that team, and also for you and I to take a look at field placements once we start ramping in the States - but that doesn't take place until around the winter holiday season. So for that we should check in around Thanksgiving, especially if there are particular states that you would be open to going to.

Thank you for your patience!

Something to think about today if you've read the scheduling memo: how are you leaning on NYC?

I peeked at Amtrak, and Northeast Regional trains that get you there for the 12 pm - 4 pm are:

8:10am - 11:30am is $104

7:17am - 10:35am is $73 (if you want to try for super early since we no longer trust amtrak

Getting you back, the options aren't great because it's a Friday:

4:42pm - 8:05pm is $143.65

5:39pm - 9:08pm is $180!

Acelas are all still open if you want to go that route, now that we're able to get reimbursements for sure, right?

Kristina

Can you recirculate the latest talking points to get out? Thanks!

There are two interesting segments which I recommend that you watch

The more important one deals with the recent Chetty/Saez work on mobility. Raj is interviewed. He's very good- no surprise.

The other deals with uncertainty of certain children to get food and discussion of the impact of that and stress, etc

Greetings, colleagues. If you've shopped for a house in northeast dc lately, you may have noticed that things have gotten pricey near H street. This seems a strange effect for one little trolley line, especially when the trolleys can't seem to stop hitting parked cars. Our speaker this week, Leah Brooks of the George Washington Univ. Trachtenberg School of Public Policy, will explain the economics of zoning, public transit, and related matters. It should be fun. And maybe we'll sneak aboard the test cars for a Trolly-riding field trip afterwards?

Prof. Brooks will present at noon on Friday, Nov. 6 at noon. (My thanks to the many correspondents who chipped in to buy me a new calendar). Her paper is too large to attach, but you can download it via the events calendar, <https://schedule.law.georgetown.edu/MasterCalendar/EventDetails.aspx?data=hHr80o3M7J7AxHan1zhrzYYPQKacJqBFEI53NPBbs0mg%2fTuKlrIgQsCiIyoKYMMyg>

SHOCK: Former Colorado Lt. Governor Jane Norton Calls Social Security "a Ponzi scheme"

Americans United for Change: "What Specifically Would Norton Change About a System That Has Successfully Kept America's Seniors from Poverty for Nearly 75 Years?"

Washington DC – Americans United for Change – the group formerly known as Americans United to Protect Social Security that led the national campaign to beat back President Bush's effort to privatize Social Security in 2005 – called on Former Colorado Lt. Governor Jane Norton to elaborate on her shocking remarks this week that: "With regard to Social Security, it has turned into a Ponzi scheme."

Tom McMahon, Acting Executive Director, Americans United for Change: "Former Colorado Lt. Governor Norton may or may not be aware that Social Security has operated successfully as the same pay-as-you-go system it always has since FDR signed it into law nearly 75 years ago. If Norton believes Social Security, which has been credited with pulling millions of seniors, survivors and disabled Americans out of poverty, is a "Ponzi scheme," she owes the people of Colorado a straight answer on what specifically she would change about the system or replace it with.

"For example, where does the Former Colorado Lt. Governor stand on proposals to privatize Social Security? There is currently a very serious alternative budget proposal circulating the halls of Congress – authored by US Representative Paul Ryan of Wisconsin, the ranking Republican on the House budget committee – that calls for replacing Social Security with risky private accounts on Wall Street and handing retirees' hard earned money over to the same greedy, reckless CEOs responsible for crashing our economy. It is essentially the same privatization proposal President Bush failed miserably to sell to the American people five years ago – a "scheme" if there ever was one. Former Lt. Governor Norton clearly has very extreme opinions on Social Security – so what is her opinion of Ryan's proposal?"

- Nobel Prize Winning Economist Paul Krugman: "In particular, Mr. Ryan offers a plan for Social Security privatization that is basically identical to the Bush proposals of five years ago. [New York Times, 2/11/10 ]
- WashingtonPost.com's Ezra Klein: "[U.S. Rep. Paul] Ryan's budget proposes reforms that are nothing short of violent. Medicare is privatized. Seniors get a voucher to buy private insurance, and the voucher's growth is far slower than the expected growth of health-care costs...And beyond health care, Social Security gets guaranteed, private accounts that CBO says will actually cost more than the present arrangement." [WashingtonPost.com, 2/1/09 ]

For Hillary Clinton, John Podesta Is a Right Hand With a Punch (NYT)

By Peter Baker

February 16, 2015

The New York Times

WASHINGTON -- Not that he's competitive or anything, but one Friday evening, John D. Podesta, a top adviser to President Obama, announced at a White House meeting that he would finish a 10-mile race that weekend in so many minutes. Needling Denis McDonough, the president's chief of staff, Mr. Podesta added: "I don't know what Denis is going to run."

Sure enough, Mr. Podesta finished in an hour and 26 minutes, beating Mr. McDonough, 21 years his junior, by six minutes. So as Mr. Podesta, 66, packed up his West Wing office last week, he jokingly blamed his departure on a subsequent loss. "I knew it was time to look at leaving the White House when Denis McDonough beat me in 12K Jingle Bell race," he said on Twitter.

Wiry, ascetic, profane and relentless, John Podesta has become the Democratic Party's marathon man in more ways than one. He helped save Bill Clinton's presidency from the fires of scandal and impeachment. He spent the last year trying to salvage Barack Obama's presidency from gridlock and malaise. And now he has handed in his White House pass to try to create a Hillary Rodham Clinton presidency from the ashes of her last failed campaign.

Perhaps no other unelected Democrat has shaped his party as much over the last two decades. As Mr. Clinton's chief of staff, as founder of the left-leaning Center for American Progress and most recently as Mr. Obama's counselor, Mr. Podesta has pushed his party toward a more aggressive approach to both policy and politics. "He's a competitive cat," Mr. McDonough said.

Mr. Podesta will need that competitive streak if he becomes chairman of Mrs. Clinton's presidential campaign, as expected. It will fall to him to impose discipline on the sprawling and fractious Clinton universe, including the candidate and her famously undisciplined husband. And it will fall to Mr. Podesta to manage relations between a president focusing on his legacy and his would-be successor focusing on the next election.

"He believes in and uses power in a way that many Democrats are too pusillanimous to do," said Paul Begala, a former Clinton White House aide and longtime friend. "He's not afraid to use power, and ruthlessly if necessary. I think he's as good a political guy as I've ever seen. He's the real thing."

To many Democrats, last week's blowup over fund-raising practices in the Clinton orbit emphasized the need for adult supervision, recalling the internal strife that helped doom Mrs. Clinton's primary bid against Mr. Obama seven years ago. Her 2008 campaign was riven by clashing rivals more intent on fighting each other than opposing candidates. For months, no single aide was truly in charge.

In recruiting Mr. Podesta, Mrs. Clinton is signaling that she will impose a more orderly structure this time. "When John speaks, both longtime Clinton supporters like me and people new to the circle will know that he's speaking for her," said Harold Ickes, a top adviser to both Clintons for years. "That's very important. That didn't happen in 2008, with some of the resulting consequences."

No one doubts Mr. Podesta's toughness. During his previous White House stint, colleagues joked that he was sometimes replaced by his evil twin "Skippy." And as someone who met Mr. Clinton during Joseph D. Duffey's unsuccessful Senate campaign in Connecticut in 1970, he is one of the few people with the longevity and stature to talk bluntly with the Clintons when they mess up. "The fact that he's saying it would carry an enormous amount of weight," Mr. Ickes said. "Both of them consider him a very straight shooter."

Republican operatives view Mr. Podesta as a liberal who will tug Mrs. Clinton away from the political center and make it harder for her to argue that she represents a fresh start after Mr. Obama's administration.

"You've got to admire someone willing to move from one sinking ship to another that's taking on water before it's even left port," said Michael Short, a spokesman for the Republican National Committee. "Voters overwhelmingly don't want a third term for President Obama's liberal agenda, but it's clear that's what Hillary Clinton and John Podesta intend to give them."

Mr. Podesta, who declined to be interviewed because he is "superstitious" about profiles, was born in Chicago to an Italian-American father and Greek-American mother. His father never finished high school and worked in factories, pushing his children to go to college. While Mr. Podesta is a practicing Catholic like his father, he embraces his mother's side as well, displaying Greek Orthodox icons in his White House office and adopting her love of cooking.

He has attributed his drive and temper to an ethnic upbringing during which yelling at the dinner table over politics was acceptable. He came of age in the tumult of the 1960s. While studying at Knox College in Illinois, he and other students “debated, ranted, chanted, protested,” as he put it in a 1998 commencement address, and he campaigned for Eugene McCarthy, the antiwar presidential candidate, in 1968.

Mr. Podesta earned a law degree from Georgetown University, where he still teaches on the side, and went to work for figures like Senators Patrick J. Leahy of Vermont and Tom Daschle of South Dakota. With his brother, Tony Podesta, he founded the Podesta Group, which has become a powerhouse lobbying firm with extensive corporate ties.

After going to work for Mr. Clinton, he rose to chief of staff, presiding over a White House rocked by revelations about the president’s sexual adventures with Monica Lewinsky. To keep the staff focused on business, he threatened to fire anyone caught talking about the scandal. But he understood before colleagues did that they would lose a House vote on impeachment despite popular support for Mr. Clinton, and he oversaw a strategy emphasizing the partisanship of the process to delegitimize the House vote and win a largely party-line acquittal in the Senate.

After leaving the White House, Mr. Podesta founded the Center for American Progress, an organization that married policy and politics. “He’s a policy wonk’s policy wonk,” said Sarah Rosen Wartell, a co-founder who added he was also “very much a doer.” Enlisting wealthy donors like George Soros and Herb and Marion Sandler, Mr. Podesta made the center and himself power players in liberal politics.

In 2008, Mr. Obama tapped Mr. Podesta to run his transition, to the chagrin of the loyalists who had helped beat Mrs. Clinton for the nomination. Mr. Obama tried to recruit him to join the administration, an entreaty he resisted until early 2014 when the presidency was flailing and he agreed to come on board for a year to help turn it around.

Mr. Podesta came with a strategy he and Ms. Wartell had outlined in a 2010 report about how a president could use his executive authority more aggressively without waiting for Congress. He also took on select projects, notably climate change and privacy in a big-data world.

For Mr. McDonough, the chief of staff now occupying the corner office with the patio and the fireplace that once belonged to Mr. Podesta, having a predecessor around, “a guy who’s seen it all,” proved a benefit. “John is always thinking a couple steps ahead,” Mr. McDonough said.

Passionate about environmental issues, Mr. Podesta used his perch to help advance new regulations on power plants, negotiate a carbon reduction agreement with China, create the world’s largest marine refuge in the Pacific Ocean and protect stretches of Alaskan waters and wildlife refuge from drilling.

“It’s not clear to me he slept,” said Carol M. Browner, formerly Mr. Obama’s top environmental adviser.

In a series of Twitter posts on Friday listing his 10 favorite memories in the Obama White House, he devoted half to environmental issues. A longtime aficionado of extraterrestrial lore -- he kept a little shrine to “The X-Files” in his Clinton White House office -- he also wrote that “my biggest failure of 2014: Once again not securing the #disclosure of the UFO files. #thetruthisstilloutthere.”

If he cannot find proof of alien life, then he will test the maxim that a two-term president and his party’s next nominee always end up at odds. Al Gore did not want Mr. Clinton campaigning for him in 2000, just as Senator John McCain did not want George W. Bush campaigning for him in 2008.

Mr. Podesta may serve as a bridge between Mr. Obama and Mrs. Clinton, hoping to ease the natural frictions that arise as a candidate tries to distinguish herself from a president with improving but still mediocre poll numbers. He has played the role before. He negotiated on Mr. Obama’s behalf an agreement with Mr. Clinton to limit his international activities while Mrs. Clinton served as secretary of state. And later, when Mr. Clinton went to North Korea to free two Americans, the White House sent Mr. Podesta along to keep tabs.

For the next two years, as he races another marathon as Mrs. Clinton’s top adviser, Mr. Podesta will have the advantage of the relationship he forged with Mr. McDonough, Mr. Obama’s top adviser.

“He’s a great runner,” Mr. McDonough said. “The guy’s made me much better at everything I do in this job. And he’s made me a better runner, too.”

Jim Webb weighing White House run ‘under right circumstances’ (Washington Times)

By Seth McLaughlin, THE WASHINGTON TIMES

February 16, 2015

The Washington Times

Former Virginia Sen. Jim Webb said Sunday that he will run for president in 2016 if he can be convinced that he can compete financially without selling out on the core issues he wants to push on the campaign trail.

The decorated Vietnam veteran and former Navy secretary, who has flirted with a White House run since November, said Sunday on C-SPAN’s “Washington Journal” that he is still trying to figure out if he could launch a viable bid.

“We’re listening, talking to people, about the issues, but also having to make a judgment about whether you can actually put together the type of funding to compete and still be independent,” Mr. Webb said, adding that he would enter the race “under the right circumstances.”

Mr. Webb, 69, is considered a long-shot for the Democratic nomination, with polls showing former Secretary of State Hillary Rodham Clinton well ahead of potential rivals, including Vice President Joe Biden and Sen. Elizabeth Warren of Massachusetts.

“It’s impossible to overstate how difficult it will be for a non-Hillary Clinton candidate to gain traction, donor money and endorsements the later we get in the cycle and the more her nomination feels like a fait accompli,” said Democratic strategist Christy Setzer. “But to the extent there’s room in the Democratic primary, it’s to the left of Clinton — not a space Webb naturally occupies.”

“And the rationale he’s identified for his candidacy — the need for the Democratic Party to fix its problem with white working class people — isn’t as much of an issue with Clinton or Elizabeth Warren, who tend to resonate with those audiences, much more so than Obama ever did,” Ms. Setzer said. “If Webb can gain any traction, he’ll need to carve out space on an issue Clinton’s not talking about or can’t talk about.”

Mr. Webb shook up Washington in 2006 when he came from behind in Virginia’s U.S. Senate race to topple Republican Sen. George Allen, helping Democrats regain control of the Senate.

Sporting his son’s combat boots on the campaign trail, Mr. Webb, a Republican-turned-Democrat who opposed the 2003 U.S.-led invasion of Iraq, called for a more clearly articulated foreign policy and for more economic fairness.

In the Senate, Mr. Webb muscled through a new GI Bill and led efforts on criminal justice reform. He also voted for the Wall Street bailout, known as TARP, as well as Obamacare.

“I believe we did need to move forward,” Mr. Webb said Sunday about his Obamacare vote. “The benefits in the bill were better then voting it down.”

Mr. Webb chose not to run for re-election in 2012, and last year released a book — his ninth — titled “I Heard My Country Calling.”

Mr. Webb said Sunday that the nation needs leadership, and warned the nation’s approach to international affairs and the use of military focus has “become extremely vague.”

“This notion of ‘responsibility to protect’ or ‘humanitarian intervention’ — it is not clear. The president could do that on Ireland tomorrow for all we know. it is a very loose doctrine and it is not healthy for the country,” the former senator said.

Mr. Webb said elected leaders must strengthen the nation’s immigration system by stemming the flow of illegal immigrants into the country and providing a path to citizenship for those who have been in the country 10 to 15 years and meet a certain set of criteria, such as learning English.

In addition, Mr. Webb said wealthy donors have an outsized influence on the political process.

“The power of the people who have made enormous wealth in the country to control the political process is obvious. It’s obvious,” he said. “And what happens to the average American who wants to vote for someone who wants to bring about change?”

Democratic strategist Jim Manley said he is a “big fan” of Mr. Webb, adding that it would be interesting to see how willing the combat veteran is to embrace the retail side of presidential politics.

“By all accounts, he really wasn’t having a lot of fun in the Senate,” Mr. Manley said. “So I am not sure how much fun he is going to have on the campaign trail.”

“Based on what I have seen over the years, he would be one of the more unorthodox candidates we have seen in many years,” the strategist said. “He marches to the beat of his own drummer, and I don’t expect that to change.”

Hillary pens begging notes for campaign (The Times)

The Times

The emails come several times a day, filling the inboxes of Democrat supporters, warning that this could be their “last chance” to donate to a presidential candidate who is yet to declare whether or not she intends to run. Seldom, if ever, in the history of American politics, has so much money been sought for a campaign that does not yet exist. Sent by a variety of pro-Hillary Clinton political groups that sometimes seem to be competing with one another, the fundraising efforts seek to lay the groundwork for the former secretary of state.

Handwritten notes from Mrs Clinton herself have reportedly been sent to more prominent donors and activists in the key states of Iowa and New Hampshire asking for support.

The demands for an undeclared candidate has aggrieved some potential supporters and left some of Mrs Clinton’s backers struggling to meet their fundraising targets and match the formidable efforts being made on behalf of the Republican Jeb Bush, who has announced that he is “exploring” a run for the presidency.

Mr Bush, who is said to be amassing a war chest of tens of millions of dollars, has given speeches and hosted a series of gala dinners. At one such event, held last week for 25 donors at the home of the private equity tycoon Henry Kravis, guests paid $100,000 each merely to attend, according to the Washington Post. He has won the support of a highly influential voice in American politics. At a charity event on Friday evening, Barbara Bush, the former first lady and mother of President George W Bush, who once declared that there had been “enough Bushes” in the White House, told her son, via Skype, that she would support him. “I changed my mind,” she said.

For her part, Mrs Clinton is not expected to declare her candidacy until the summer. “It has long been understood in Democrat activist circles that Hillary Clinton is going to run for president in 2016,” said Mary Tetreau, a writer and Democrat activist in New Hampshire, the second state in the season of primary contests in which candidates will seek the Democrat nomination. Activists in the state are used to wielding extraordinary influence, she said. In 2001, John Kerry wrote her a poem. In 2008, she met Mrs Clinton and Barack Obama.

She feels, however, that activists and donors would be happier this time to be supporting a candidate who was declared to be in the running.

“It’s a most unusual situation,” she said. Mrs Clinton’s Twitter account offers occasional enigmatic hints: a post noting that Philadelphia had won the right to host the Democratic Convention of 2016 on Saturday; and the letters “TBD” at the end of her personal biography — suggesting that her next role was “to be decided”.

Bumpy learning curve for likely candidates in 2016 race (AP)

By Nancy Benac

February 16, 2015

Associated Press

WASHINGTON (AP) — If you're an aspiring presidential candidate, says professional crisis manager Eric Dezenhall, right now is "a great time to take a pratfall because it's so far away from anything major."

That's a good thing because so many of the candidates' feet have been sliding out from under them.

The first six weeks of 2015 have featured mangled messages, snappishness, a bad hire and other flubs from the Republicans who would be president.

It's pretty much to be expected in the earliest stages of a campaign with just short of a gazillion potential candidates who haven't done this before.

In recent days:

—Former Florida Gov. Jeb Bush cut loose a new hire with a history of inappropriate comments about women, gays and blacks.

—New Jersey Gov. Chris Christie and Kentucky Sen. Rand Paul struggled to strike the right tone on whether parents should have to vaccinate their children.

—Wisconsin Gov. Scott Walker caught flak for ducking questions and picking a fight with the revered University of Wisconsin.

Candidates-in-waiting got peevisish. They gave underwhelming speeches. They tried to disavow their own words. And so on.

Do these responses sound like guys who are ready to be president?

Do you believe in evolution, Gov. Walker? "I'm going to punt on that one."

What about the Islamic State group, Gov. Christie? "Is there something you don't understand about, 'No questions?'"

It's part of the long and brutal learning curve for a presidential race, where even seasoned politicians find the scrutiny more intense than for lesser offices.

Dezenhall calls this the season of "gaffe congestion" for would-be candidates and says 20 months out from Election Day 2016 is a good time to get them over with.

In an earlier time, even eight years ago or 12, none of this recent drama would have been much more than a paragraph in the saga that is a presidential race.

"Now, thanks to Twitter and the immediacy of political commentary, mistakes are much more painful," says Ari Fleischer, a communications consultant who was President George W. Bush's press secretary.

Still, he says, the best candidates will learn from their early stumbles and quickly regain their stride.

Jeb Bush's team probably will check out future job applicants more carefully. A less bombastic Christie was back working in Iowa not long after snapping at reporters in London. Walker turned to Twitter to at least explain, somewhat, his thinking on evolution after his refusal to answer a question on the subject during his own trip to London became a distraction.

"Much of what's happening right now won't be remembered a year from now or in a general election," says Stephanie Cutter, a veteran of Democratic presidential campaigns for Barack Obama and John Kerry. She said part of the problem may be that potential candidates don't yet have a full complement of campaign staff.

But she also said that some of the recent commotion, such as the vaccine flap, could signal a dynamic that will carry forward in the race as GOP candidates try to cater to primary voters without tacking so far to the right that it causes them trouble in the general election.

It's also clear that even if regular voters aren't tuned in yet, the potential candidates are being sized up by donors, activists and potential staff who will be crucial to helping them run an effective campaign.

Mo Elleithee, communications director for the Democratic National Committee, predicts that some of the recent GOP missteps could turn out to be particularly telling for voters in the long run.

Christie and Paul, with their bluster and argumentative interaction with the press, are “letting people see who they really are,” he said.

For now, Democrats can largely sit back and enjoy the GOP clatter because expected candidate Hillary Rodham Clinton has the experience of the 2008 Democratic primaries on her resume and is expected to face little primary opposition this time.

But Fleischer said even Clinton will have an adjustment to make if she jumps back into the presidential mosh pit after eight years of “the paid speaker’s life, which is scrutiny-free, and the charmed life of a secretary of state, where you’re not covered in the same way you are in political campaigns.”

Dezenhall said one skill that candidates on both sides will need to learn early on is damage control — both how to respond and what safely can be ignored — because errors are inevitable.

“Politics used to be about where you stood,” he said. “Now, it’s about what you stepped in.”

Hillary Clinton's talent problem (CNN)

By Ron Friedman

February 16, 2015

CNN

(CNN) Last week, in an unusually public display of campaign discord, a clash between Hillary Clinton political operatives erupted in full view when David Brock, a liberal activist and staunch Clinton supporter, announced his resignation from the board of Priorities USA, a pro-Clinton super PAC.

Brock was not going quietly. His resignation letter contained a bold claim -- that leaders at Priorities USA were feeding newsgroups devastating stories about his fundraiser, undermining his ability to raise money. By Brock's account, his colleagues within Team Hillary were orchestrating his demise.

Setting aside a debate on the accuracy of Brock's assertion, there's an interesting psychological perspective to be raised about why campaign squabbles like this are already cropping up for the Clinton campaign and why we can expect more of them.

Unlike her competitors on the Republican side, Clinton is the clear frontrunner for Democrats. And while intuitively we might expect that fewer primary contenders would allow Clinton to snatch up her party's most talented consultants, enabling her to form a stronger, more disciplined campaign team, research suggests that too much talent in a group can actually undermine performance.

We often assume that adding more talented players to a team will lead to better outcomes. But a close look at the data reveals a different story.

Last year, a research team led by Roderick Swaab, professor of organizational behavior at INSEAD, released a paper looking at the relationship between the percentage of stars on an NBA team and the team's win-loss record. The results were striking. A greater concentration of stars did predict more wins, but only up to a point.

As it turned out, the teams with the most stars performed dramatically worse than those with considerably less talent. (Think 2004 Los Angeles Lakers, whose roster included likely hall-of-famers Shaquille O'Neil, Kobe Bryant, Karl Malone and Gary Payton, being nearly swept in the finals by the Detroit Pistons -- a team whose best-known player was Ben Wallace.)

And it's not just basketball. When Swaab and his colleagues turned their attention to World Cup soccer teams, they found results that were eerily comparable. Once again, too much talent predicted fewer wins.

Researchers at Harvard Business School discovered a similar pattern among Wall Street analysts. When star performers are grouped together, they produce reports that clients find less impressive than teams with a more diverse pool of analysts.

All of which raises an obvious question: Why are so many talent-heavy teams falling short?

The reason is simple. Top performers are accustomed to status, and status is a limited resource. When stars are pooled together, they tend to compete with one another for status, and that competition is distracting. It gets in the way of effective teamwork.

Hillary Clinton's unparalleled political clout has cleared the field among Democrats, giving her the opportunity to build a political all-star team. But paradoxically, having unrestricted access to top-notch operatives might be a significant weakness.

There's a tipping point for talent. And Team Hillary may be on the wrong side of it.

So what can you do when you have a talent-heavy team and need to ensure collaboration? Recent studies on the psychology of teamwork offer insights that can help any group collaborate more effectively. Here are a few that may help the Clinton's team establish a more cohesive unit.

The first tip: Establish a very clear hierarchy. Clinton has resisted officially declaring her candidacy, which is sound strategy considering that she's the favorite. However, given the high-powered makeup of her team, a lack of formal hierarchy early on can be problematic in the long term. When structure is wanting and power is up for grabs, competition and status conflicts arise more easily.

A related insight: Provide differentiated roles to team members, right at the start. We work better with others when our job is unique and doesn't overlap with others' responsibilities. Too much similarity between jobs leads to competition, which can hinder collaboration.

The Washington Post recently reported that some senior staff members are signing on without salary, start date or job descriptions. Presidential campaigns are short and intense, and no one expects a formal HR orientation process. Yet bringing people on without specifying their roles neglects getting their buy-in and makes it more likely they'll reach beyond their prescribed function later on.

Finally, when working with a talent-rich team, instead of simply rewarding individual performance, it's wise to establish group goals that can only be achieved when teammates band together. Group goals force people to view their success as a function of their team's performance, which is critical.

As Swaab, lead author of the "too much talent effect" research puts it, when dealing with a team of all-stars, "the bottom line is you have to create a more cooperative mindset."

There's little question that Clinton's campaign team will be among the most experienced and talent-rich in the history of politics. And like any high-achieving group, its members stand to benefit from leveraging the science of top performance.

Subject: Why 2016 could be shattering for Republicans

Why 2016 could be shattering for Republicans

By Stanley B. Greenberg, author of the new book "America Ascendant."

Election Day 2016 will produce a shattering crash larger than anything the pundits anticipate because the revolutionary economic and social changes occurring in the United States have now pushed both the burgeoning new majority and the conservative Republicans' counterrevolution beyond their tipping points.

The United States is being transformed by revolutions remaking the country at an accelerating and surprising pace. Witness the revolutions in technology, the Internet, big data and energy, though just as important are the tremendous changes taking place in immigration, racial and ethnic diversity, the family, religious observance and gender roles. These are reaching their apexes in the booming metropolitan centers and among millennials.

Read on Washington Post
Order on America Ascendant on Amazon

As the revolutions interact, they are accelerating the emergence of a new America. Consider that nearly 40 percent of New York City's residents are foreign-born, with Chinese the second-largest group behind Dominicans. The foreign-born make up nearly 40 percent of Los Angeles's residents and 58 percent of Miami's. A majority of U.S. households are headed by unmarried people, and, in cities, 40 percent of households include only a single person. Church attendance is in decline, and non-religious seculars now outnumber mainline Protestants. Three-quarters of working-age women are in the labor force, and two-thirds of women are the breadwinners or co-breadwinners of their households. The proportion of racial minorities is approaching 40 percent, but blowing up all projections are the 15 percent of new marriages that are interracial. People are moving from the suburbs to the cities. And in the past five years, two-thirds of millennial college graduates have settled in the 50 largest cities, transforming them.

Shifting attitudes were underscored in this year's Gallup Poll when 60 to 70 percent of the country said gay and lesbian relations, having a baby outside of marriage, sex between an unmarried man and woman, and divorce are all “morally acceptable.”

The United States is emerging out of its revolutions as racially blended, immigrant, multinational and multilingual — and diversity is becoming more central to our multicultural identity.

Further, these revolutionary transformations have accelerated the growth of a new majority coalition of racial minorities, single women, millennials and seculars. Together, these groups formed 51 percent of the electorate in 2012, but our analysis of census survey data and exit poll projections indicates that they will comprise fully 63 percent in 2016. With these growing groups each supporting Hillary Clinton by more than 2 to 1 in today's polls, it is fair to say that the United States has reached an electoral tipping point.

The Republican Party's battle to defeat this new majority has reached a tipping point, too. The brand of the Republican Party today has probably not been as tarnished since the Watergate era.

Republicans have joined a ferocious and intensifying decade-long counterrevolution in an attempt to stop this new majority from governing successfully. In 2004, George W. Bush campaign strategist Karl Rove launched the battle for American values when he gave up on the so-called swing voter and worked to engage millions more evangelicals. That has required pouring ever more fuel on the fire — including warning of Armageddon if the liberal Democrats were to govern.

This battle has left the Republicans with mostly married voters, as well as the oldest, most rural and most religiously observant voters in the country. That creates formidable odds against its winning an electoral college majority.

It has also left a Republican Party where three-quarters of its base voters are tea party supporters, evangelicals or religiously observant. That in turn has catapulted to the top of the Republican presidential race candidates who promise to challenge this new America before it's too late.

That this counterrevolution has reached its own tipping point is evident in the shrinking proportion of people who think of themselves as conservative. When Republicans challenged President Obama in the off-year elections of 2010, 46 percent of the country was conservative at the high point. That figure is now 37 percent.

For Republicans, 2016 will prove to be no normal election, because it will confirm that the new America is here and that the counterrevolution has lost. That is why I expect the result to be shattering for the Republican Party as we know it.

But it may not prove to be so shattering for the Republican Party that emerges afterward, or for the republic.

For the GOP, 2016 may look like 1984 did for the Democratic Party. It emerged divided out of a bitter primary, and the Democrats' mainstream candidate, Walter Mondale, lost in a landslide. Afterward, the modernizers got the upper hand. They might well have elected Gary Hart in 1988 and did elect Bill Clinton in 1992.

It is easy to imagine, then, that after the coming shattering election, some Republican leaders will repudiate this campaign's anti-immigrant and anti-Muslim appeals and actively embrace the United States as an immigrant nation. Other leaders might accept the sexual revolution and the new gender roles and work to help the modern working family. Others might embrace again the need for national investment in education and modern infrastructure.

That would allow a different kind of debate within the Republican Party and, perhaps, a different kind of politics in the country.

Attachments: ACLU Executive Director Position.docx

Dear John,

Thanks again for all your help with the Clinton Foundation and forestry programs. We're continuing to make progress, despite the slow pace of international negotiations!

I'm writing to ask if you have any thoughts or suggestions for possible candidates for the position of the Executive Director of the National Capital Area ACLU. Johnny Barnes, the long time ED of the ACLU-NCA, is retiring and a good friend of mine, Debby Carliner, is chair of the search committee.

I've attached the job description. I thought with your broad knowledge of the civil rights community you might have some ideas. I'll be happy to pass on any suggestions.

Thanks for the help.

Sincerely,
Jim

John,

This is not good.

A brand new poll found that New York Republican voters are FIRED UP for November. But Democrats? Not so much.

We're in BIG trouble if "Midterm Democrats" don't show up to the polls – we've lost BIG that way before (remember 2010?)

I'm fired up, and I know you are, but to get our fellow Democrats' attention before Election Day rolls around, we need to get a strong ground game going – that means knocks on doors, envelopes in mailers and ads on the air. But we can't do any of it without the help of donors who CARE.

Hi Tina-

John's schedule today got a little messy with the Amtrak accident. He's just boarded a bus to Bethesda. He has calls and a meeting when he gets to DC but may be able to call you from the bus if the environment is conducive. If not, Eryn can try to facilitate tomorrow when John is in DC. +Eryn.

Thanks!

Will let Nick and Dan give more color but it appears as though her speech was well-received by both guests and reporters in the room. They appreciated that she was funny and several people said they were impressed she addressed the elephant in the room and was self-deprecating. Andrea mitchell, laura meckler, jon allen, anne gearan, phil rucker, karen tumulty in unison agreed that she did the right thing and appreciated that she "acknowledged" that she has a problematic relationship with the press. Nick, hrc and I all had uncomfortable exchanges with Carolyn Ryan. Carl Hulse said some NYT staff was betting that she would cancel her appearance tonight. Also, we noted at least one young tracker. And she was audio taped the entire mix and mingle by amy chozick who may as well have been sitting in her lap....

Subject: Just heard from JJ office

Sarah Farnsworth asked me to let both of you know that JJ is leaving the country early Friday for a Quartet meeting in Sharm el Sheikh and will not be back until late Sunday. Sarah understanding is that the principals have spoken and our principal needs to make a decision and convey it to JJ. Our principal understands JJ's preference, but JJ has not said no to the other. We have given Sarah the forms, but not activated a deep dive as of yet.

Subject: Prince Philip to Accept 2015 Metropolitan Chrysostomos Award

WASHINGTON, DC, September 25, 2015 - Prince Philip, the Duke of Edinburgh and husband of Queen Elizabeth, will accept the Washington Oxi Day Foundation's 2015 Metropolitan Chrysostomos Award posthumously for his mother Princess Alice. This award presentation, part of the Foundation's celebration of courage in the fight for freedom and democracy, will take place in Washington, DC on October 28 -- the exact day 75 years ago that the Prime Minister of Greece answered the Axis Forces' demand for surrender with the famous single word "OXI" or "No".

The Washington Oxi Day Foundation is recognizing the extraordinary courage Princess Alice displayed as she risked certain death. Princess Alice shielded an entire Jewish family, the Cohens, across the street from Gestapo Headquarters in Nazi-occupied Greece during World War II. Periodically, the Nazis came to her home searching for Jewish people but she masterfully protected them each time she was questioned. Princess Alice is recognized in Israel at Yad Vashem as one of the "Righteous Among The Nations".

Princess Alice of Battenberg married Prince Andrew of Greece and Denmark and lived in Greece, where her son Prince Philip was born. After WWII, Princess Alice stayed in Greece and established the order of nuns called the Christian Sisterhood of Martha and Mary. She returned during the last two years of her life to Buckingham Palace and remained a Greek Orthodox Nun.

Prince Philip joins a highly esteemed list of world famous individuals who have accepted the Washington Oxi Day Foundations' Metropolitan Chrysostomos Award, which commemorates courageous defiance against Adolf Hitler's seemingly unstoppable Nazis. Other award recipients of international note include: former President of Israel Shimon

Here is the new corrected proposed email. I apologize for not getting it right the first time. It was so noisy on the street that I could well have gotten half of this wrong.

Dear Hansjörg,

I'm sorry I missed your party last weekend. I heard it was a great event.

As I promised, I interviewed the person proposed to run the campaign communications hub we discussed at the last board meeting. After a long search and many discussions of what would work best to aid the campaigns the Foundation is funding, the staff selected Arkadi Gerney who has been running CAP Action. After the interview I am convinced he is an excellent choice. His skill set fits well with what I believe is needed to successfully run the campaign and communications "war room" with our grantees. Because there will be some growing pains as with all new ventures, I recommend we commit to three years (assuming no performance issues) to allow enough time to provide proof of concept. I recommend going forward and hiring him.

Hi John,

Thank you for the call yesterday. I apologize if this proposed email is not what you are hoping for. I was standing on the street when you called and didn't have a pen so it is from a very bad memory. I also added some extraneous detail because I fear he won't remember the whole concept. I'm seeing him on October 6 so if you send this before then I should be able to lock it down. Possible email:

Hello-

Just some thoughts before her decision. I think labor will be good with #2, I would just ask that she lead heavy with her position to repeal and keep the explanation of the $250k short and direct. Since this is a political issue as much as policy, I just want to see us be able to maximize that political impact. Leading hard on the fact that she got to repeal, I think does that.

Last, if HRC does sign off on this I think a smart roll out will also help maximize. For example, if we know the timing of when she will make the announcement some private prep calls to some select Presidents by John Podesta (or other senior staff, Ann) could be helpful. I'm thinking Lee Saunders, Randi, Schaitberger, Lily and Sean McGarvey. Maximize the political bang.

Thank you for all of your work on this! Great memo.

Subject: My backstage with Barack story

John --

Barack likes to tell a story about the two of us standing backstage before his speech at the 2004 Democratic Convention.

The way he tells it, he was too busy in the days before the convention to feel any pressure -- but about an hour before the speech, I could tell he was getting a little nervous.

To break the tension, right before he went out on stage I leaned in close and said, "Just don't screw it up, buddy."

We laughed. And then Barack brought the house down.

This year, the house is going to be a lot bigger. More than 75,000 people will be in Denver to be part of this important moment, and I want to tell you about an opportunity to join Barack backstage before his acceptance speech.

Ten supporters who make a donation in any amount by midnight this Thursday, July 31st, will be selected to fly to Denver, spend a couple of nights in a hotel, participate in the convention, and go Backstage with Barack. Each supporter who is selected will also get to bring a guest along to share the experience.

Make a contribution of $5 or more today and you could have your own Backstage with Barack story to tell:

<https://donate.barackobama.com/backstage>

Barack's speech at the convention will be a culmination of the unlikely journey that has brought all of us so far over the past 17 months.

He will call on us to come together and work for change -- not just to win this election, but to make things better for all Americans.

Seeing it in person will be a once-in-a-lifetime experience. I'm excited about being there, and if you make a donation of $5 or more before the deadline, you could join Barack backstage:

<https://donate.barackobama.com/backstage>

Thanks for everything you've done to get us here.

Michelle

If you do not wish to make a donation, you can still be selected to join Barack at the Democratic National Convention in Denver. Learn more here.

(Washington, DC) The District Department of Transportation (DDOT) and the Federal Highway Administration (FHWA) invite you to attend a public meeting for the Union Station to Georgetown Transportation Improvements Environmental Assessment (EA).

What: Public Meeting for the Union Station to Georgetown Transportation EA and Section 106

When: Thursday, October 2, 2014

6 p.m. to 8 p.m.

Where: Carnegie Library at Mt. Vernon Square L'Enfant Map Room
801 K Street NW

Transit: Mount Vernon Sq. 7th St. - Convention Center
Metro Station (Green and Yellow Lines)

The purpose of this meeting is to afford the public an opportunity to discuss the project and provide their views regarding the multi-modal transportation alternatives being considered for all modes (for example, streetcar, vehicular, transit, bicycle and pedestrian) in the corridor. An EA is being prepared for the project per the requirements of the National Environmental Policy Act (NEPA) and Section 106 of the National Historic Preservation Act.

We're not in a good place here, John. We've been in the office since 6 am this morning working our tails off to make sure that we don't let Democrats down. But John, it looks like our best still isn't cutting it.

I just pulled the numbers and from what I can tell we still have about $21,010 left to hit our goal.

Ensuring A Smooth And Effective Presidential Transition

The Administration's Preparations for the Transition are Unprecedented in Scope and Depth

Today, the Transition Coordinating Council (TCC) will meet for the second time, continuing the Administration's comprehensive transition efforts. The peaceful transfer of power from one Presidential Administration to the next is a hallmark of American democracy. With our Nation at war, our homeland targeted by terrorist adversaries, and our economy facing serious challenges, the Administration is committed to establishing and executing a transition plan that minimizes disruption, maintains continuity, and addresses the major changes in government since the 2000 transition, including the Intelligence Reform and Terrorism Prevention Act of 2004, as well as the creation of the Department of Homeland Security, the Director of National Intelligence, and the Homeland Security Council.

- The TCC will help ensure that the Administration's efforts are comprehensive and well coordinated. The TCC membership includes the President's Chief of Staff and others with authority and expertise in areas that affect a Presidential transition, as well as senior officials in critical areas such as national security, homeland security, and our economy.
- Executive Order 13476, which was signed by President Bush in October and created the TCC, contains a provision which allows the TCC to "obtain a wide range of facts and information on prior transitions and best practices" by seeking the expertise of outside individuals. The experts attending today's meeting are from both parties and varying backgrounds. They include:
  - Andy Card, former Chief of Staff to President George W. Bush and Director of the 1992 Bush-Clinton Transition
  - Mack McLarty, former Chief of Staff to former President Clinton
  - Jennifer Dorn, National Academy of Public Administration
  - Norm Ornstein, American Enterprise Institute
  - Max Stier, Partnership for Public Service

This Administration's Transition Preparations Are Comprehensive

The President has directed his Cabinet and staff to be forward-leaning in all of their efforts to ensure a smooth and effective transition. It has never been more critical that a transition from one Administration to the next be as seamless as possible. This Administration has gone to great lengths to prepare the Federal government for the transition to a new Administration and to help the major-party candidates prepare for a Presidential transition. For example:

- Federal agencies and White House offices are preparing briefings for the President-elect's team on significant pending policy issues as well as the structure of those agencies and offices.
- Career executives within each agency who may assume added responsibilities before the arrival of new political appointees have been identified, briefed, and included in a wide range of preparatory activities. Office of Management and Budget officials continue to meet with these key career officials to detail their responsibilities and to clarify the transition process.
- Individual agencies are taking agency-specific steps:
  - The Department of Defense's Transition Task Force is preparing to host transition teams of the President-elect.
  - The Department of Homeland Security is holding conferences and exercises designed to boost incident management capabilities and cross-departmental awareness.

On October 9-10, the Secretary of State held an offsite meeting with senior State Department and USAID leadership to discuss transition planning and foreign policy and management challenges facing the new Administration. The State Department is also preparing a list of pending political/economic commitments arranged by country.

The Administration Is Engaged In A Nonpartisan, Comprehensive, And Unprecedented Effort To Help The Two Major Party Candidates Prepare To Govern

The Administration has reached out and provided services to both campaigns. Changes made in the 2004 Intelligence Reform and Terrorism Prevention Act allow the Administration to work with the major-party candidates before the election. This Administration is doing more than has ever been done to help the major-party candidates prepare. The White House began working with transition representatives of both major-party candidates during the summer and has met regularly with them since then by phone and in person.

The Administration's efforts to prepare the major party candidates include:

- The Office of the Director of National Intelligence has provided intelligence briefings to the candidates. These briefings are continuing and are being supported by the entire intelligence community.
- Senior Administration officials have remained in close contact with the major-party candidates in recent months regarding important issues of national security and our current financial crisis.

- The Office of Government Ethics has trained additional staff to prepare for an increase in financial disclosure filings and has held extensive meetings with both campaign transition teams to discuss financial disclosure rules.

The Administration has also worked to facilitate a speedy security clearance process for key transition personnel. Historically, one of the biggest challenges faced by incoming Administrations has been the time required to obtain security clearances for key officials. The 2004 Intelligence Reform and Terrorism Prevention Act allows major-party candidates to request clearances for key transition personnel before the election so that those individuals will have the necessary clearances should their candidate win.

- The White House worked with Department of Justice, the Federal Bureau of Investigation, and the transition teams to create an orderly and efficient process. To ensure a confidential process, the White House does not have access to the numbers and identities of cleared individuals. Nevertheless, the White House confirms regularly with the transition teams that the process meets the transition teams' needs.

All interactions with the candidates and their transition teams have been equitable. The cornerstone of the Administration's contact has been uniformity of access. Materials, meetings, and guidance given to one transition team are simultaneously offered to the other.

NSN Daily Update: A Violent Weekend around the World 7/28/08

This weekend saw a spate of violence, with terrorist attacks in Iraq, Turkey and India. These attacks remind us of the terrible appeal of nationalism and extremism. American foreign policy should focus on containing and providing alternative outlets for these forces. Unfortunately, the Bush Administration's invasion of Iraq and its ill-conceived foreign policies have often done more to exacerbate the problem than address it.

Separate bombings kill 43 in Baghdad and Kirkuk. On Monday, bombs exploded during a Shi'a pilgrimage in Baghdad and a Kurdish rally in northern Iraq, killing at least 43 and wounding many more. In Baghdad, a roadside bomb and three suicide attackers exploded in quick succession among Shi'a pilgrims making their way to a shrine. According to police and hospital officials, the bombs killed at least 28 people and wounded 92. In a separate attack at a Kurdish rally in the northern city of Kirkuk, a bomb killed at least 15 people and wounded 170 others. The rally was held in protest of the draft provincial elections law because the Kurds were against the power-sharing formula in the oil-rich city of Kirkuk. The law was vetoed by the Iraq's Kurdish President, Jalal Talibani. AP, [7/28/08 ]

Bombings in Turkey leave 17 dead. Two Sunday evening blasts in eastern Istanbul left 17 people dead and more than 150 wounded. No one has claimed responsibility for the bombings, the deadliest in the country since 2003. However, Turkish police are carefully looking at the separatist Kurdistan Workers Party (PKK) for any involvement in the attacks. Reuters, [7/28/08 ]

Two waves of attacks shook India this weekend. A series of bombings killed 49 and wounded more than 200 in Bangalore and Ahmadabad in India Friday and Saturday. A group calling itself the Indian Mujahedeen claimed responsibility for the attacks. The attack on Ahmadabad, capital of the western province Gujarat, consisted of as many as 20 small coordinated explosions. The weekend attacks underscored the high level of violence in India. The National Counterterrorism Center in Washington concluded last year that from January 2004 to March 2007, 3,674 people had died in India from terrorist attacks, second only to Iraq during the same period. Chair Podesta

I dont know if you get these! Im a friend of John West in Houston Tx-he met you in Chicago-a super volunteer!

In 08 I was hillary's lead organizer for Houston Tx. And she personally before the party here embraced me and honored me for all I did!

I 2 x this round submitted resumes to no avail-I have a large following here-large. Burns Strider and others have fought for me to have a role here. So far no avail. Surely a great mna like you can help make sure my name isnt forgotten?!

Hillary is in houston tmrw-it breaks my heart I cant be there-Im broke from all the hard work I do right now. She means so much to my career etc.. Hope you can help me somehow friend in these issues-Art Pronin, Pres Meyerland Area Democrats-largest in tx

JUSTJOBS HOSTS GERMAN LABOR
MINISTER, TOP ECONOMISTS FOR GLOBAL DIALOGUE ON WAGES

In Ankara, Turkey last week, the JustJobs Network hosted its annual summit in collaboration with Prakash Loungani of the International Monetary Fund's Jobs & Growth Group. The conference, "Squaring Higher Wages and Competitiveness," included a high-level luncheon with German Minister of Labour and Social Affairs Andrea Nahles.

Participants at the dialogue included Catherine L. Mann, Chief Economist for the OECD; Subir Gokarn, Director of Research for Brookings India and former Deputy Governor of the Reserve Bank of India; and Edward Gresser, Acting Assistant USTR for Economics & Policy at the U.S. Trade Representative.

Minister Nahles asserted that "there is both a moral and economic case for just jobs." She spoke candidly on Europe's responsibility to refugees and asylum seekers: "We are in a position to rise to the occasion. And here again just jobs come in. Because work is the key to integration and participation in society."

NEW JJN VOLUME: BOOSTING WAGES IS A SOCIAL AND ECONOMIC IMPERATIVE

Source: CIFOR

At its annual summit in Ankara, the JustJobs Network released a new volume – Global Wage Debates: Politics or Economics? – to guide policymakers grappling with the question of how to increase workers' earnings and balance competitiveness.

The report finds that boosting wages is a social and economic imperative, and that sustained wage growth is key to tackling inequality and promoting growth in a global economy plagued by weak aggregate demand. Its release garnered attention from Turkish and global media outlets.

The 10-chapter volume is co-authored by the member institutions of the JustJobs Network, bringing together new insights on minimum wage setting, the nexus of wages and productivity, and the importance of compensation ladders in promoting economic mobility.

"That bright blue ball rising over the moon's surface, containing everything we hold dear – the laughter of children, a quiet sunrise, all the hopes and dreams of posterity – that's what's at stake. That's what we're fighting for. And if we remember that, I'm absolutely sure we'll succeed." - President Barack Obama, June 25, 2013

Please join us in celebrating Jess Maher's six years of service to the Administration and the Nation.
Particularly her work on behalf of that bright blue ball rising over the moon's surface.
Not to mention at least 22 years of not taking sh*t from anyone.

Mercedes-Benz terms and conditions:

The bonus mileage offer and incentives are only available to members who are MileagePlus Premier members at the time of an eligible transaction. To receive the miles or incentives, the MileagePlus Premier member must log in to united.com/mercedes using their MileagePlus credentials and print out a Savings Certificate to present to the dealer for the applicable car of their choice. In order to be eligible for the bonus mileage offer and incentives, the member must obtain a Savings Certificate prior to the transaction. The mileage offer is valid only on a new vehicle purchase or lease of any 2014 E-Class or any 2014 CLS-Class through September 30, 2014. Upon completion of the sale or lease, these bonus miles will be posted to a member's account approximately 6-8 weeks after the date of completion of the eligible transaction. These offers are not valid for any purchases already completed. A member may only take advantage of the offers one time per calendar year.

Miles accrued, awards, and benefits issued are subject to change and are subject to the rules of the United MileagePlus® program, including without limitation the Premier® program (the "MileagePlus Program"), which are expressly incorporated herein. Please allow 6-8 weeks after completed qualifying activity for miles to post to your account. United® may change the MileagePlus Program including, but not limited to, rules, regulations, travel awards and special offers or terminate the MileagePlus Program at any time and without notice. United and its subsidiaries, affiliates and agents are not responsible for any products or services of other participating companies and partners. Taxes and fees related to award travel are the responsibility of the member. Bonus award miles, award miles and any other miles earned through non-flight activity do not count toward qualification for Premier status unless expressly stated otherwise. The accumulation of mileage or Premier status or any other status does not entitle members to any vested rights with respect to the MileagePlus Program. All calculations made in connection with the MileagePlus Program, including without limitation with respect to the accumulation of mileage and the satisfaction of the qualification requirements for Premier status, will be made by United Airlines® and MileagePlus in their discretion and such calculations will be considered final. Information in this communication that relates to the MileagePlus Program does not purport to be complete or comprehensive and may not include all of the information that a member may believe is important, and is qualified in its entirety by reference to all of the information on the united.com website and the MileagePlus Program rules. United and MileagePlus are registered service marks. For complete details about the MileagePlus Program, go to united.com.

I suspect you have a lot on your mind this Holiday Season and it does not include the rural vote. But please allow a thought for your consideration and discussion at a later date.

The key to maximizing the rural vote is to integrate agriculture into your larger economic message. A ten point plan for agriculture is no longer the way to go. Instead, the word "agriculture" should be integrated into your economic message, trade discussion, foreign policy and energy policy. A shout to agriculture must be a part of any announcement that may be forthcoming in the spring. Americans spend less than 10% of our disposable income on food, the lowest in the history or the world, which gives us the resources needed to drive our consumer economy. Rural Americans and farmers just want to know that HRC respects them and thinks they are still important to the future American economy. We need a vibrant farm economy from the large commercial farms that feed the world to the small farms that feed the community. And, as she said at State, we must support sound science and technology if we are going to meet the challenge of food security.

All the best in 2015, Marshall (Remember, Bruce Braley would be a Senator if he had lost the rural vote by only 20 %.)

Madame Secretary,

Quick update for you:

(1) Brian's video is great and it's being emailed tomorrow to launch the Briefing Room website.

(2) We met again today to brainstorm the speech outline with Dan and he is going to have a draft outline for the team by COB tonight. We will reconvene again tomorrow to give him feedback and our goal is to get a revised outline to you tomorrow COB. We will then do a call with you to discuss it and Dan will then create an initial draft with Lissa and Joel.

Kristina will also send an overview memo with our goals, objectives and plan for the launch overall.

Let me know if you have any questions!

Robby

Hey John,

Greg is a good friend of mine from college who is a legitimate big wig in the logistics of marketing to younger demographics all around the country, and he's interested in helping Hillary.

As you know, I don't make a habit of forwarding stuff like this to you. Greg is an extremely capable and hard working guy, and I think he really is in a position to make a significant impact for you guys. So if you're looking for marketing logistics support, especially for younger &/or minority demographics, I recommend that you talk to him.

Gordon,

See attached. A couple months back, after ten years of work, I was able to bring the African American publishers and Hispanic publishers together. There are 400 Hispanic publications and 300 African American publications covering every state.

The reason for my email is that neither organization has endorsed a candidate and I can help make that happen (what are friends for). I can also use publishers in every market for grass roots event and work.

If anyone is interested, have them yell at me.

〈快訊〉扁珍致靚惡行重大從重量刑

TVBSNews 2008/12/12 15:21

眾所矚目的扁家四大案，南港展覽館、龍潭購地、國務費及洗錢等四大案，首波偵結行動在今天下午塵埃落定，特偵組在下午在法務部召開記者會，由檢察總長陳聰明、陳雲南主持說明。

檢察總長陳聰明首先感謝各界的關心及各單位的合作，尤其是特偵組同仁的努力。

扁家四大案首波偵結，起訴書厚達209頁，起訴了14名被告陳水扁、吳淑珍、陳致中、黃睿靚、陳鎮慧、吳景茂、陳俊英、林德訓、馬永成、蔡美利、蔡銘哲、蔡銘杰、郭銓慶、李界木依照貪污、偽造文書及圖利罪提起公诉。

扁家四大案首波偵結，由於扁珍涉詐1億元國務費、龍潭案收賄1198萬美金、扁珍龍潭案收600萬美金、南港案扁珍收243萬美金，檢方認定扁家四人惡行重大，請求法院從重量刑。

特偵組發言人陳雲南：「陳水扁先生犯行重大，犯後一再攻擊司法，並無悔意，以其擔任2屆中華民國總統，於就職時依憲法宣言，必須恪遵憲法、盡忠職務，增進人民福利，保衛國家，無負國民負託，如違誓言，願受國家嚴厲之制裁，而進而知法犯法，請求予以最嚴厲的制裁。

吳淑珍女士，利用總統夫人身份，大肆干政、搜括財物、紊亂體制、敗壞官箴，請從重量刑。

陳致中先生、黃睿靚女士，以直系血親共犯洗錢罪本得減輕其刑，惟其未交代海外資產，惡行不輕，請從重量刑。

其餘被告因自白、或配合偵辦、或態度良好者，依法請求減輕或排除其刑。」

請求法院從重量刑，而沒有具體求刑，陳雲南做出解釋。陳雲南：「法務部今年3月公文，通令所有檢察機關，具體求刑宜在審判階段，讓公訴檢察官斟酌審判階段的一切刑狀，來具體求刑，因此在偵查階段，本署檢察官，遵從法務部的函，我們不便具體求刑。」

特偵組雖未對扁家四名涉案人陳水扁、吳淑珍、兒子陳致中、媳婦黃睿靚具體求刑，不過，檢方認為扁珍犯罪重大、致中夫婦惡行不輕，將請求法院從重量刑，而其餘10名被告則因配合辦案，從輕量刑。

I am not going to raise this publicly, but one of HRC's opponents will soon charge that she is running an "imperial campaign." If it is the right opponent, Democrat or Republican, the charge will resonate. Probably 90% of the total media coverage of HRC has a negative slant, from her paid speeches to foundation donations to not answering questions from the press. Her caution on policy has created a news vacuum that is filled by these other stories. And while I don't have the highest regard for most of the campaign press corps, they are getting dangerously unhappy about HRC refusing to answer questions.

If we look at a long curve of her numbers, there is reason for serious concern if trends continue and I see nothing today that will change them.

What I hear from many many Democrats is that there is something off-key about her campaign and the hope that Republican candidates are so bad she can win by playing cautious. That is a very dangerous way to run for president.

What I hear from "average voters" is basically a shrug, no enthusiasm, wait and see, with some real doubts.....

There is a missing element in her campaign and it is troubling. The "imperial campaign" charge will resonate when the right candidate figures it out....

Subject: Roll Call et al.

John,

Political analysts (Roll Call et al.) keep telling us this race is getting tighter, and the Chamber of Commerce just launched a new ad attacking me, sucking up more TV time for Congresswoman Hayworth and Boehner's Tea Party agenda.

If we don't do something we'll lose. This is what we need to do:

- Keep our ads up. (I need you to donate to stay on the air. )
- Make calls every waking hour till Election Day, and hit mailboxes till the last minute. (Can you give \$250 so we can talk to 25,000 more voters in person?)
- Register and turn out every one of our voters. (Please contribute to fund our registration and GOTV work!)

If we can reach every voter in the Hudson Valley, on the air and on the ground, we'll win.

But the plan depends on your support: We need you, John, to chip in $250 or whatever you can spare, right now. Here's the link one more time: <https://secure.actblue.com/page/spmrapidresponse>

Thanks!

Always dangerous to send anecdotal notes from average non-political people, but thought I would share reaction from this person, who is an average Millennial, non-political, non-activist type from Delaware:

"Powerful message.... I love it. It makes me cry everytime and I'm not sure why."

(What makes you cry do you think?)

"The background music is great, the Hispanics starting their business, the black family preparing for their child, the gay men getting married.. 'When families are strong, America is strong' and that she says 'earn your vote'. Those visuals accompanied by the background music make me cry but like a happy cry. But I'm overly emotional sometimes.... I just get a feeling like things are gonna get better for those people I mentioned and it makes me happy for them."

Now he also questioned the word 'champion' and mentioned something about it being in Game of Thrones (there is always something...), but I wanted to share with you the deep emotion that this video caused in one younger voter, who is likely representative of many more.

Subject: Update: Challenging Debate Myths

Mike & Co. --

Washington remains shut down because of snow. The House has put off all votes until next week and has postponed most hearings. The Senate is still scheduled to return tomorrow. Relevant developments are all occurring on the campaign trail.

There, for the most part, the Democratic primary debate on fiscal and financial issues has been mainly on the merits, not ad hominem, with policy differences generally more of emphasis than of vision. But there are some persistent distortive or at least unedifying myths in the fiscal and financial policy primary debate that are worth challenging. Among them:

- Glass-Steagall would have prevented the meltdown of 2008, and its resurrection can prevent the next one
- Sanders tax plan to pay for health care program would be the largest ever but at least it is progressive across the board

And there is a point that has gotten lost in the dispute about speaking fees: what matters is where you stand, not where you are standing.

More on these points below. Comments welcome.

Best,

Dana

- Glass-Steagall -- Form vs. Conduct

Post hoc ergo propter hoc. Some observers believe that because the final repeal of Glass-Steagall (1999) occurred before the financial meltdown and subsequent recession (2008, ff.), the repeal is responsible for the recession. This has become one of the major points of contention between HRC and Sanders and is an area where they demonstrate stark differences in policy.

A candidate's position on that 1999 repeal has become a proxy for Democrats over whether a candidate would appoint regulators to aggressively enforce existing laws, or whether a candidate would force banks to break up into constituent parts in the hopes that they become too small to cause any trouble. Most officials, even under Democratic President Obama, won't openly say they want to go that far.

A despondent history of the crisis has taken hold on the left. It bothers Barney Frank who as Chair of the House Financial Services co-wrote the Wall Street Reform and Consumer Protection Act. But he gets the anger: "It's because nobody went to jail... But big banks are still more powerful than people would like."

But restoring Glass-Steagall wouldn't do enough to oversee large nonbank financial institutions like insurers and hedge funds. The consensus among experts supports Clinton's view, in sum, "I just don't think it would get the job done." Here's why: HRC's proposals focus on behavior, not a corporation's legal form, as Glass-Steagall does.

- Political Viability

No one on the progressive side wants to defend Wall Street or downplay the pressure on middle- and working-class Americans, but Sanders's ideas should not be seen as a more honest or uncorrupted policy. The despairing vision he paints of America is oversimplified.

Sanders transcends questions about the viability of his plans, suggesting that a pure candidate can rally voters into a righteous uprising that would unsettle the conventional laws of politics --that would leave him with a working majority in Congress somehow.

Similar populist strategies inspired the disastrous Goldwater and McGovern campaigns. Another model for its success would be 2008 with Obama's election. But Obama did not issue extensive and radical policy position papers. He organized passionate volunteers on a massive scale — far broader than anything Sanders has done — and tried to keep his volunteers engaged throughout his presidency. And, in office, Obama had a majority in Congress, one long since gone. Why would Sanders's grassroots campaign succeed where Obama's far larger one failed?

Standing in the way of Sanders' promises is the fact that the president's ability to deliver largescale change is far more limited. The next president will face a House firmly under right-wing rule, making the prospects of important progressive reform impossible. This hardly renders the presidency impotent, obviously -- the end of Obama's term has shown that a creative executive can still work some change.

• Breaking Up -- Have a Bank in Mind?

They say that breaking up is hard to do. Sanders's call to break up the banks is an appealing one but... which ones? He demand suggests some confusion about Dodd-Frank, which established an authority and a process for breaking up banks that has been approved by Congress. Presumably knowing this, Sanders must be saying that the authority should be exercised forthwith. Sanders has made this a key facet of his speeches: "Within one year, my administration will break these institutions up so that they no longer pose a grave threat to the economy as authorized under Section 121 of the Dodd-Frank Act." But what's stopping him from identifying which ones?

J.P. Morgan, the country's biggest bank by assets with about $2.4 trillion, spent much of last year defending its size, especially after Goldman analyst argued breaking up the firm would unlock value in the share price. Fed Chair Yellen said in February that causing firms to think about their size is "exactly what we want to see happen" as a result of higher capital rules. J.P. Morgan has since become leaner and reduced its regulatory capital requirements by moving certain deposits off its books and continuing to slim down its overall assets.

Citigroup too has shrunk total assets by 17 percent since the end of 2007, to $1.81 trillion from $2.18 trillion. It has jettisoned units considered risky or tangential—such as a Japanese company that runs call centers, or the subprime lender OneMain Financial—but it has also gotten rid of units that some investors would have preferred they keep, like the wealth management firm Smith Barney.

MetLife said the risk of increased capital requirements "contributed to our decision," suggesting other factors were at play as well. While its plan would hewn off some businesses that regulators had flagged as risky, such as certain guaranteed annuities, that business was also facing profitability pressures amid low interest rates. The Fed also hasn't yet specified what the rules of the road would be for MetLife or other insurance firms.

In light of these events, it is apparent that the new law is working far better than it gets credit for. The Dodd-Frank reforms of the financial industry may not have broken up the big banks, but they have, at the very least, highly reduced systemic risk. The penalties for being too big to fail exceed the benefits, and, as a result, banks are actually breaking themselves up to avoid being large enough to be regulated as systemic risks.

Sanders' $1.9 Trillion Tax Hike is at Least Partly Progressive

Another canard. The taxes that Sanders plans to use to fund his replacement for the ACA are a mix of flat and progressive but are more regressive on balance. Some of his tax proposals are in line with most liberal approaches to raising taxes: by lifting tax brackets, he will increase both income taxes and the estate tax. Additionally, he wants to tax capital gains as regular income and limit tax deductions for those that make more than $250,000. But his 2.2 percent premium for households and the 6.2 percent health care premium paid by employers are both flat tax rates, an unpopular form of regressive taxation.

Although the burden of his progressive tax proposals will be mostly borne by the wealthy, the flat taxes will undoubtedly weigh on the middle class and they are the majority of his plan, in dollar terms. Sanders has claimed this extra burden on the middle class is worth it for reduced healthcare premiums, but that remains to be seen. What is certain is that those in the middle class will have to pay both the 2.2 percent premium and deal with reduced wages because of the 6.2 percent premium on employers.

It's What You Say, Not Where You Say It.

Sanders sought to put HRC on the spot last week by invoking the speaking fees she received from large banking interests after leaving the State Department in 2013. But he failed to bring up the content of her speeches. When Hillary spoke before the clients of GoldenTree Asset Management for a fee of $275,000, the focus of her speech was Dodd-Frank and its necessity after the financial crisis. Even though she was speaking to a financial institution, she delivered the same message of financial regulation and its importance. Does speaking to Liberty University students imply anything about your policy views?

Both candidates agree on the need for strong regulations and strong regulators, and the distinction between them is drawn only in the points of emphasis. HRC's proposals focus on behavior, not a corporation's legal form, making firms police themselves with strict oversight, while Sanders would prefer requiring those firms to divest more quickly.

The legislative wheels in Washington are moving into gear slowly year. Everything will stop in its tracks though as the city becomes snowbound over the weekend. Then when the streets clear, work will resume on some important regulatory bills, though they and everything else on the Hill will face tough sledding.

Three of these bills making their ways through Congress that would have the biggest financial regulatory and political impact are reviewed below.

Stay warm and dry.

There are three especially salient legislative regulatory initiatives being drafted or under consideration on the Hill that are more likely than most others to see votes in Congress and could have bearing at some point on the campaign or represent an opportunity in that context.

- The independent Agency Regulatory Analysis Act

A bipartisan measure introduced by Sens. Portman, Warner, and Collins to apply CBA studies to financial rule making. The bill, versions of which have been introduced since 2012 without success, authorizes the president, through the Office of Information and Regulatory Affairs, to require that the agencies conduct in-depth CBA in addition to considering “least burdensome” regulations as well as the economic impact of their rules.

Critics claim that the purpose of the bill is to inject political considerations into these agencies and that the requirements would impose not only a cost and time burden but would also limit the agencies’ ability to rapidly respond to crises and drain resources. Two agencies, the SEC and CFTC, are already required to undergo a type of cost-benefit analysis. Traditional CBA, critics say, aren’t even an applicable method of accounting when dealing with these agencies.

One of the bill’s own co-sponsors, Susan Collins, spoke out against this very policy proposal only a few years ago, saying “If you bring these independent agencies within the regulatory purview of OIRA, you defeat the whole purpose of having them be independent agencies.”

CBA is one of rallying calls for opponents of the Dodd-Frank law to raise questions about agencies in an attempt to stall or overturn regulations. In fact, opponents have had a number of successes with that approach in the last decade. Sen. Portman defended the bill, saying “(the agencies are) independent, so they should be immune from political influence -- but they shouldn’t be immune from the laws of economics and common sense.”

Given the political climate of the upcoming election year, as well as the past failures of this bill, it’s not likely that this legislation will take root but keep an eye on this bill, because it could make it even more difficult to implement remaining Dodd-Frank rules.

- SEC/Political Disclosure Rule

Sen. Elizabeth Warren said on a conference call today that “shareholders have a right to know how companies spend their money.” To that end, she and Sens. Schumer, Menendez, and Merkley have called on the SEC to draft a rule which would require that publically held companies disclose their political contributions to trade associations and political nonprofits.

Though the omnibus government spending bill passed last month includes language preventing the commission from finalizing a corporate political disclosure rule, “there is nothing preventing the SEC from preparing the rule this year,” per Warren. Sen. Schumer said that language preventing such a rule could be “ripped out root and branch” during the next Congressional appropriations cycle, leading the way for the SEC to finalize the requirement.

This past August, 44 Senators sent the SEC chair a letter calling for political spending disclosure. In October, eight of the 10 Democrats on Banking wrote to the two nominees for SEC commission, expressing their support. The bill would be staunchly opposed by the GOP and business groups. But due to support inside Congress and from the public, and with Sen. Warren championing this initiative, observers should watch closely – while the rule may not be particularly viable, the fight which it will stir up is the real prize involved. it will remain an issue to be closely watched in the coming months.

- The DOL Fiduciary Rule

Rep. Wagner’s Retail Investor Protection Act passed the House in October and has been referred to Senate Banking. The bill restricts the Department of Labor from drafting any rules concerning when an individual is considered a fiduciary until 60 days after the SEC issues a final rule governing the standards of conduct for brokers and dealers.

It also prevents the SEC from writing such a rule until it has reported to particular congressional committees on a number of related matters, including the impact of such rules (or their absence) on retail investors and whether or not a standard fiduciary code of conduct would “adversely impact retail investor access to personalized, cost-effective investment advice and recommendations.” The goal of this legislation may be to entangle the two organizations so fully that they cannot properly carry out their mandates.

Tying up the DOL and SEC’s rule-making abilities by connecting the two organizations is another step in the fight from the right against the current regulatory climate. Attempts to bog down regulators in regulations of their own, a sort of double-stack of regulations, may be a hallmark of this legislative year.

McCain in NH: Would Be "Fine" To Keep Troops in Iraq for "A Hundred Years"

The United States military could stay in Iraq for "maybe a hundred years" and that "would be fine with me," John McCain told two hundred or so people at a town hall meeting in Derry, New Hampshire, on Thursday evening. Toward the end of this session, which was being held shortly before the Iowa caucuses were to start, McCain was confronted by Dave Tiffany, who calls himself a "full-time antiwar activist." In a heated exchange, Tiffany told McCain that he had looked at McCain's campaign website and had found no indication of how long McCain was willing to keep U.S. troops in Iraq. Arguing that George W. Bush's escalation of troops has led to a decline in U.S. casualties, McCain noted that the United States still maintains troops in South Korea and Japan. He said he had no objection to U.S. soldiers staying in Iraq for decades, "as long as Americans are not being injured, harmed or killed."

After the event ended, I asked McCain about his "hundred years" comment, and he reaffirmed the remark, excitedly declaring that U.S. troops could be in Iraq for "a thousand years" or "a million years," as far as he was concerned. The key matter, he explained, was whether they were being killed or not: "It's not American presence; it's American casualties." U.S. troops, he continued, are stationed in South Korea, Japan, Europe, Bosnia, and elsewhere as part of a "generally accepted policy of America's multilateralism." There's nothing wrong with Iraq being part of that policy, providing the government in Baghdad does not object.

In other words, McCain does not equate victory in Iraq--which he passionately urges at campaign events--with the removal of U.S. troops from that nation. After McCain told Tiffany that he could see troops remaining in Iraq for a hundred years, a reporter sitting next to me quipped, "There's the general election campaign ad." He meant the Democratic ad: John McCain thinks it would be okay if U.S. troops stayed in Iraq for another hundred years.....

Well, it was straight talk. And McCain's combativeness livened up a session during which he alternated between the old McCain (as in punchy, feisty, humorous) and the old McCain (as in just plain old). He moved a bit stiffly on the stage set up in the middle of the Adams Memorial Opera House. And he--somewhat oddly--shared the spotlight with Senator Joseph Lieberman, who has endorsed him. Lieberman did not merely introduce McCain; he stood by McCain during the entire event, helping McCain to answer questions about education, climate change, and the Iraq war. Several times, Lieberman gave more coherent and animated replies than did McCain. Repeatedly, Lieberman maintained that McCain could rack up bipartisan successes as president. (The Lieberman sidekick bit was curious. But an elementary-age girl in the audience did say, after being handed a microphone, that Lieberman was her role-model and that she fancied McCain. Lieberman hugged her, and the whole crowd oohed at this cuteness.)

McCain has been coming on strong in New Hampshire, where he beat George W. Bush by 18 points in the 2000 Republican primary. (Some polls place him in the lead.) Eight years ago, McCain thrived as an independent-minded GOPer willing to blast the corruptions of Washington. These days, his stock appears to be rising because he has stuck with the Iraq war and boasts of years of national security experience. "If the world was stable, we could afford Mitt Romney as the national CEO," says a McCain campaign aide (who asks not to be identified). "But in an unsafe and unstable world, Republican voters, and some independents, are coming to see that we need a warrior in the White House." The crisis in Pakistan, this aide notes, was a timely reminder.

So McCain is not doing so bad for a candidate who was on life-support last summer. But it's not that he has craftily orchestrated his revival; the other campaigns have fallen flat. Romney has had a tough time selling himself as a fellow ready to be commander in chief. Rudy Giuliani cast himself as Mr. 9/11--which is different from persuading voters you are Mr. Win the War. Fred Thompson, who highlighted the foreign policy experience he obtained on the Senate intelligence committee, has mounted a lackluster bid. Mike Huckabee has had little to say about national security and has gaffed too often on foreign policy. Regarding national security and the war, McCain has become the default Republican.

"The Mac is back," Lieberman exclaimed in Derry. Perhaps it's merely that McCain managed to stay on his feet while his rivals have faltered. In the next few days, McCain and his supporters will be pushing him as the Republican who is ready for wartime. This is a potent argument. But will it win over the New Hampshire independents who swooned over McCain in 2000? This slice of the electorate is not particularly fond of the war McCain champions. Michael Dennehy, McCain's political director, says that independents "will agree to disagree on the war with him if they think he's being honest." Well, with McCain boldly declaring he doesn't give a damn how long U.S. troops are deployed in Iraq, his strategists can certainly say he is not holding back. Whether that indeed impresses independents (and Republicans) in New Hampshire won't be known until this Tuesday.

Subject: What we're building this summer

John --

You've been hearing from Messina about our overall strategy and what's at stake in this election. My job as the Battleground States Director is to report back to you on the nuts and bolts of what we're building in communities across the country.

I want to take you through it in detail, so you can understand how to get involved and shape our organization where you live.

We're going to build it from the ground up. And we're going to use this summer to roll out our team model and organizing structure through grassroots planning sessions in homes and by videoconference.

Here's the full briefing -- watch it here , and if you're willing to get involved now and be part of the organization in your community, let me know:

<http://my.barackobama.com/Grassroots-Update>

Some of these planning sessions are already under way, and we're starting to get some feedback. I got one email from a supporter named Steven, who hadn't been involved at all since 2008, and only went to his grassroots planning session on a whim.

As a result, he's all-in -- he wants to get involved fast, and also has all sorts of new ideas for how he can apply his skills better this time and which friends and colleagues he can reach out to about joining the campaign.

The subject line of his email about the meeting was "Inspiring night."

This kind of organization-building isn't just an electoral strategy -- it's a reflection of what we believe in as voters and citizens. It's a commitment to the kind of politics that begins in backyards and living rooms and empowers every single American to get involved and organize for the changes they want to see.

At a moment when it feels like the only thing that separates our opponents is how quickly they want to end Medicare as we know it, winning this way -- driven locally, powered by the grassroots -- will be a rebuke to those in Washington who still think that people across the country don't have a seat at the table where decisions are made.

I'm asking you to pull up a chair. If you're willing to get involved now, at this crucial point in the campaign, let me know here:

<http://my.barackobama.com/Grassroots-Update>

Mitch Stewart
Battleground States Director
Obama for America

P.S. -- If you don't have time to watch the video, here's a quick rundown on where we stand:

-- Messina mentioned the one-on-one initiative last month. We're going to talk with every person who volunteered or made a donation last time. So the staff and I started making calls and meeting with people one-on-one. And then those people started having their own one-on-ones with others. So far more than 75,000 individual conversations have happened across the country. The results are a massive army of newly energized volunteers, plus thousands of pages of ideas and feedback that will inform how we shape our organization nationally.

-- Grassroots planning sessions are under way across the country -- we've had dozens so far with more than a hundred still to come. Everyone has been or will be invited to one.

-- You heard about our Summer Organizer Program when we asked you to help recruit them. Well, there are now hundreds across the country, and they start next week. We were pleasantly surprised that the number of applicants far exceeded what we saw when we launched this program in 2008, and you'll be hearing more about them -- and in many cases from them directly -- in the coming months.

This campaign isn't funded by lobbyists or corporate interests. We rely on donations from people like you. Please donate \$5 today.

Subject: Summer Workshop for July 28

Attachments: Solum-The Constraint Principle-Georgetown Wokshop.pdf

I think I can more or less promise that this will be my last mass email for the day:

At the summer workshop scheduled for Tuesday, July 28, Larry Solum will discuss his paper entitled "The Constraint Principle: Original Meaning and Constitutional Practice." The paper is attached to this email and will also be available on the Georgetown Law Website and at Faculty Support.

We meet at noon in McDonough 492. Cookies and drinks will be served.

Subject: September 2 meeting in D.C.

As stated in a previous email, we’re planning to meet in D.C. on Tuesday, September 2 from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. We’ll be meeting at Perkins Coie, 607 14th Street, NW, 8th floor. This meeting will include not only transition board and staff, but also working group leaders. I know some of your groups have multiple co-chairs, but the room can only hold 40 people. So I'd really like to limit participation to one person per working group (excluding board members and staff). If you really think two need to be there, let me know, and we can see if we have room.

Please send Adam (ahitchcock@barackobama.com ) a list of who will be attending from your working groups, and we can compile a master list of attendees.

Also, given our limited budget, we can’t guarantee that we can pay travel expenses for any working group members coming to this meeting. So, if you’re deciding between a D.C.-based person and a non-D.C. person, you might want to pick the former.

Obviously, everyone (including board members) should hold onto their receipts, and we might be able to reimburse expenses when our coffers are a little more full.

Speaking of which, we currently only have $35,000 in the bank, and most of that is allocated to August salaries. So, please ask your donors to send in their checks. So far, here’s who has given money:

| Name            | Amount | Date   | Solicitor |
|-----------------|--------|--------|-----------|
| Frank Brosens   | 5000   | 11-Aug | Mike      |
| Tom Wheeler     | 5000   | 12-Aug | Don       |
| Eric Mindich    | 5000   | 13-Aug | Mike      |
| Blair Effron    | 5000   | 16-Aug | Mike      |
| James Crowe     | 5000   | 16-Aug | Don       |
| Bruce J. Oreck  | 5000   | 18-Aug | Don       |
| Charlotte Oreck | 5000   | 18-Aug | Don       |

Also, if it's easier, Adam or I could reach out to your donors. Just let us know. Thanks.

I'd recommend paying tribute and making the connection to people like Mandela (African struggle) and Chisolm (first Caribbean MOC) when you talk about any giants of the past. If she talks about the "many Flint's" compare to Haiti and the aftermath, recognize that people are still suffering in Haiti. Hugging Nigerians, Haitians and Jamaicans (and others) by talking about how immigration reform can't leave behind people of African descent from the continent and the Caribbean (When I was CBC ED, the CBC, led by Yvette Clarke got language in Gang of 8 bill to save the diversity visa program and we carved out portions specifically for black immigrants and billions of dollars for STEM Ed for black people - worked with Schumer to get this done).

I would love to get your perspective on the week coming up and what is new for the Hillary Camp.

Also, your assessment of the past week. When will you guys roll out her husband and Chelsea and grand baby.

In your mind who would be the ideal match up against her on the GOP side so far.

I want to advance the story too. Let me know. I can be reached via email and or by cell 202 285 3557

Join Georgetown University's 2015 "Let Freedom Ring!" Choir

Current GU students, faculty, and staff are invited to participate in the annual "Let Freedom Ring!" Choir to celebrate the life and legacy of the Rev. Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr. in a special concert at the John F. Kennedy Center for the Performing Arts. The event, scheduled for Monday, January 19, 2015, is free, open to the public, and features a joint performance by a guest celebrity artist with the Choir (past artists have included Smokey Robinson, Bobby McFerrin, Patti LaBelle, Aretha Franklin and Jessye Norman) along with the presentation of The John Thompson, Jr. "Legacy of a Dream" Award.

Choir Rehearsal Dates:

Tuesday, October 14, 2014 from 7:00 pm -9:00 pm in St. William Chapel, Copley Hall

Wednesday, November 12, 2014 from 7:00 pm -9:00 pm in St. William Chapel, Copley Hall

Tuesday, January 13, 2015 location to be determined

Wednesday, January 14, 2015 from 7:00 pm-9:00 pm in Gaston Hall, Healy Hall

Thursday, January 15, 2015 location to be determined

All interested in participating in the "Let Freedom Ring!" Choir must attend at least one of the rehearsals in Oct/Nov 2014 and at least two of the rehearsals in January 2015 to be eligible to sing at the Kennedy Center on Monday, January 19, 2015. Interested individuals are also required to complete the sign up form below by Wednesday, October 8, 2014. Please email guevents@georgetown.edu with any questions about this opportunity.

Subject: Special Update - Ed Markey

Dear John,

I wanted to make sure you saw the great news that environmental champion Ed Markey won the Massachusetts Senate primary on Tuesday. With your partnership, LCV played a decisive role in this great victory. Of course, we're not taking anything for granted for the June 25th general election, so stay tuned!

LCV's lead role in this race has been widely covered in the media, including in the Washington Post, the Boston Globe, Politico, Roll Call and The Hill. If you didn't catch any of the news coverage, you can read more about LCV's work in this important victory in the memo below.

As a member of LCV's Environmental Majority Council, I thought you'd also especially appreciate the quote in yesterday's Washington Post about investing in LCV: "NextGen's most effective investment was likely the $250,000 it spent helping finance the League of Conservation Voters' voter mobilization efforts, adding to the nearly $600,000 LCV was already spending."

Onward,

Gene

Re: LCV Follows Historic 2012 Election Cycle with Big Primary Win in Massachusetts Senate Race

Date: April 30, 2013

On the heels of our most successful election cycle ever in 2012, LCV played a decisive role in Ed Markey's commanding primary win in the Massachusetts Senate special election on Tuesday. As we did in 2012, we continued to run electoral programs to scale, so that we are able to play a critical role in the outcome. LCV made the largest investment in the primary by any group, spending nearly $850,000, and by the time the polls closed, had already made more than 430,000 voter contacts across the state. With low turnout in the special election, it is clear that our work was an important part of Markey's victory.

Building off of our work last cycle, this primary race was an opportunity to continue to demonstrate to elected officials that we will stand with them when they lead on climate change. Ed Markey has been a committed leader on climate change, including co-authoring the landmark American Clean Energy and Security Act. He campaigned aggressively on this issue, highlighting his commitment to action on climate change in numerous ads.

Just weeks after our endorsement, LCV launched a grassroots field campaign supporting Markey that targeted likely Independent and Democratic primary voters. It was a massive field operation that knocked on more than 250,000 doors across 23 cities and towns in less than three months. We also made more than 180,000 phone calls to voters and recruited more than 150 volunteers to our campaign.

During the primary, LCV Action Fund also raised or contributed more than $235,000 for Markey through our GiveGreen program. It was the quickest LCV Action Fund has ever raised $200,000 for a candidate.

Our strategy in this race is the same one we implemented last cycle, which was LCV's biggest ever. During the 2012 cycle, LCV and its affiliated political committees spent over $14 million overall - more than the previous three cycles combined. We won 15 of our 17 priority races, including our $1.1 million campaign to help elect Senator Elizabeth Warren in Massachusetts, where we launched mail and field programs.

That means that 83 percent of our resources were spent in winning races during the 2012 cycle. By comparison, just 7 percent of the resources spent by Karl Rove's groups and the Chamber of Commerce resulted in victories.

Though we're encouraged by Markey's strong primary win, this race is not over and LCV is not taking anything for granted. We will continue supporting Markey in the general election to help ensure that one of the biggest climate change champions in Congress is elected to the U.S. Senate in June. In the process, LCV is continuing to shape the political landscape in Washington and building a core group of climate champions in Congress. We look forward to another critical election cycle, where we plan to focus on defeating more climate deniers and electing more climate champions.

If HRC is asked about Sanders' Wall Street comments, can I suggest this as a response?

I know Senator Sanders attacked me on this, that his choice. But the truth is, he and I both want to crack down on the risky behavior on Wall Street, we both want to make sure people go to jail when they cross the line. I think my plan is tougher because it also cracks down on the shadow banking world but the real difference is that every single Republican wants to get RID of the new financial regulations. I am going to make sure that that does not happen. We shouldn't be easing up on the kind of behavior that crashed our economy. We should be strengthening accountability so that never happens again. That's what's at stake in this election.

A President who can get the job done not just on a few issues, but on all the complex challenges we're facing. You're not going to raise incomes for middle class families by raising their taxes. You're not going to ease their burdens by making them pay for Donald Trump's kids to go to college for free. And you're not going to stop the drug companies and big insurers from ripping off consumers by tearing up the Affordable Care Act and forcing America to start another contentious health care debate back at square one – that just plays into their hands. I have plans that will actually help families get ahead and stay ahead... that will make the wealthy pay their fair share, hold corporate price gougers, polluters, and Wall Street speculators accountable, and prevent the Republicans from taking us backwards. HRC does not want to call Bernie out by name in her speech Wednesday night, but she does want to drive a more effective and comprehensive contrast with him. In particular, she's keen to find a way to keep going after him on Wall Street (she's convinced his plan is naive and unworkable) as part of a broader indictment.

Today in Iowa, she was asked directly about her differences with Bernie and she gave an answer that leaned more heavily on "experience" than we'd probably like and also did a shadow banking hit. Then in her next event, she started talking explicitly about "electability." As Jen said and HRC agreed, we need to give her a better formulation.

For the purposes of the Nevada dinner speech, Jake and I put our heads together and came up with a riff that keeps her in the "has what it takes to get the job done" frame and scratches her Wall Street itch without going down a rabbit hole. Pasted below with full speech attached. What do folks think? Could we discuss on 8am?

Americans don't want promises we can't keep, they want real results.

Anyone can say they'll build a global coalition to defeat global jihad. But I know what it takes – a lot of hard work, shoe-leather diplomacy, and deep relationships.

Anyone can say they'll sit in a room with their Treasury Secretary and fix all the problems in our financial system in a few months. But that's not how things actually get done. You need a comprehensive strategy to work with Congress, the Federal Reserve, and all our regulators to go after risk throughout the financial system.

There's no magic wand in the White House. That's why we need a President who has what it takes to get results.

I know it's not going to be easy to break through the dysfunction in Washington. But I know how to find common ground and I know how to stand my ground...

She emphatically did not want to lose the Four Fights, or at least a similar construction, and the link to Four Freedoms, saying she picked this location for a reason and the Four Fights is the one thing she feels like is actually working out there on the trail -- oh, and by the way, she had to come up with it herself because we didn't give her anything better. Also, she prefers "our time" to "your time" and agrees that we need to build a stronger scaffolding for "unlocking potential" if its going to mean anything to people. And she's eager to see the next draft.

Subject: Sustainability success! Thought you'd appreciate this.

I thought you might appreciate the following. Kudos to Froggi VanRiper, our Director of Campus Sustainability.

A Waste-Free Move to Alumni Hall

As soon as winter break began, eight offices, comprising 45 staff members, transitioned to the newly renovated Alumni Hall. Over the course of the month, a “moving cascade” ensued, in which over twenty more faculty and staff members progressively transitioned into vacated offices, and many of the newly opened spaces were re-appropriated for academic use.

In light of the waste reduction successes we began to demonstrate last year, and in keeping with the sustainability commitments characterizing the Alumni Hall renovation, President Amott challenged us to accomplish a waste-free move.

The process of emptying storage closets and basements of decades of accumulation was daunting, and any one who has moved in the past knows the amount of waste generated during such an endeavor. But this provided the perfect opportunity to test our skills of collaboration and resourcefulness. Spoiler alert: we were successful! Knox transitioned the contents of seventy people’s office spaces and five storage rooms across campus into new spaces without renting a dumpster, OR increasing our regular trash pickup schedule.

The Waste-Free Move entailed active collaboration between the moving offices, the Facilities Department, and the Office of Sustainability. In order of the sustainable waste management hierarchy (Reduce, Reuse, then Recycle), the paragraphs below tell the inspiring story of how the logistics were arranged.

RESOURCE REDUCTION

In preparation for this move, casual labor and sustainability staff stockpiled boxes from the cafeteria, computer labs, and the C-store. As offices began packing up for the move, they were directed to staging zones where they could obtain the necessary boxes for their transition. As the cascading move progressed, over 1500 mid-sized boxes were diverted temporarily from the cardboard compactor. They were labeled with small, brightly colored tags for aid of sorting and transport, then collected, re-labeled and reused several times over.

Assuming a fraction of the used boxes would have been purchased specially for the move, Knox saved over $3,000 and reduced its external environmental footprint by 2,300 lbs of CO<sub>2</sub>e emissions, 17,700 gallons of water, and 2,250 lbs of raw tree fiber.

REUSE and RECOVERY

Each office preparing for the move was provided with a waste-free moving guide, which listed all the materials they could set aside for recovery and recycling. The unused office supplies from around the school were collected in the Office of Sustainability, to stock the new office supply share zone you read about in last month's newsletter.

Campus-owned office furnishings were redistributed to other campus spaces through a cascade defined by the President's Council.

Other useful things like t-shirts and household items were taken to the Free Store. A van-load of bedding formerly used for admissions overnight events was donated to the Galesburg Rescue Mission and other local family aid organizations. In fact, even a box of obsolete ink stamps were repurposed – brought to the local daycare for the delight of the children.

In all, we conservatively estimate that the reuse efforts diverted one ton (2,000 lbs) of material from the landfill, not including the furnishings.

RECYCLING

Each office preparing for the move received receptacles for mixed recyclables and office paper, as well as instructions for setting aside cardboard, books & bound materials, spent electronics, old media storage discs and tapes, and other recyclable materials for collection.

The waste-free moving guide was modified so that it will pertain to all future moves and office cleanouts, and can now be found here on the Knox website.

In all, we conservatively estimate that the recycling efforts diverted an additional two tons (4,000 lbs) of material from the landfill.

Mr. Straight Talk Express Moves the Goalposts in Iraq...Again

"[T]hat's not too important" -- Senator John McCain today on NBC's Today Show on when he thinks US troops can come home from Iraq

Why Can't McCain Keep His Own Straight Talk Straight?

- First, McCain said he wanted to keep U.S. troops in Iraq for '100 Years': <http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=VFknKVjuyNk>
- Then it was '10,000 years': <http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=e6CLxpFuSmA>
- Not a month ago, McCain said it'd be mission accomplished in just '4 years' under his administration: "By January 2013, America has welcomed home most of the servicemen and women who have sacrificed terribly so that America might be secure in her freedom. The Iraq War has been won." [Associated Press, 5/15/08 ]
- Now, today, McCain moves the goalposts once again...to indefinitely: <http://thinkprogress.org/2008/06/11/mccain-iraq-important/>

In an interview on NBC's Today Show, host Matt Lauer asked Sen. John McCain (R-AZ) about his support for the war in Iraq. Noting that violence has decreased in Iraq, Lauer asked if McCain has a better "estimate" of when he would withdraw troops from the country. "No, but that's not too important," McCain responded:

Q: A lot of people now say the surge is working.

McCain: Anyone who knows the facts on the ground say that.

Q: If it's working, senator, do you now have a better estimate of when American forces can come home from Iraq?

McCain: No, but that's not too important. What's important is the casualties in Iraq. Americans are in South Korea. Americans are in Japan. American troops are in Germany. That's all fine.

"It seems like only yesterday - a few weeks ago actually - that Senator John "100 Years" McCain delivered a remarkably straight faced speech in Ohio declaring that if he were President, the Iraq war would be won within four years, a functioning democracy would be left behind, and most all U.S. troops there would come home," said Jeremy Funk, spokesman for the Iraq Campaign 2008. "Now he says it's "not too important" to him if the troops come from Iraq at all. McCain ought to ask military families making unimaginable sacrifices with their loved ones serving two, three, or more tours in Iraq if it's 'important at all' to them when they get to come home."

"Why can't Senator McCain keep his straight talk straight on how long he wants to keep our soldiers stuck in the crosshairs of an endless civil war in Iraq? His commitment to continue the very same failed 'stay the course' Bush policies there certainly hasn't changed - so why does his rhetoric? Senator McCain has a long and troubling history of moving the goalposts and making rosy predictions about Iraq's future that has earned him a credibility gap that is surely the envy of even former Defense Secretary Donald Rumsfeld and Vice-President Dick Cheney."

Today:

“No, but that’s not too important.”

-- John McCain, asked if he had a “better estimate” of when American troops could come home from Iraq. [NBC, “Today Show,” 6/11/08]

Last Month:

“By January 2013, America has welcomed home most of the servicemen and women who have sacrificed terribly so that America might be secure in her freedom. The Iraq war has been won.”

-- John McCain, on his four-year vision for America McCain Remarks, [5/15/08 ]

This morning on NBC’s “Today Show,” John McCain said bringing American troops home was “not too important.” His statement is one that the families of America’s service men and women are sure to dispute. After making dozens of predictions since the beginning of the war, McCain has lost credibility in the eyes of the public. After years of faulty logic and failed strategies, McCain still walks hand-in-hand with President Bush on the war in Iraq. From predicting victory in “months” to “a hundred years,” McCain consistently moves the finish line farther and farther away in an effort to mask the fact that he has no plan to end the war in Iraq and no idea when the conflict will be over.

Early 2003: The End is “Very Much in Sight.”

McCain Predicted a “Brief, Successful War In Iraq.” While speaking on the floor of the senate on the day before U.S. military action commenced in Iraq, McCain said, “The costs of these enterprises are not known with any degree of certainty at this time. Nor are the costs we will incur after what I believe, what I fervently, hope, will be a brief, successful war in Iraq, as we seek to establish the foundations for a peaceful, stable and democratizing Iraq.” He added, “I believe the war in Iraq can be concluded successfully in a relatively brief time.” [McCain Senate Press Release, 3/18/03]

McCain Believed The War In Iraq Would Be Relatively Short. While appearing on NBC’s “Meet the Press,” McCain said, “I believe that this conflict is still going to be relatively short. I believe we’ve achieved significant goals and successes.” [NBC, “Meet the Press,” 3/30/03]

In 2003 McCain Said The End Was “Very Much In Sight.” Senator McCain was asked “At what point will America be able to say the war was won?” McCain said there were oil fields to secure and “die-hards” to take care of but “it’s clear that the end is very much in sight,” and today I think Americans should be very proud of their leadership, their technology...There are still some foreigners, Syrians and others hanging around. But it won’t be long. It will be a fairly short period of time, but this happens in wars. I’m confident that once they are confident the area is no longer a threat to the Marines and to our army troops that they’ll start imposing discipline. In the meantime, we’ll have a short period of chaos.” [ABC, Good Morning America, 4/9/03, emphasis added]

In April 2003, McCain Said He Was “Sure” The End Of Conflict In Iraq Was Near. While appearing on “Lou Dobbs Moneyline,” Dobbs asked McCain, “Is it your judgment that we are near the end of this conflict?” To which McCain replied, “Oh, I’m sure that’s true.” [CNN, “Lou Dobbs Moneyline,” 4/10/03]

October 2003: Five Years?

McCain Predicted The War Would Take “Four Or Five Years.” During an appearance on ABC’s Nightline, Ted Koppel asked McCain how much more money the war would cost. He said, “Estimates I hear as much as 50 to $55 billion more.” When asked, “Over a course of how many years?” McCain answered, “Four or five years.” [ABC, “Nightline,” 10/1/03]

November 2003: A Few Months?

McCain Said “We Would Probably Know Within The Next Few Months” If America Won Or Lost In Iraq. During an appearance on MSNBC’s “Buchanan & Press,” McCain was asked what “victory” in Iraq was. McCain said, “I think the next three to six months are very critical in this whole scenario because the Iraqi people don’t want to go back to Saddam Hussein. They’re not crazy. But many of them in the Sunni Triangle are losing any confidence that the United States can bring them what their ambitions are all about for themselves and their families. So I think we’re in a very critical time. And we would probably know within the next few months.” [MSNBC, “Buchanan & Press,” 11/6/03]

2004: Five Years?

McCain Said “Listen, My Friend, We’re Going To Have To Be There For Five or Six Years.” During a February 2004 appearance on MSNBC’s “Hardball,” McCain discussed the war in Iraq and said, “Listen, my friend, we’re going to be there for five or six years. A little straight talk. We’re going. We’re going to have to be there for quite a while.” [MSNBC, “Hardball,” 2/25/04]

Early-2005: One Year?

McCain: “I Would Think That It’s Going To Be Another Year To A Year And A Half.” During an appearance on CBS’s “The Early Show,” McCain was asked “What is a realistic timetable” regarding the war in Iraq? McCain said, “If I had to guess, I would think that it’s going to be at least another year to a year and a half, but, hopefully before then we could have our troops out of a lot of the areas where they’re vulnerable to casualties.” [CBS, “The Early Show,” 2/3/05]

Mid-2005: A Couple of More Years?

McCain: “I Think Part Of That Is It’s Going To Be, At Least, A Couple More Years.” While appearing on NBC’s “Meet the Press,” McCain said, “I don’t think Americans believe that we should cut and run out of Iraq by any stretch of the imagination. But I think they also would like to be told, in reality, what’s going on and, by the way, I think part of that is it’s going to be, at least, a couple more years.” [NBC, “Meet the Press,” 6/19/05]

McCain: “I Think We Should Tell People It’s Not Going To Be A Short—I’d Rather Say Two Or Three Years.” While appearing on NBC’s “Meet the Press,” McCain said, “And, again, I think we should tell people it’s not going to be a short—I’d rather say two or three years, and be surprised a year from now, than say, ‘Everything’s fine,’ and then be disappointed a year or two from now.” [NBC, “Meet the Press,” 6/19/05]

McCain: I Think It’s Very Possible “Within The Next Year or Two.” While appearing on “Meet the Press,” McCain said, “I think it’s going to be long and hard and tough.” Tim Russert asked, “Years?” McCain responded by saying, “Well, when I say years, I think that it’s very possible within the next year or two that you could see this transition taking place, but the American troops being a supplement rather than being replaced by, in other words, most of the effort being carried on over time by the Iraqis, but it’s going to be tough.” [NBC, “Meet the Press,” 12/4/05]

2006: Months?

McCain: “We’re Either Going To Lose This Thing or Win this Thing Within the Next Several Months.” While appearing on NBC’s “Meet the Press,” McCain said, “If you talk to most military experts, we’re in a critical and crucial time. We’re either going to lose this thing or win this thing within the next several months.” [NBC, “Meet the Press,” 11/12/06]

Early 2007: Ten Years?

McCain Said Americans Could Be Persuaded To Support The War For 5 to 10 Years. According to the Houston Chronicle, while at the opening of the Center for the Intrepid, “McCain said it was important for America to ‘accomplish the mission’ in Iraq, but said he didn’t know how long that would take. He said Americans could be persuaded to support the conflict another five to 10 years ‘if we can show progress.’” [Houston Chronicle, 1/30/07]

Mid 2007: “I Don’t Have A Date”

McCain Said “I Don’t Have A Date” When Asked About The End of The War. While discussing the war in Iraq on NBC’s “Meet the Press,” McCain said, “If it is only in a role that is of support and American casualties are minimal, then I think it’s probably worth the investment. If the level of casualties stays where it is, and we do not have success, then we know that that will be a condition that we cannot stand before.” Tim Russert then asked, “By when?” to which McCain replied, “I don’t have a date, I think that the important thing is whether we assess as we move along.” [NBC, “Meet the Press,” 5/13/07; emphasis added]

Early 2008: Months?

McCain Said Winning The War “Is Going To Take Months.” During an interview with the editorial board of the Detroit News, McCain was asked, “Can we win this war? And how long will it take?” McCain responded, “It is going to take months. Al-Qaida is on the run, but it is not defeated. [The Iraqi military] can be effective with our support. I know how frustrated all of us are with the lack of effectiveness of the Iraqi government. ... Whoever invented this form of government ought to be taken out and shot. There has been some progress...” [Detroit News, 1/3/08]

Early 2008: A Hundred Years?

McCain Said US Could Stay In Iraq for “Maybe A Hundred Years” and He Was “Fine” With It. In January 2008, McCain said the 10/18/2016

U.S. military could stay in Iraq for “a hundred years” and that “would be fine with me.” At a town hall meeting in New Hampshire, a questioner said, “President Bush is talking about our staying in Iraq for 50 year,” at which point McCain interrupted and said, “Make it a hundred. We’ve been in South Korea, we’ve been in Japan for 60 years, we’ve been in South Korea for 50 years or so. That’d be fine with me as long as Americans are not being injured, or harmed, or wounded, or killed. That’s fine with me, I hope it would be fine with you.” Town Hall Meeting in Concord, NH, [1/3/08 ; emphasis added]

McCain: “I Don’t Think Americans Are Concerned If We’re There For 100 Years Or 1,000 Years Or 10,000 Years.” In an interview on CBS’s “Face the Nation,” host Bob Schieffer asked McCain about staying in Iraq for 100 year. McCain responded, “We’ve got to get Americans off the front line, have the Iraqis as part of the strategy, take over more and more of the responsibilities. And then I don’t think Americans are concerned if we’re there for 100 years or 1,000 years or 10,000 years. What they care about is a sacrifice of our most precious treasure, and that’s American blood. So what I’m saying is look, if Americans are there in a support role, but they’re not taking casualties, that’s fine. We’re in Kuwait now. As you well recall, we had a war, we stayed in Kuwait. We didn’t stay in Saudi Arabia. So it’s going to be up to the relationship between the Iraqi government and the United States of America.” [CBS, “Face the Nation,” 1/06/08; emphasis added]

McCain: “It Doesn’t Matter...We Could Be There For A Hundred Years, For All I Know.” During an interview with the editorial board of the Detroit News, McCain was asked, “When should the United States leave Iraq?” McCain responded, “It doesn’t matter. We’re still in Kuwait since the first Gulf War. If we can continue to show this progress, we could be there for 100 years, for all I know, as long as Americans are not dying. It’s not a matter of American presence; it’s a matter of success so we can beat back this adversary. If we’d done what they wanted us to do six months ago, al-Qaida would now be trumpeting to the world that it defeated the United States of America.” [Detroit News, 1/3/08,emphasis added]

McCain: “We’re Going To Be In This Struggle For The Rest of The Century.” While speaking at a town hall meeting in Sun City Center, Florida, McCain said, “I’d like to look you in the eye and tell you there’s not gonna be any more wars. I’d like to look you in the eyes and tell you that this terrible evil called radical Islamic extremism is defeated. I can’t do that. I’ve got to tell you that we’re gonna be in this struggle for the rest of this century because it’s a transcendent evil.” [Town Hall Meeting; Sun City Center, FL 01/26/08; emphasis added]

McCain: “We Are In A Greater Struggle That Is Going To Be With Us For The Rest of This Century.” While giving a speech in Nashua, New Hampshire, We are in two wars. We are in a greater struggle that is going to be with us for the rest of this century... He added, “These young people that are in this crowd, my friends, I’m going to be asking you to serve. I’m gonna be asking you to step forward and serve this nation in difficult times.” [Speech in Nashua, New Hampshire, 1/7/08; emphasis added]

Hello Steering Committee and friends,

We are putting a report out today on what we know about inequality and growth from growth regressions and thought you might want an advance peak.

Laura and I are on a panel together today at the IMF meetings on the topic, which will hopefully get people talking about the right questions policymakers should be asking.

Best,
Heather

Subject: Draft statement on immigration executive action

Below is what I think she should say about the President's executive action, either in statement form or on camera. It's long, but this is not a simple issue and we have a lot of interests and constituencies to consider.

I've tried here to express support for POTUS without getting bogged down in the details of what is sure to be an unpopular measure, seen as both too much and too little, and then pivot to the need for broader Congressional action (defined by a set of principles rather than by slavish attachment to the DOA Senate bill). I also went back to our 2013 statement on gay marriage and reprised the theme of urging respectful, substantive debate and recognizing that a lot of people aren't going to agree with us on this. Finally, I tried to root the issue in the lived experiences of actual families, to make this a debate about human beings rather than legal precedents.

I know she's eager to take a look, so it would be great to hear quick reactions.

Thanks

Dan

President Obama is making the best of a bad situation. No one thinks that these new steps are the ideal solution, or that they will solve the fundamental problems in our immigration system. But there is also broad consensus that the status quo is untenable. For years the House of Representatives has abdicated its responsibility to take on this challenge, not only refusing to act on the bipartisan Senate legislation but also failing to advance any viable alternatives. Given this vacuum of leadership, President Obama had no choice but to follow well-established precedent and use his executive authority to begin making common-sense improvements and focus finite enforcement resources on deporting felons rather than families.

I hope the President's announcement will mark the beginning of a serious and substantive national debate about the way forward. Because there's so much more to do if we're going to really fix our broken immigration system – if we're going to keep families together, treat everyone with dignity and compassion, uphold the rule of law, protect our national security, and respect our heritage and history. Bringing millions of hard-working people out of the shadows and into the formal economy, so they can hold their heads high, pay taxes, and contribute to our shared prosperity, is one of the most effective steps we could take to accelerate our economic recovery and raise wages across the board for hard-working Americans. It would also reflect the best values of an open and inclusive nation.

Only Congress can finish this job, and in the days ahead we should look to our elected representatives to take up that responsibility. But all Americans should be part of this debate. And as we move forward, let's remember that people of good will and good faith will continue to view this issue differently. Our arguments may grow heated at times, but if we proceed in a spirit of respect and shared purpose, I am confident that we can yet find our way toward common ground. Through it all, I hope we never lose sight of the fact that we're not talking about abstract statistics – we're talking about real families with real experiences. We're talking about children coming home from school to an empty house, their moms and dads whisked away without notice or explanation. We're talking about parents lying awake at night afraid of the knock on the door that could upend their lives and tear their families apart. We're talking about the fate of people who love this country, work hard, and want nothing more than a chance to contribute to the community and build a better life for themselves and their families. That's what this debate is about and why inaction is not an option.

John, this is it: the election is just 6 days away and we're running out of time to close the gap.

If we fall behind now, there won't be enough time to catch up.

So we have to get going. John -- stop what you're doing, chip in for Brad, and help stop a GOP takeover in Illinois.

What You Need to Know Before Donating Art

Your Name on a Plaque Is Nice, but It Might Cost You More Than You Think

2 COMMENTS

For investors thinking about donating art, the most important thing to know is this: It isn't as simple as...donating art. The benefits of a donation are clear. The owners may have a fondness for a particular museum or university they have in mind as a recipient, for instance. And the ego gratification is powerful.

"There's a legacy involved," says Ralph Lerner, founder of Art World Advisors, which helps collectors determine what to do with their art. "You get your name on a plaque on the wall. You can take your grandchildren to the museum to show them the plaque." But ego aside, donors have a lot of factors to consider before making a decision. Among them: Selling may bring them far more money than they can save with a tax break for their donation. If they donate, the tax break varies depending on who the donation goes to and what the recipient does with it. And the recipient may have very different ideas from the donor's about how the art will be displayed.

Running the Numbers

First, investors need to be aware of the difference, for their finances, between selling and donating. Peter Jason Riley, a certified public accountant in Newburyport, Mass., ran the numbers for a hypothetical U.S. taxpayer with an adjusted gross income of $500,000 who owns a painting appraised at $100,000 that she had purchased for $20,000.

What happens if she donates the painting? For donations of art, owners generally can claim a federal tax deduction of up to 30% of their adjusted gross income each year, making the limit in this case $150,000. So donating the painting to a qualifying museum would permit this owner a deduction in the current tax year of $100,000, assuming she hasn't made other art donations totaling more than $50,000. (If donations in a given year exceed the limit for deductions, the overage can be deducted in following years, up to five if necessary, with the 30% limit applying each year.)

That means the tax benefit this year for the donor in this case would be $41,118, according to Mr. Riley.

If the painting was sold for the appraised value of $100,000, assuming a typical 15% sales commission to an auction house or art gallery, the seller would owe $31,372 in capital-gains tax, resulting in a net profit of $53,628, Mr. Riley says.

So the owner would end up $12,510 better off by selling than by donating. That doesn't take into account the cost of an appraisal—typically $1,000 to $3,000—which isn't always necessary for a sale but would be required in this case before the artwork was donated. The Internal Revenue Service requires an appraisal for donations of property over $20,000.

Selling won't always be better financially. For one thing, selling might net far less than the appraised value of a piece of art. But this is an exercise owners should work through to get a sense of what they might be sacrificing by donating.

How Much of a Deduction?

Art owners also should be aware that their tax break for a donation will depend on several factors. In some cases, donors can claim a tax deduction based on the appraised value of the art. But in others the deduction is based on the price the donor paid for the art, which can be much lower than the appraised value.

One factor: The donor's deduction can only be based on the appraised value of the art if the recipient qualifies as a public tax-exempt organization. If the recipient is a private tax-exempt organization, the deduction is based on the price the donor paid.

A public tax-exempt organization is one that receives at least one-third of its support from the general public; museums, universities and other schools, hospitals and churches are among the institutions that generally qualify. A private tax-exempt organization doesn't rely on funding from the public. The Ford Foundation is one prominent example, and there are many private foundations funded by wealthy individuals.

But that's not the only distinction the IRS makes. A deduction can't be based on the appraised value of the art unless the donation is related to the recipient's mission. Few recipients except museums are likely to pass that test. For donations to recipients that fail that test, the deduction is based on what the donor paid for the art.

Donations that clear both those hurdles face another one. If the recipient sells the art within three years, the amount deductible by the donor reverts to the purchase price instead of the appraised value—potentially leaving the donor with a bill for back taxes.

One other tax-related issue for those who deduct the appraised value of a donation: The IRS subjects appraisals to review by its Art Advisory Panel, which is composed of art dealers and museum curators. And the panel often makes substantial adjustments to appraisals.

Taxpayers may be subject to substantial penalties if the IRS finds that the donated items are significantly overvalued, so it's imperative that the appraiser has a legitimate basis for arriving at a valuation, such as comparable sales.

Donation Negotiations

Finally, it isn't only the IRS that can take some of the fun out of a donation. Recipients can be prickly about how the art will be displayed—or even if it will be at all.

In this case, though, donors have some leverage. Art experts encourage donors to negotiate the terms for their gifts before turning over the art. For instance, the donor might demand that the art be on display for at least three months every three years—or on permanent display.

Or in the case of multiple works being donated, owners might demand that the art be given a special exhibition and be written up in a catalog, and that the pieces must be kept together and none of them can be sold. A donor can also demand perks like free lifetime membership at the highest level for family members.

If a potential recipient balks at a donor's terms, the owner can look for a more pliable recipient. But donors who have their hearts set on the most prominent institutions as recipients should expect less flexibility.

"I encourage people to donate to universities and smaller museums," says Susan Brundage, director of appraisal services at the Art Dealers Association of America. "They are thrilled to get something that might be seen as minor by the Met or the Modern or the Whitney. Those larger museums will only put most donations in their basements, never to see the light of day."

And no plaque for the grandchildren to see.

Subject: Update -- Highway Trust Fund

Mike & Co.,

The House continues work this week on reauthorization of the Highway Trust Fund (HTF). It is considering a bill for up to $325 billion on transportation projects over the next six years, $261 billion on highways, $55 billion on transit and approximately $9 billion on safety programs — but it still must come up with a way to pay for the final three years.

The House is in recess next week and the HTF expires on November 20, so leadership hopes to send a bill to the Senate by the end this week.

Below, a look at the HTF bill amendments likely to receive floor votes, the main offset in play, and the big-ticket riders -- Ex-Im and the Extenders.

Best,

Dana

Federal Reserve must pay in annual dividends.

Oil export ban lift

Though the Senate Banking Committee has passed legislation lifting the ban, the White House has pledged to veto legislation to lift the crude oil export ban. Still, an unlikely grouping of Homeland Security Committee Chairman Michael McCaul (R-Texas), House Financial Services Committee member Ed Perlmutter (D-Colo.), Rep. Kevin Cramer (R-N.D.), and Rep. Henry Cuellar (D-Texas) have offered an amendment to lift the ban and use additional tax revenues from export sales to help pay for highway authorizations.

If passed, the amendment could cause the overarching bill to lose support from House Transportation and Infrastructure Committee Ranking Member Peter DeFazio (D-Ore.), which would likely lead to an exodus of much if not all of the bill's Democratic supporters, potentially leading to the failure of a bill with such a narrow margin.

Government-sponsored enterprise guarantee fees

A provision of the bill that passed the Senate in July, now being considered by the House, would delay a 10-basis-point reduction in the fees Fannie Mae and Freddie Mac charge on new mortgages they back. That decrease had been scheduled for 2021 and would be pushed out to 2025 under the highway packages. Because Fannie and Freddie are controlled by the government, the higher fees would generate $1.9 billion in revenue that would be sent to Treasury as an offset for spending on highway projects.

Mortgage bankers, realtors and home builders sent a letter to the House Rules Committee on Friday asking them to allow lawmakers to raise a point of order to strip out the fee increase from the bill

Yesterday, the White House released its review of the HTF bill currently being debated on the House floor. In a decidedly mixed Statement of Administration Position (https://m.whitehouse.gov/sites/default/files/omb/legislative/sap/114/sapfr22sa\_20151102.pdf), the White House applauded the provision reauthorizing the Ex-Im Bank. But it also cited the bill's principal "shortcomings," including:

-- maintaining only current and inadequate infrastructure funding levels

-- cutting the Transportation Infrastructure Finance and Innovation Act program by 80 percent

- requiring the DOT cease publishing safety study findings

Most of the nearly 300 amendments filed in the House have nothing to do with the White House's concerns. Likely to get roll call votes are the below instead.

- Key Amendments:

- turning the CFPB into a Commission
- deregulating/reducing oversight of large regional banks
- outsourcing tax debt collection to private interests

On the Fed Dividend:

- suspending the dividend reduction for one year to allow for a GAO study, instead using a one-time Fed capital surplus account draw of $1.6 billion
- replacing the dividend rate reduction with a drawdown of three-quarters of Federal Reserve stock

On Ex-Im:

- changing the target percentage of transactions that must benefit small businesses to 100 percent – up from the previous rate of 20 percent, and up from the 25 percent required by the Ex-Im language currently in the bill
- allowing individuals and companies to sue Ex-Im if they can prove they have been financially harmed by its activities.
- allowing transactions in cases where there is direct competition from a foreign export credit agency
- guaranteeing that the export credit agency is a "lender of last resort"

- Key offsets

1. The Fed Dividend: The package relies largely on revenue from reducing interest rates paid by the Federal Reserve to large banks, selling oil from the Strategic Petroleum Reserve, used to prevent energy crises, and directing fees from the Transportation Security Administration and customs processing.

The first of these, the "Fed Dividend" is the heavyweight, bringing in an additional $17 billion over ten years. It came in on cat's feet when McConnell proposed it and the Senate approved it in July. But K Street is alive and back from summer doldrums. It will be a pitched battle.

Banks in the Federal Reserve system must purchase stock in their regional Fed bank, on which they have received annual interest of 6 percent since the Fed was formed in 1913. To offset spending and keep the transportation reauthorization budget neutral that dividend could be reduced to 1.5 percent a budgetary measure that has banks' opposition. Fed Chair Janet Yellen has also called for caution in reducing the dividend, and 150 members of Congress signed a letter sent last week calling for a hold on any reduction until the GAO can study its effects.

2. Oil export ban lift. Though the Senate Banking Committee has passed legislation lifting the ban, the White House has pledged to veto legislation to lift the crude oil export ban. If passed, the amendment could cause the overarching bill to lose support from House Transportation and Infrastructure Committee Ranking Member Peter DeFazio (D-Ore.), which would likely lead to an exodus of much if not all of the bill's Democratic supporters, potentially leading to the failure of a bill with such a narrow margin.

3. Government-sponsored enterprise guarantee fees. A provision of the bill that passed the Senate in July, now being considered by the House, would delay a 10-basis-point reduction in the fees Fannie Mae and Freddie Mac charge on new mortgages they back. That decrease had been scheduled for 2021 and would be pushed out to 2025 under the highway packages. Because Fannie and Freddie are controlled by the USG, the higher fees would generate $1.9 billion in revenue that would be sent to Treasury as an offset for spending on highway projects. Mortgage bankers, realtors and home builders sent a letter to the House Rules Committee on Friday asking them to allow lawmakers to raise a point of order to strip out the fee increase from the bill.

- Riders:

The Export-Import Bank. A point of controversy for conservatives, especially Financial Services Chair Jeb Hensarling. He fought to see the government-run trade bank's authorization lapse only for a discharge petition led by Rep. Stephen Fincher to pass the House of Representatives with over 300 votes in support. It's in.

Tax Extenders. Less certain. The chambers would need to work quickly to forge a compromise between:

The House position: protect the R&D deduction, the Section 179 depreciation, the state and local sales tax deduction, bonus depreciation, subpart F exemption for active financing, CFC look-through, depreciation for retail and restaurant improvements, the teachers' expenses deduction -- and eliminate the rest.

The Senate Finance Committee voted in August to re-up all 52 extender provisions over FY 2016-25 at a cost of $95.6 billion.

CDC chief survives trial by fire on Hill

By David Nather and Brett Norman

10/16/14 7:56 PM EDT

Tom Frieden is getting a lot of public scoldings for all of the missteps in the handling of the Dallas Ebola cases — and there have been plenty of them.

But so far, the criticisms don't appear to be rising to the level where the director of the CDC needs to worry about his job. Frieden came through a three-hour House hearing Thursday with some bruises but also with his ability to function as director seemingly intact.

The past few weeks haven't been kind to the confident, science-driven Frieden, the former New York city health commissioner who has fought tobacco use there and tuberculosis in India. Over and over again, Frieden told Americans that the U.S. public health system was ready to handle any Ebola cases. And one mishap after another has made it clear that, at least in Dallas, the public care system wasn't even close to ready.

At Thursday's hearing, lawmakers from both parties vented their frustrations at Frieden. Republicans on the Energy and Commerce Subcommittee on Oversight and Investigations demanded to know why the Obama administration wasn't considering flight restrictions from the most severely hit west African countries. House Majority Whip Steve Scalise (R-La.) forced him into a stuttering, dodgy exchange about whether the White House had ever discussed it.

Even Diana DeGette of Colorado, the panel's top Democrat, angrily demanded to know whether Americans could be sure that hospitals would actually check for Ebola the next time a patient who has traveled to West Africa walks in with a fever and vomiting.

And yet, by the end of the hearing, none of the subcommittee members had called for Frieden to resign. In fact, the chairman, Tim Murphy of Pennsylvania, specifically said he wants Frieden to stay. The CDC chief should improve transparency and acknowledge missteps, Murphy said after the hearing, but "I think he needs to stay in there. Get the job done and get to work."

Frieden may have showed a bit of impatience at times, and looked more tired than he has at some of his public briefings. But he didn't suffer the same indignities as recently departed Secret Service chief Julia Pierson, who had little choice but to quit after a brutal Sept. 30 trip to the Hill, or former Health and Human Services Secretary Kathleen Sebelius, who was regularly humiliated with calls for her resignation at hearings on the Obamacare website disaster. There have been some calls for Frieden to resign, including GOP Sen. David Vitter of Louisiana and Rep. Steve King of Iowa on Thursday — but they're not the kind of lawmakers who can make life too miserable for the White House.

Frieden's not off the hook with public health experts. They say he has been overconfident in his claims about the readiness of U.S. hospitals, and that he was too quick to blame the infection of Nina Pham, the first of two nurses who caught Ebola after treating the Dallas patient, on a "breach in protocol" — a statement they say sounded like he was blaming the nurse.

But they also give Frieden credit for being flexible and willing to switch gears quickly — including updating the CDC's original guidelines for treating Ebola guidelines, which have been widely criticized by infectious disease experts as inadequate. They also say Frieden is a widely respected public health expert who has already performed a tremendous service by flagging the seriousness of the Ebola outbreak in West Africa, visiting the region himself to sound the alarm within the Obama administration.

"It took his trip to really raise the importance of this issue, and that's incredibly important," said Jeffrey Levi, executive director of the Trust for America's Health.

"He's been a strong leader, a very forceful leader, very confident about what he thinks should be done and not afraid to say it," Levi said.

Matthew Myers, president of the Campaign for Tobacco-Free Kids, who worked with Frieden on anti-smoking initiatives during Frieden's days in New York, describes him as a "no-nonsense," science-driven health expert who asks tough questions and "won't take a soft answer for an answer."

"I have not met another public health official who digs as deep into the science as he does, demands answers and then moves as rapidly" to implement them, Myers said.

To some degree, Frieden had to project confidence. His job as CDC director is to calm the public, not start a panic. But some public health experts say the Dallas hospital clearly wasn't ready, because it had not practiced and run drills the way U.S. hospitals should have been doing for months.

Frieden's claims that the country's hospitals were prepared to handle the virus "was an instance of overconfidence," according to J. Stephen Morrison, director of the Global Health Policy Center at the Center for Strategic and International Studies, who has worked closely with Frieden on global health initiatives.

But to Frieden's credit, Morrison said, "he's shown a level of self-criticism and humility in admitting mistakes and correcting course."

That includes upgrading the agency's instructions to hospitals to make sure health care workers really are covered head to toe when treating an Ebola patient. After Pham was infected, the CDC this week updated its guidance to hospitals, now recommending full body suits that cover the head and neck, and strict procedures for how to take them off after an encounter with an Ebola patient.

"I think in retrospect, everyone wishes that the amount of protection needed was recognized earlier, and the same with the strict protocol of gowning and ungowning" the protective equipment, said Paul Jarris, executive director of the Association of State and Territorial Health Officials, which helps coordinate communication between the CDC and state and local public health officials.

"The health care infrastructure in Africa was weak and there was a belief that it couldn't happen here," he said. "But the pathogen doesn't care about the quality of the health care infrastructure. There is no room for error with this pathogen."

Eric Toner, a senior associate at the Center for Health Security at the University of Pittsburgh Medical Center, said that Frieden has been an effective communicator as the face of the government's outbreak response, openly sharing the facts with public as he understood them.

The problem is "some of the messages have been wrong," Toner said. He noted that the claim that any hospital could handle an Ebola patient was undercut at the outset when the handling of the first case was botched in Texas. Having the tools to do a job, he said, was not the same as having the experience to get the job done.

"I think they said that because every hospital has an isolation room and every hospital has gowns and gloves and guidance, that they could do it," Toner said. "But there's a big difference between having those things and being able to use them with a highly lethal disease."

Frieden has also been criticized for his "breach of protocol" quote in referring to Pham's infection, although he quickly walked that back. "Number one, he kind of got ahead of the investigation. Number two, he didn't account for the possibility that the protocol itself might be deficient," said one public health expert who specializes in infectious diseases.

At Thursday's hearing, Frieden turned the spotlight on the hospital rather than the nurse — suggesting that there was "some variability" in the Dallas hospital's use of protective gear in the critical first two days of the treatment of the patient, Thomas Eric Duncan.

But despite the "fumbles" in the CDC's early response to the first domestic case, Toner said Frieden was "extraordinarily well-qualified and competent" to manage the CDC's response and "is the one who should be out there, talking to the public."

In particular, public health experts say early career experience as a disease detective at the CDC and his work in the field battling tuberculosis in New York City, and later for five years in India with the World Health Organization, are strong credentials for managing the Ebola effort.

"In India, you don't hear anyone refer to him as anything less than a miracle worker," said Myers. In that job, he said, the naturally impatient Frieden had to learn to work with a health care bureaucracy that never responds quickly to anything.

After his work in India, Frieden became the New York city health commissioner in 2002, under Mayor Michael Bloomberg, and turned his attention to reducing the number of NYC smokers. He held that job until 2009, when President Barack Obama brought him to Washington to run the CDC.

In most of his public briefings on Ebola, Frieden has been the voice of reassurance, declaring what virtually all public health experts thought: that U.S. hospitals were fully prepared because the American health care infrastructure was so much better than the resources in West Africa. Every time, he declared his confidence in science: We know how the disease works, he said, and we know how to stop it from spreading.

But his tone changed at a briefing on Sunday, when Frieden confirmed that Pham had been diagnosed with Ebola. Despite Frieden's repeated reassurances that the country's hospitals were ready to "stop Ebola in its tracks," not only had a hospital badly botched the initial handling of the patient — sending Duncan home despite his travel history and symptoms, only to admit him days later once he was critically ill — now a person taking care of him had been infected.

Frieden, usually confident and calm, sounded exceptionally somber. He said the agency was directing Texas Health Presbyterian to keep the number of people caring for the stricken nurse to "an absolute minimum" and only perform essential procedures.

Since then, Frieden has kept his comments about the Dallas hospital to a minimum, and Myers said he's not surprised that Frieden hasn't been more openly critical: "He wouldn't do that." But other public health experts believe that Frieden, and the rest of the CDC, are paying the price because the public expects them to have more control over how rigorously the Dallas hospital and others follow the protocols for treating Ebola.

"The disconnect in a lot of minds is that because it's the CDC, and because he is such a forceful presence, people assume there's a command and control situation, and there's just not," said Levi of the Trust for America's Health.

And whatever missteps have happened in the handling of the Dallas cases, most public health experts still believe Frieden is the right man for the job.

"It would be a huge shame if he came out of this damaged in his standing and his influence, because we're not going to do better than him to run this organization at this moment," Morrison said. "We need a strong leader and he's it."

Subject: Labor Nightly Update

Attachments: 7.1.15.xlsx

Good evening-

We had a good day today with productive labor policy meetings. Amanda, Maya and Mike Shapiro attended along with myself. 45 unions attended the five meetings we hosted throughout the day, broken down by labor sector: private, public, public federal, building trades and transportation. We had 90 representatives from each of the attending unions participate. I will be working with policy on a strategic follow up plan to these discussions.

Robby is presenting at tomorrow's AFL-CIO Political Director's meeting. Sander's campaign manager will follow. The digital team put together a excellent labor video, to compliment Robby's powerpoint, for tomorrow's presentation.

HRC completed calls today to President Hite (Plumbers). The Plumbers were very happy that they connected. A call with Chris Shelton (CWA) is scheduled for Monday.

Both NEA and SMART HRC videos were received, greatly appreciated and excellent response from the content. NEA: "You knocked this out of the ballpark!!!"

SEIU President Mary Kay Henry confirmed her attendance today at the HRC reception on July 14th.

Subject: [big campaign] NAACP Regional Director Position - with attachment

Attachments: NAACP Regional Field Director announcement _ March 2011.docx

Please feel free to forward the attached job announcement. These are critical positions for a very important organization -- that is critical to the success of the Progressive movement.

Thanks, Bob Creamer (so sorry it was originally posted without attachment)

NAACP Regional Field Director

The Regional Field Director is responsible for overseeing field operations in one of seven NAACP multi-state regions. The RFD provides support for, and direction to, NAACP state conferences, branches and youth & college divisions. She/he will provide support in the form of trainings, leadership development, advocacy for regional units within the larger NAACP family, as well as supporting region-wide member needs. Mobilize NAACP units, members, people of color and allies within the region to engage in grassroots and legislative organizing and civic participation on targeted campaigns.

Reporting to the National Field Director, RFD will:

- Coordinate and/or conduct Executive Leadership Training
- Work to increase youth activism and engagement within the State Youth & College divisions
- Provide advice and counsel to unit leadership on effective operations, NAACP goals and policies.
- Implement advocacy and civic participation campaigns on key issues, and establish alliances to integrate non-members into NAACP campaigns, with measurable accountability standards.
- Coordinate the efforts of regional, multi-state Field Organizers who may be hired to work on specific campaigns.
- Support the work of NAACP departments in their engagement with the region, including:
  - Assist Membership Division with organizing strategies implemented by state and local units.
  - Problem-solving with NAACP Constituent Services at the Regional level.
  - Provide support for the NAACP's disaster relief efforts within a region.
- Provide National Field Director with monthly and quarterly progress reports for strategic goals and organizing/advocacy activity of state and local units, and other related duties as assigned by the National FD.

QUALIFICATIONS

- Bachelor's and/or Master's degree from an accredited college or university.
- At least five years of management experience, preferably in a non-profit organization.
- Extensive experience directing large, complex organizing campaigns.
- Experience in membership-building and recruitment.
- Experience in setting and achieving measurable targets, managing teams, and coordinating between multiple stakeholders.
- Ability to handle multiple priority projects and meet established timelines and reporting requirements.
- Ability to communicate effectively, both orally and in writing.
- Ability to execute strategic goals and work effectively with state and local leaders.

- Excellent analytical, presentation and leadership skills.
- Ability to travel extensively.

Please send resume and a short cover letter, including for which Region (below) you are applying, and at least 3 professional references to Demcampaigns@aol.com to apply. Please include “NAACP Regional FD” in the subject line. NAACP hopes to fill RFD positions by mid-May or early June. (Please note that an additional region may open up).

Region 1: West Coast (CA, WA, OR, ID, NV, UT, AZ, HI, AK)

Region 2: Northeast (ME, VT, NH, MA, RI, CT, NJ, PA, NY, DE)

Region 4: Midwest (MT, WY, CO, ND, SD, NE, KS, MN, IA, MO)

Region 6: Southern (TX, OK, NM, AR, LA)

Region 7: Mid-Atlantic (MD, DC, VA)

Elizabeth Edwards On Health Care: ‘This Is Not A Cheap Shot; It Is Potentially Life And Death’

Our guest blogger is Elizabeth Edwards, wife of former Presidential candidate John Edwards and soon-to-be IOP Fellow at the Harvard Institute of Politics.

John McCain accused me of taking a “cheap shot” on “This Week with George Stephanopoulos” yesterday for noting that people with preexisting conditions like him and me would not be able to get health care under his plan — and that he perhaps was not as sensitive to this problem as he should be since he has been in government health care his whole life.

Sen. McCain noted that he was not receiving government health care for the six years he was in captivity. That is true. But it has nothing to do with my point — which is that the problem with Sen. McCain’s health care plan is not how it affects us — but how it affects the tens of millions of Americans with preexisting conditions who, unlike Sen. McCain and me, do not have the resources to pay for quality health care.

That is not a cheap shot, it is a potentially life and death question for tens of million of Americans. And it is a question Sen. McCain must address.

McCain’s health care plan is centered around the idea that we’d be better off if more Americans bought health coverage on their own, rather than receiving it through a job or government program. But maybe since he has never purchased insurance in the individual market, he does not know the challenge it presents for Americans with preexisting conditions.

A recent study showed that nearly nine out of every ten people seeking individual coverage on the private insurance market never got it. Insurers will disqualify you for just taking certain medicines because of the possibility of future costs, including common drugs as Lipitor, Zocor, Nexium, and Advair. People who have had cancer are denied coverage and those who get cancer run the risk of simply being dropped by their insurer for any excuse that can be found. And insurers make it a practice to deny coverage to individuals in high risk occupations, such as firefighting, lumber work, telecom installation, and pretty much anything more risky than working in an office.

McCain opposes universal health care because he claims it represents a “big government takeover and mandates.” But yesterday, he said he would help cover people with preexisting conditions by creating a “special Medicaid trust fund.”

A “special Medicaid trust fund?” Talk about a big government take over. Tens of millions of Americans have preexisting conditions. If he is going to expand Medicaid to cover Americans with preexisting conditions, he is talking about a massive, massive increase in the Medicaid program. He says he opposes more government involvement in health care, but his idea really would be government-run health care.

My questions is: why is he doing this? If he is so concerned about expanding government’s role in health care, why doesn’t he just tell the insurance industry that they have to cover people with preexisting conditions? Why is he more concerned about protecting the insurance industry — an industry which, by the way, his corporate tax cut plan gives a \$1.9 billion tax cut to — than the tens of millions Americans with preexisting conditions?

McCain’s advisors still can’t say how this special Medicare trust fund will work. I gather we will find that out when Senator McCain gives a speech on health care later this month. Rest assured, I will be paying attention.

About the Center for American Progress Action Fund

The Center for American Progress Action Fund transforms progressive ideas into policy through rapid response communications, legislative action, grassroots organizing and advocacy, and partnerships with other progressive leaders throughout the country and the world. ## A Superstar Committee: Demand Appointees Who Will Fight For Jobs And Revenue

Dear Leader Pelosi and Majority Leader Reid:

We have a jobs crisis in America. Unfortunately, the debt limit deal that was signed into law yesterday goes straight in the wrong direction. We are writing to urge you to ensure that we immediately change course.

Specifically, we ask that you only appoint members to the "super committee" who agree in advance they will only support a package that includes:

1. New revenues that exceed any additional cuts

2. A job creation package

If these components are not included, your appointees should agree to oppose the package, even if the result will be that the so-called "trigger" cuts go into effect. It's time to hold the line.

What about this as a base, and then she can drop in Israel when she's with donors:

Fourth and finally, we have to protect our country from the global threats that we see, from terrorists to dictators to diseases – and the ones that are still over the horizon. We have to assert confident American leadership to shape global events rather than be shaped by them. That includes taking on global warming and those who continue to deny that it exists. And it means always standing up for our allies and our values, especially our fellow democracies.

3 small suggestions:

1) if we are going to talk about building the economy for tomorrow, we should work in the the words innovation and sustainable someplace. Both are dog whistle words.

2) more people are working more jobs is ambiguous and subject to different meaning. Do we mean more people are working two or more jobs?

3) I've tried this one before but in the democracy fight, I still think it's stronger to say "I'll appoint Supreme Court Justices who will protect the the right to vote and not the right of a few billionaires to buy elections." Bernie has now linked Citizens United to Court appointments which may make this more or less desirable.

Subject: ethics appearance question

John, see the following from one of our ethics lawyers who is working to vet the vice president's team on the transition. He flagged the entry below from Monica Medina's resume. While her former role at Fannie Mae doesn't represent an actual conflict with the code of conduct, it raises an appearance issue particularly as the McCain campaign continues to try to link Barack to Fannie and Freddie. Given that our pre-election process is not public, I think we can get away with including Monica at this stage, but I would counsel that we reassess her involvement in a post-election transition. I'd appreciate your feedback. Best, Cassandra

Jason Kander (D-Secretary of State for Missouri & candidate for US Senate)
Tuesday, November 3rd: 3-4pm
Cozen O'Connor Law Firm, 277 Park Avenue, (Between 47th and 48th), 20th Floor
RSVP: $15.
Thank you to host Richard Gordon.

Jason Kander is the Missouri Secretary of State and the youngest statewide elected official in America. Kander is a former Army Captain who served in Afghanistan as a military intelligence officer, a member of the Missouri House of Representatives, and an attorney from Kansas City, Missouri. During his career in the General Assembly, he represented the 44th district (which includes parts of Jackson County) from 2009 to 2013. He is running for the United States Senate against Republican incumbent Roy Blunt in the 2016 election. The Hill has ranked the race #10 of the most vulnerable this year out of two dozen the Republicans are defending.

Congressman Joseph Kennedy III (D-Massachusetts)
Monday, November 9th: 12-1:30pm
AllianceBernstein, 1345 Avenue of the Americas, 40th Floor
RSVP: _ VERY limited seating; respond ASAP. Only confirmed RSVPs will be seated.
Thank you to host Peter Maroney.

Joe Kennedy III is considered by many as a rising young leader in the Congress. Currently in his second term, Kennedy represents a diverse district from the suburbs of Boston to the more industrial towns of Massachusetts' South Coast. As member of the influential House Energy & Commerce Committee, he has prioritized economic opportunity for working families. Whether leading efforts to combat opiate abuse or working with federal regulators to tackle the rising cost of energy across New England, his legislative agenda is driven by communities back home. Kennedy has become a powerful voice for social justice, championing issues like employment non-discrimination, pay equity, and comprehensive immigration reform.

Congresswoman Tammy Duckworth (D-Illinois & candidate for US Senate)
Monday, December 7th: 12:30-1:30pm
Paul Hastings, 75 East 55th Street, 7th Floor
RSVP: _ $20. Light lunch fare to be served. Must have confirmed RSVP.
Thank you to host Richard Farley.

Tammy Duckworth is an Iraq veteran who lost both legs and partial use of her right arm when the Black Hawk helicopter she was co-piloting was shot down in 2004, and won her Congressional seat in 2013. She is currently running for US Senate against Republican Senator Mark Kirk. She is also the first Asian American woman elected to Congress in Illinois, the first disabled woman to be elected to the U.S. House of Representatives, and the first member of Congress born in Thailand. Chris Cillizza at The Washington Post puts this race as #1 of races that may change the Senate.

Can I ask what headline we are seeking with this? Because it strikes me as a clever attempt to be both for and against the cadillac tax. Why aren't we just for outright repeal if we are going to cede back all the revenue anyway by holding <250k harmless?

Calif the Obama nominee does have real ties to the drug industry - Chris Jennings is calling a few people for me to learn more so we don't tip our hand directly. We are clean on Clinton Admin FDA Commissioner - it was David Kessler, an academic who had run a teaching hospital - and best known for taking on big tobacco. We could certainly signal that we want someone willing to stand up to Pharma (in the same way Kessler stood up to Tobacco).

BUT - I want to do a little more digging and due diligence before we hit this guy. Having been through a nomination fight with my husband (in which he lost), this is personal and messy and horrible on the person nominated and their families - so I don't take attacking this guy lightly.

Do you want to do it on Meet the Press?

Also, as long as I have all of your attention - on Cadillac Tax - the general consensus is that we should frame our position as Cadillac Tax should be repealed but that we should tax people who make more than $250K b/c they don't need to have tax-payer funded subsidies. I have not nailed this down with HRC. Should I try to do that today if we are going to announce this on Meet the Press?

Now that the U.S. has become home for Michael and me (my third home after Mexico and Germany), I would like to engage politically again and contribute to Hillary's campaign. As you know, politics has always been my passion and I am a long term and loyal admirer of HRC, so for me, the time is now: Could you use a Mexican/German-U.S. resident in the campaign?

I know that the set of skills needed in a Presidential campaign are specific and differ from what I learned in Germany, the Balkans and Latin America. Hence, I have no illusions, but here is what I could bring to the table:

- Knowledge of Latin America and a good understanding of the Latino community as well as Latino organizations in the United States;
- Strong communication skills, especially in Spanish but also in English, German, French, and Portuguese;
- Reading politics: I worked in party politics most of my life and had to learn to quickly grasp complicated political surroundings as diverse as Bonn, Belgrade or Brasilia. Therefore, I am confident, that I could get Colorado or Ohio, too.
- Policy expertise in climate change, renewable energy and international affairs;
- Experience in parliament, government, think tanks, NGOs and a large, bureaucratic financial institution
- I am a fast learner, committed, and will do what it takes. I would not have gone from Mexico, to Germany, to Belgrade, to Washington, to Brasilia and back to Washington otherwise.

I can barely imagine the amount of requests you get these days, so I know this is a long shot but I decided to try, because this is our new home and Michael and I want to be part of America in every way. If you think I could make a useful contribution somewhere in the campaign, I would be thrilled.

Jess did it! She finished the Ironman in 15:04:13. To put that in perspective, while she was on the course I ate dinner, attended a meeting, watched a World Cup match, slept a night's sleep, had breakfast, and made it back to the office to monitor her splits online.

She did the 2.4 mile swim in 1:26:21, the 112 mile bike in 8:02:40, and then ran a marathon in 5:09:28. I never really doubted that she would finish, but I am nonetheless completely in awe.

Today, fewer than one in four Cubans have access to the internet. This presents an enormous opportunity for American businesses seeking to provide telecommunications and IT services to the country, but it also poses a challenge for any company seeking to do business there.

The U.S. State Department recently took a delegation of telecommunications executives and experts to Cuba. Ambassador David A. Sepulveda, who led the trip, will hold a conference call next week on doing business in Cuba, with particular emphasis on IT and telecommunications issues raised with Cuban officials.

Can you join our conference call on telecommunications and IT in Cuba?

Today, the United State Supreme Court announced that next term it will hear the case of Friedrichs v. California Teachers Association, which calls into question the right of public sector to collect a "fair share" fee when it bargains for non-union members. These fees ensure that our public sector unions can continue their fight for fair wages and benefits that teachers, nurses, child care workers, EMTs, and so many others deserve who serve our children and our communities day in and day out. These workers deserve to be part of the strong middle class in America and their unions help to make it so. I will be watching this case closely and will be standing firmly united behind our unions in their fight for their right to bargain collectively for the higher wages that reflect the value of their work.

PUBLIC SERVICE WORKERS ON SUPREME COURT GRANT OF CERT IN *FRIEDRICHS V. CTA

Lawsuit Seeks to Curtail Freedom of Firefighters, Teachers, Nurses, First-Responders to Stick Together and Advocate for Better Public Services, Better Communities

Jeopardizes American Promise that Hard Work Leads Families to a Decent Life

WASHINGTON—NEA President Lily Eskelsen García, AFT President Randi Weingarten, CTA President Eric C. Heins, AFSCME President Lee Saunders, and SEIU President Mary Kay Henry issued the following joint statement today in response to U.S. Supreme Court granting cert to Friedrichs v. California Teachers Association:

“We are disappointed that at a time when big corporations and the wealthy few are rewriting the rules in their favor, knocking American families and our entire economy off-balance, the Supreme Court has chosen to take a case that threatens the fundamental promise of America—that if you work hard and play by the rules you should be able to provide for your family and live a decent life.

“The Supreme Court is revisiting decisions that have made it possible for people to stick together for a voice at work and in their communities—decisions that have stood for more than 35 years—and that have allowed people to work together for better public services and vibrant communities.

“When people come together in a union, they can help make sure that our communities have jobs that support our families. It means teachers can stand up for their students. First responders can push for critical equipment to protect us. And social workers can advocate effectively for children’s safety.

“America can’t build a strong future if people can’t come together to improve their work and their families’ futures. Moms and dads across the country have been standing up in the thousands to call for higher wages and unions. We hope the Supreme Court heeds their voices.”

And public servants are speaking out, too, about how Friedrichs v. CTA would undermine their ability to provide vital services the public depends on. In their own words:

“As a school campus monitor, my job is to be on the front lines to make sure our students are safe. Both parents and students count on me—it’s a responsibility that I take very seriously. It’s important for me to have the right to voice concerns over anything that might impede the safety of my students, and jeopardizing my ability to speak up for them is a risk for everyone.”

—Carol Peek, a school campus security guard from Ventura, Calif.

“I love my students, and I want them to have everything they need to get a high-quality public education. When educators come together, we can speak with the district about class size, about adequate staffing, about the need for counselors, nurses, media specialists and librarians in schools. And we can advocate for better practices that serve our kids. With that collective voice, we can have conversations with the district that we probably wouldn’t be able to have otherwise—and do it while engaging our communities, our parents and our students.”

—Kimberly Colbert, a classroom teacher from St. Paul, Minn.

“As a mental health worker, my colleagues and I see clients who are getting younger and more physical. Every day we do our best work to serve them and keep them safe, but the risk of injury and attack is a sad, scary reality of the job. But if my coworkers and I come together and have a collective voice on the job, we can advocate for better patient care, better training and equipment, and safe staffing levels. This is about all of us. We all deserve safety and dignity on the job, because we work incredibly hard every day and it’s certainly not glamorous.”

—Kelly Druskis-Abreu, a mental health worker from Worcester, Mass.

“Our number one job is to protect at-risk children. Working together, front-line social workers and investigators have raised standards and improved policies that keep kids safe from abuse and neglect. I can't understand why the Supreme Court would consider a case that could make it harder for us to advocate for the children and families we serve—this work is just too important.”

—Ethel Everett, a child protection worker from Springfield, Mass.

PROGRESSIVE TURNOUT

P R O J E C T

John --

3 months ago, the Progressive Turnout Project was formed by campaign veterans in President Obama’s home state. We’re an organization ready and able to use data and science to help secure big Democratic victories in 2016.

But to achieve our ambitious goals, we need to build an ambitious infrastructure. That’s how we’re going to get our highly-trained field representatives on the ground in as many competitive races as possible.

To reach our goals, we need 394 people to step up and become an Original Member of the Progressive Turnout Project by the October 31st deadline.

Chip in $5 right now to become an Original Member:

Subject: [big campaign] Ruth Marcus, WP on abortion/health care reform

Washington Post: The Next Health Reform Myth

By Ruth Marcus

Wednesday, September 9, 2009

<http://www.washingtonpost.com/wp-dyn/content/article/2009/09/08/AR2009090802960.html>

Item: "President Obama and top Democratic congressional leaders are pushing hard for health care bills that would result in federal government funding of abortion on demand!" warns the National Right to Life Committee.

Item: A television ad broadcast by the Family Research Council shows an older couple -- Harry and Louise on Medicare -- sitting at their kitchen table and worrying about how to afford a needed operation. "They won't pay for my surgery, but we're forced to pay for abortions," says the man.

Item: House Minority Leader John Boehner asserts that House Democrats' health bill "will result in federally mandated coverage of abortion on demand in virtually all of America's health plans," making it "illegal for health-care providers nationwide -- even Catholic and religious-based hospitals . . . -- to provide anything less than abortion on demand for anyone who seeks it."

You're going to be hearing more of the same. Don't believe it. These inflammatory statements do a disservice to a complex issue of public policy: how, in the context of health reform, to balance the deeply felt views of both sides in the abortion debate.

I am firmly in the camp of those who think the abortion decision should be left up to the woman. But I respect those who fervently believe that abortion is the taking of human life, so I am sensitive to concerns that their tax dollars not be used to pay for the procedure.

Actually, let's remember: Tax dollars already are used to pay for abortion. Even the Hyde amendment, which since 1976 has prohibited the use of federal Medicaid funds for abortions, makes an exception in cases of rape and incest and when the mother's life would be in danger. Americans who believe that abortion should not be permitted, even in such cases, are nonetheless required to pay, yes, tax dollars to underwrite these procedures.

On a more subtle level, the federal government offers tax credits to purchase health insurance and subsidies for people who have lost employer coverage -- without excluding plans that cover abortions. Again, tax dollars.

Still, the status quo is generally to keep federal money out of abortions. The health care given to members of the military doesn't include coverage for most elective abortions. Neither does the insurance offered to federal employees.

At the same time, most private insurance plans do offer abortion coverage. So the abortion question unavoidably arises in the context of health reform -- notwithstanding President Obama's understandable desire to "not get distracted by the abortion debate."

The controversy has two dimensions: First, if a public plan is created, should abortion be among the covered services? Second, even without a public plan, should the private insurance plans available on the exchanges be allowed or required to cover abortion -- even though government funds would go to subsidize some, but not all, of those obtaining insurance this way?

The only Senate measure produced so far is silent on the subject. In the House, an amendment offered by Rep. Lois Capps (D-Calif.) nicely threads these narrow-eyed needles.

With respect to private insurance, the Capps amendment makes clear that companies participating in the exchange cannot be required to include abortion coverage and that plans cannot -- contrary to Boehner's

In addition, it requires that the exchanges include at least one plan without abortion coverage -- relieving abortion opponents from worrying that their premiums would be used to pay for abortions -- and one that offers coverage. Although private plans could include abortion coverage, they could not use federal funds for that purpose. Instead, plans that choose to include this coverage could set aside a portion of their private premiums that could then be used to pay for abortion services.

It is hard to imagine how to craft a more sensitive approach -- other than telling women who purchase insurance through the exchanges entirely with their own money that they cannot obtain abortion coverage.

Then again, that would be perfectly fine with some of the critics. Others are happy to seize on any argument, however misleading, that might derail the larger enterprise.

We've obviously been going back and forth on the question of transition leadership given the uncertainty of the NEC appointment timing. To help advance the discussion, here some thoughts:

I think we have the following options all of them are predicated on the assumption that the NEC would take over upon his/her appointment:

1. Keep current structure in place with campaign staff slotted in as appropriate.
2. Appoint a transitional transition economic policy director.
3. Keep campaign structure/staff in place, but on transition payroll.

On balance, I would favor #2.

1. As soon as possible, the transition board in consultation with Senator Obama would choose an Economic Policy Transition Director.
2. If possible, such Director would become integrated into Bill's and my work such that they can provide guidance on useful work and take over seamlessly post-election.
3. Such Director would serve until such time as the President has chosen his NEC director.
4. The Director would begin immediately after the election to hire the transition team (including putting appropriate campaign staff members on the payroll), but would leave room on the payroll for any people the NEC director might want to add.

Here are some thoughts on the Transition Director:

1. Known and respected by Obama.
2. Able to command the respect of the campaign staff and outside advisors.
3. Personality that would work well with new NEC director.

Here are some candidates:

1. Jason Furman
2. Dan Tarullo
3. Gene Sperling
4. Daley/Reich/Rubin/etc as head with one of the above as deputy to avoid any signaling.

Let me know what you think and whether it makes sense to send this to Podesta. I didn't really catch up with him yesterday. Thanks.

Hi Mr. Podesta -

We are presently removing all faculty storage boxes from their present location due to water damage.

Ten cardboard-storage boxes are marked with your name and know as soon as we get to them we will re-house all contents into plastic-waterproof boxes.

Our space is more limited now than before. I am hoping you can either advise on what you would like to keep, recycle. or have sent to you.

If you wish, one of us can take a look at the top contents of each box and send you a quick inventory.

Our work would not be possible without your help. Thanks to you, in the past year...
View this email in your browser

Dear John,

Our work would not be possible without your help.

Thanks to you, in the past year, we:

- Opened new offices in Malaysia, Panama, and Mexico
- Provided legal information, advice and representation to 20,000+ refugees
- Changed Thailand's policy to allow the release of children from detention without bail
- Established Mexico's first "hospitality route," along which migrating refugees can access safety and rights instead of facing arrest and deportation
- In Panama City, we successfully advocated for refugees to legally engage in small-scale entrepreneurial activities, creating an avenue for income-generation and self-sufficiency
- Led regional advocacy to improve conditions for thousands of refugees across Latin America
- Worked with the Tanzanian government on a forthcoming urban refugee policy that will make it possible for refugees to rebuild their lives outside refugee camps, and
- Successfully advocated to the Malaysian government for the rescue of Rohingya refugees stranded offshore

On this #GivingTuesday, please donate and help us create a world where refugees can rebuild their own lives with dignity.

Donate Now

With thanks,

Emily Arnold-Fernandez

Chris –

If you would like an economic team update at Friday's meeting, would it be possible to have us near the top of the agenda?
Due to travel constraints and a need to meet with the economic team while in DC, we can't stay for the entire meeting.

If that's not convenient, we will obviously make it work.

Thanks,

Josh

Subject: [big campaign] McCain's Offshore Drilling Position A Flip From Three Weeks Ago

http://www.huffingtonpost.com/2008/06/18/mccains-offshore-drilling\_n\_107872.html

McCain's Offshore Drilling Position A Flip From Three Weeks Ago

It is hardly a secret that when it comes to offshore drilling, Sen. John McCain was against the idea before he was for it. On Monday, the Arizona Republican told a crowd in Texas that he was abandoning his long-time support for a federal moratorium on drilling along the nation's coastlines in favor of allowing states to decide for themselves.

But how recent a convert is McCain to this position?

In late May, during a campaign town hall, McCain was asked about the prospect of coastal drilling. His answer then was far more nebulous and skeptical of the idea compared to his recent, full-throated endorsement.

On a campaign stop in Greensdale, Wisconsin, the Senator suggested that turning to the nation's coast for energy needs would be something of a waste in time and effort and do little to resolve America's broader energy needs.

"[W]ith those resources, which would take years to develop, you would only postpone or temporarily relieve our dependency on fossil fuels," McCain said when asked about offshore drilling. "We are going to have to go to alternative energy, and the exploitation of existing reserves of oil, natural gas, even coal, and we can develop clean coal technology, are all great things. But we also have to devote our efforts, in my view, to alternative energy sources, which is the ultimate answer to our long-term energy needs, and we need it sooner rather than later."

Those remarks differ widely from the sentiment offered by the Senator yesterday, in which he presented coastal drilling as a move that would "be very helpful in the short term resolving our energy crisis."

In part because of these limited benefits, McCain was far cooler to the idea of ending to federal moratorium on drilling offshore back in May. Responding to an audience question, the presumptive GOP nominee stated his respect for states' rights while adding a healthy dose of concern about forcing states to open up their coasts.

"Can I just say that this young man just pointed out that that he believes in states' rights, and so do I. And the people of Louisiana decided that they wanted to drill off of their coast. And they do. The people of California and the people of Florida, those two states decided that they didn't. What I would like to do, frankly, is to maybe give them a greater source of the revenues to help maybe encourage them to allow some kind of exploration far off of their shores. But if I told the state of California, you've got to have drilling off of your coast, that would frankly be a contradiction of what were just talking about, about -- that's their land and that's off of their coast."

That McCain would, two weeks later, offer a full endorsement of removing federal restrictions on the drilling practice seems hard to attribute to the high price of gas (after all, gas prices were similarly priced in late May), but rather political posturing. A Republican with an environmentalism streak, the Senator has long stood against drilling offshore, arguing that longer-term solutions were needed to end the energy crisis. But the general election has changed that dynamic.

On other issues as well, McCain has found himself back-tracking from his prior advocacy.

In mid-May 2008, for example, the Senator was quoted saying he didn't "like obscene profits being made anywhere," and, as such, would be "glad to look" at a windfall profits tax on oil companies. Yesterday, however, he criticized Barack Obama for wanting "a windfall profits tax on oil to go along with the new taxes he also plans for coal and natural gas."

Subject: DA Conference and NYC meeting

After careful consideration for FFA presence at the DA Conference in April and a meeting with our east coast donors I would like to make the following proposal:

We need to work with DA to get an invite letter out this week so approval on this process by tomorrow noon is required.

Letter out from Podesta and Begala to donors inviting them to attend the DA meeting in CA end of April, and or NYC meeting in May (I do not want to wait until June to communicate with the East Coast Donors)

Joint program with FFA and DA for 1/2 day on the 30th to present an update on the Funds activity and progress in the progressive community.

Meeting in mid May- 1/2 day with a social activity (reception afterward) for our NY Donors

We agree to encourage as many donors (especially West Coast to attend the DA meeting) and we will also try to maximise attendance at the NY program. (We should also consider inviting DA to help us co-host the NY event)

We will work with Marc Elias and DA to structure a compelling and legal presentation of our efforts.

10/18/2016

If anyone has concerns with pursuing this plan please let me know as soon as possible.

Thank you

INVITATION: Debate & Book launch "New Labour in Europe: Leadership and Lost Opportunities", written by Anita Pollack

Wednesday 16th March 2016 - 5pm-7:30pm
at FEPS office, rue Montoyer, 1000, Brussels

Former MEP Anita Pollack is launching her latest book entitled
"New Labour in Europe: Leadership and Lost Opportunities"

The book investigates Britain's relationship with the EU during the pivotal years of the New Labour government. What emerges is a tale of an opportunity lost for Britain to establish a leading role in the shaping of Europe, resulting in declining influence and diminishing goodwill from its EU partners. Now looking towards the referendum questioning Britain's membership in the EU in June this year, the discussion at the book launch will focus predominantly on the impact these issues are having and where it will lead Labour and Europe for the future.

Speaking will be:

Anita Pollack, author of the book and former Member of the European Parliament

Richard Corbett Member of the European Parliament

Chaired by Ernst Stetter, Secretary General of FEPS

The discussion will be followed by light refreshments

Tina flagged that Jeffrey wants to see WJC this weekend in NY and as I understand from Tina, WJC wants to do it.

HRC has just reluctantly cleared it but wants one of us to be present for the meeting

If he does it, can we get Marc's talking points to WJC and suggest Tina engage with Marc before hand.

Hillary Clinton has been very open that her views have evolved over the years.

In 2013, she added her voice in support of marriage equality.

Even before that, as a Senator, she pushed for laws that would extend protections to the LGBT community in the workplace and that would make violence towards LGBT individuals a hate crime.

And as Secretary of State, she put LGBT rights on the global agenda and told the world that "gay rights are human rights and human rights are gay rights."

The piece will essentially say there was not, and will quote Rosen's tweet and Evan Wolfson saying this was not true and was hardly a basis for DOMA to be signed by WJC.

Xochitl has also gotten an inquiry from the Blade.

In addition to this, Socarides tells us he heard from NYT on this, though the campaign has not, so we do not know what he is referring to. I would not be surprised, however, if activists we're pitching this.

All that said, I do not think a statement from HRC is warranted simply based on these inquiries. Indeed, I think a statement from her likely attracts more coverage than just these inquiries and also could give the appearance that we are responding to Bernie at JJ, rather than clarifying our own remarks to Maddow. I missed the beginning of the conf call this afternoon on this, but I had assumed we were preparing an HRC statement less for HuffPo and more because that is what political thought was needed to quell the LGBT backlash.

If that is not the case, then for my purposes, I would just propose a spokesman statement that accounts for Dan's point (that she will not disavow her theory about the constitutional amendment) but also addresses the community's outrage over the idea that we might be trying to justify support for the law in 96 by saying something like, "Regardless of the differing motives that led to the passage of DOMA, none were justifiable since, as both Hillary and President Clinton have said, the law was clearly discriminatory."

I'm not sure anyone has asked. We would put it out there.

On Friday, and in many instances previously, I was asked about my position on the Defense of Marriage Act (DOMA). I appreciate that people have differing views of the DOMA situation [other word?] in 1996. The environment for gays and lesbians was different then and there were struggles about the best paths to take. That is common in all social change movements. I have been very open that my own views have evolved over the years.

I hope the important thing is that we are now moving forward toward justice, together. In 2013, I added my voice in support of marriage equality "personally and as a matter of policy and law." As I said then, LGBT Americans are full and equal citizens and they deserve the full and equal rights of citizenship. Like so many others, my personal views have been shaped over time by people I have known and loved, by my experience representing our nation on the world stage, my devotion to law and human rights, and the guiding principles of my faith. That's why, as a Senator, I pushed for laws that would extend protections to the LGBT community in the workplace and that would make violence towards LGBT individuals a hate crime. And as Secretary of State, I put LGBT rights on the global agenda and told the world that "gay rights are human rights and human rights are gay rights." I originally flagged HRC's Maddow remarks as potentially problematic in part because her wording closely linked her to two unfavorable policies of the past even as no one in the community was asking her to "own" them. Given that, my recommendation would be to make this statement about just her, her evolution, and her record -- not bring in WJC.

Relatedly, if we release a statement tonight, it will very clearly be in response to the Maddow interview. To the extent we can, I advocate for owning that so that we can clean this up completely, rightly position her as a champion of LGBT issues, and make sure we move on from any discussion of looming amendments or her being involved in passing either DADT or DOMA. Without getting into the weeds, can we say that the broader point is that the country is in a different place now on LGBT issues -- and thank goodness it is -- and that she's so happy each policy has been placed in the dustbin of history?

Last thought: I have raised this a few times to a smaller number of people on this thread but will flag this for the larger group as well. At Keene State College, she specifically cited friends playing a part in her evolution, which we echo here. That's fine, IMO, and quite believable. But if I were a reporter and wanted to keep the evolution story alive, I would start asking which friends she was talking to and ask us to provide them. Not a problem per se, but I think it is worth flagging now so we aren't caught by surprise later.

The larger point I was trying to make about DOMA, however, is still true. It was neither proposed nor supported by anyone in the Clinton administration at the time. It was an effort by the Republicans in Congress to distract attention from the real issues facing the country by using gay marriage, which had very little support then, as a wedge issue in the election. The legislation passed by overwhelming veto-proof margins in both houses of Congress and President Clinton signed it with serious reservations he expressed at the time. Luckily the country has evolved way beyond this in the last 20 years and most Americans, including the Supreme Court, now embrace LGBT equality. We are a better country for it. Although there is much work that remains, and I'm eager to help advance the day when we are all truly equal.

Bill Clinton: It's time to overturn DOMA

The writer is the 42nd president of the United States.

In 1996, I signed the Defense of Marriage Act. Although that was only 17 years ago, it was a very different time. In no state in the union was same-sex marriage recognized, much less available as a legal right, but some were moving in that direction. Washington, as a result, was swirling with all manner of possible responses, some quite draconian. As a bipartisan group of former senators stated in their March 1 amicus brief to the Supreme Court, many supporters of the bill known as DOMA believed that its passage "would defuse a movement to enact a constitutional amendment banning gay marriage, which would have ended the debate for a generation or more." It was under these circumstances that DOMA came to my desk, opposed by only 81 of the 535 members of Congress.

On March 27, DOMA will come before the Supreme Court, and the justices must decide whether it is consistent with the principles of a nation that honors freedom, equality and justice above all, and is therefore constitutional. As the president who signed the act into law, I have come to believe that DOMA is contrary to those principles and, in fact, incompatible with our Constitution.

Because Section 3 of the act defines marriage as being between a man and a woman, same-sex couples who are legally married in nine states and the District of Columbia are denied the benefits of more than a thousand federal statutes and programs available to other married couples. Among other things, these couples cannot file their taxes jointly, take unpaid leave to care for a sick or injured spouse or receive equal family health and pension benefits as federal civilian employees. Yet they pay taxes, contribute to their communities and, like all couples, aspire to live in committed, loving relationships, recognized and respected by our laws.

When I signed the bill, I included a statement with the admonition that “enactment of this legislation should not, despite the fierce and at times divisive rhetoric surrounding it, be understood to provide an excuse for discrimination.” Reading those words today, I know now that, even worse than providing an excuse for discrimination, the law is itself discriminatory. It should be overturned.

We are still a young country, and many of our landmark civil rights decisions are fresh enough that the voices of their champions still echo, even as the world that preceded them becomes less and less familiar. We have yet to celebrate the centennial of the 19th Amendment, but a society that denied women the vote would seem to us now not unusual or old-fashioned but alien. I believe that in 2013 DOMA and opposition to marriage equality are vestiges of just such an unfamiliar society.

Americans have been at this sort of a crossroads often enough to recognize the right path. We understand that, while our laws may at times lag behind our best natures, in the end they catch up to our core values. One hundred fifty years ago, in the midst of the Civil War, President Abraham Lincoln concluded a message to Congress by posing the very question we face today: “It is not ‘Can any of us imagine better?’ but ‘Can we all do better’?”

The answer is of course and always yes. In that spirit, I join with the Obama administration, the petitioner Edith Windsor, and the many other dedicated men and women who have engaged in this struggle for decades in urging the Supreme Court to overturn the Defense of Marriage Act.

Subject: Your signature for HFA tomorrow

Beth just got in touch with me and is hoping to get your signature for the HVF papers tomorrow. Apparently they need your signature on one document, which is a document of the directors of Hillary Victory Fund adopting the bylaws and appointing officers. They are incorporating the joint committee on Wednesday and all of the directors (you, Beth, and Erin Stevens) need to sign the document.

She would have a Perkins staffer (Rachel) come meet you to sign the papers. Would she be able to drop by your house in the mid-morning before you head to the airport?

She could conveniently also bring over the printed briefing and TPs for Geneva.

Thanks!

John- Per your request Kristina worked on an ESA insert for the WWF speech. Two docs attached:

1. ESA insert alone
2. ESA integrated into the speech. Beginning on the middle of page 5 on the paragraph that begins with "these investments are important" and ending at the top of page 7 with "we have to look to the future." Let us know how this looks to you. The speech is getting a bit long (approx 18 minutes) but still within their recommended 15-20 minute speaking time.

I can have Bruce at CAP print these out for you tomorrow in proper speaking format. I believe that he would also be available to scan and send me hard-copy edits if you want to work through drafts.

Thanks!

Fighting Poverty: The Progress Made and Challenges Ahead

January 8, 2014

Following the financial crisis that began in 2007, our economy lost more than 8 million jobs, the economy underwent the sharpest contraction of the postwar era, and $17 trillion in household wealth was wiped out—five times more as a percent of the economy than during the Great Depression. But even as most of our economic statistics told a frightening story, one important indicator barely budged. The poverty rate, measured using modern methods, rose only 0.5 percentage points from 2007 to 2010 according to new estimates from a research team at Columbia University.

The explanation for this surprising and little-known development? It was not that low- and moderate-income households were spared from the recession—they saw lost jobs and lost income like everyone else. In fact, the Columbia research team finds that without government cash, tax, and in-kind transfers, poverty would have increased by nearly 4.5 percentage points over that same period, nearly 9 times greater than the actual 0.5 percentage point increase.

That is because the poor, the near-poor, and middle class families were insulated from many of the worst effects of the recession thanks to the crucial safety net we have built up over decades—including tax credits for working families, nutrition assistance, and unemployment insurance. The expansions in all of these programs included in the Recovery Act lifted an estimated 6 million people out of poverty in 2009 and have lifted approximately 4 million out of poverty each year since then.

But the prevalence of poverty is still unacceptably high, with 49 million people, including 13 million children, living in poverty in 2012. We need to do much more to bring poverty down, help families ascend into the middle class, and raise the incomes of middle-class households.

The good news is that we have made progress on poverty in the last several decades, cutting the poverty rate by nearly 40 percent from 1967 to 2012 if you count income from tax credits, cash benefits like Social Security, and in-kind benefits like nutrition assistance, all of the same programs that prevented poverty from rising in the wake of the Great Recession. Since 1967, the safety net programs have prevented 1.2 billion people-years of poverty (that is, the reduction in the number of years spent in poverty cumulated over all people in the population in this period). But the progress we have made in reducing poverty over the last 45 years is almost entirely because of these programs—on a pre-tax and transfer basis the poverty rate actually rose slightly between 1967 and 2012, meaning that growing inequality and stagnating wages among low-income Americans would have led to growing poverty in the absence of the safety net.

Going forward, we need to continue to defend the gains we have made through public policies. This means protecting nutrition assistance from those who propose draconian cuts, extending emergency unemployment insurance for another year for those who are working hard to find jobs, and making permanent President Obama's expansion of refundable tax credits for working families like the Earned Income Tax Credit and the refundable child tax credit (expansions which are currently scheduled to expire at the end of 2017).

But this alone will not be enough. To continue to bring the poverty rate down we will have to not only defend and improve critical elements of the social safety net, we will also have to move forward and focus on raising wages and earnings.

The most obvious and direct way to raise wages for low- and moderate-income working families is to raise the minimum wage. At $7.25 an hour it is currently lower than it was in real terms in 1950. Since then, real per capita GDP and labor productivity have both more than tripled. Aggregate household wealth adjusted for inflation has risen nearly eightfold. Despite these profound transformations in our economy and tremendous improvements in overall living standards, those who struggle the most to keep up have not gotten a net raise in inflation-adjusted dollars in sixty-three years. President Obama has proposed raising the minimum wage so that, together with tax credits for working families, a parent working full-time at the minimum wage will not have to raise his or her children in poverty. Once raised, the minimum wage should be indexed to inflation to end the continual erosion of its value once and for all.

In addition, President Obama is also focused on pursuing other policies that will help speed the recovery in the short run, boost growth in the long run, and ensure that the growth benefits families across the income spectrum. Those focused on poverty – and incomes more broadly – have a stake in these proposals such as investing in human capital and mobility through high quality preschool, modernizing high schools, reforming job training programs, a grand bargain for jobs that could involve investing in infrastructure while reforming the business tax code, and comprehensive immigration reform, which would ensure a level playing field for workers and businesses alike.

None of these measures is a panacea that will immediately undo the long-term trend of stagnant wages and rising inequality. But the President will not be deterred by the difficulty of these challenges as we continue to dig our way out of the deep hole left by the Great Recession and build a more solid foundation for future growth.

Subject: [Poll] Veterans won't vote for candidates who would privatize the VA

John -

All day tomorrow, a grateful nation will pause to honor the veterans who have sacrificed in service of their country at home and abroad.

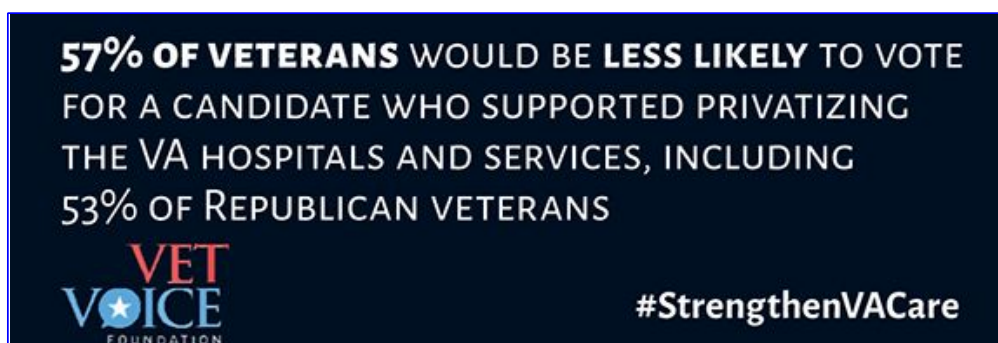

Thanks to a poll conducted by the Vet Voice Foundation, we know one of the best ways you can show your support for veterans this Veterans Day: stand with them in opposition of plans to privatize VA hospital programs and services.

According to the poll:

- * 64% of veterans oppose privatization, and that includes a majority of Republicans and Democrats alike.
- * Almost 75% of veterans who have reported using a VA hospital oppose privatization schemes.
- * Over 57% of veterans, including a majority of Republicans, would be less likely to vote for a candidate who supported privatizing VA care.

The findings are clear: health care is a promise made to our veterans, and after two wars in 14 years, a record number of veterans need care -- the VA is where the experts are, and we need to strengthen, not weaken, this system.

Show your support for those who have served by signing our petition opposing the privatization of veterans' health care.

This is sure to be a big issue in the coming election cycle, and as it rears its head we'll send our petition signatures to the campaigns and congressional offices of those who are flirting with putting the profits of private corporations over the care of our veterans.

Make no mistake about it, despite the fact that the vast majority of veterans in the survey approve of the care they've received from the VA, the system does need some change. But that starts with more doctors and caregivers who are equipped to provide the specialized treatment some veterans require -- like amputations and traumatic brain injuries -- that local doctors or hospitals may not be able to handle.

Put your name on the record: sign our petition opposing the privatization of veterans' health care.

Veterans need real quality care from the people who are best equipped to provide it. They don't want vouchers which may not cover all the costs.

Add your name - stand with veterans today.

All my best,

Jon Soltz

The Israeli courts have experienced unprecedented corruption over the past decade, and fraud in development, implementation and operation of the new IT systems is central to it.

Director of the Courts, Judge Michael Spitzer

OccupyTLV, July 29 - Judge Michael Spitzer, Director of the Courts, was asked to address reports of "lack of integrity" and "fraud" in IT systems of the Israeli courts, developed and implemented over the past decade under the authority of the Administration of Courts. Joseph Zernik, PhD, of Human Rights Alert (NGO), filed the request with Judge Spitzer as part of the process of Universal Periodic Review (UPR) of Human Rights in Israel by the UN Human Rights Council.

In his letter to Judge Spitzer (copied below), Dr Zernik notes that it now midway through the 4-year cycle of the UN Human Rights Council UPR. Therefore, he requests Judge Spitzer's response on the note, included in the 2013 UPR Professional Staff Report, regarding "lack of integrity in the electronic record systems... of the courts in Israel".

The note in the 2013 UN UPR Report refers to the Human Rights Alert (NGO) submission to the Human Rights, which details the development, implementation and operation of new IT systems, lacking in integrity, in the Supreme Court, the district courts and the detainees courts.

The request also refers to a recent report, published by the European Conference on e-Government, subject to international academic peer review, regarding "Fraudulent, new IT systems of the Israeli courts..."

The request also asks regarding corrective measures intended by the Administration of Courts, if any.

The Administration of Courts confirmed receipt of the request.

Dr Zernik's work was noted in a textbook on "Machine Learning", relative to the application of data mining methods in studying Human Rights violation, by identifying invalid and fraudulent government records, particularly in IT systems of the courts and prisons.

Director, Administration of Courts

RE: Request for response regarding design, implementation, and operation of IT systems of the Israeli courts.

Your response within 45 days is kindly requested.

Dear Judge Spitzer:

As part of follow up, midway through the 4-year cycle of the Universal Periodic Review (UPR) of Human Rights in Israel by the UN Human Rights Council (HRC), I herein request your response, as Director of the Administration of Courts, regarding: "Lack of integrity in the electronic record systems of the Supreme Court, the district courts, and detainees courts in Israel". [i] Such note was part of the 2013 HRC UPR Professional Staff Report, which incorporated by reference the Human Rights Alert (HRA NGO) submission for the UPR of the State of Israel. (Attached: HRA NGO Short Submission [ii] and Appendix I [iii])

More recently, a paper was accepted for publication and presentation by the European Conference on e-Government, titled: "Fraudulent, new IT systems of the Israeli courts – announced regime change?" (Attached [iv]). The conference included a special channel for e-Justice, and the paper was accepted following anonymous, international, academic peer review and an additional procedure (probably due to its unusual title), involving the keynote speakers of the conference – internationally acclaimed, academic experts in the field of IT systems.

In case you find validity in any of the failures of IT systems of the Israeli courts, which are documented in the attached reports, please also indicate, what corrective measures are intended, if any.

The attached reports only address the failures, which were discovered and documented through system analysis and data mining. The effect of such IT systems on the administration of justice in individual cases has been separately studied through a series of court cases, in preparation for the next UPR. The next HRA NGO UPR submission would be forwarded for your comments at a future date, prior to its submission to the HRC.

About the writer:

Dr Zernik's reports in the area of IT systems and Human Rights were incorporated into Universal Periodic Review reports of the United Nations Human Rights Council regarding:

- The United States (2010), with the note: "Corruption of the courts and the legal profession and discrimination by law enforcement in California";
- The State of Israel (2013) with the note: "Lack of integrity in the electronic records of the supreme court, the district courts and the detainees courts in Israel", and
- The United States (2015) with the note: "HRA NGO recommended restoring the integrity of the IT systems of the courts, under accountability to the Congress, with the goal of making such systems as transparent as possible to the public at large."

A textbook on "Machine Learning" found Dr Zernik's application of data-mining in Human Rights research among "Notable uses", and summarized it as follows: [v]

Data mining of government records - particularly records of the justice system (i.e., courts, prisons) - enables the discovery of systemic human rights violations in connection to generation and publication of invalid or fraudulent legal records by various government agencies. [vi,vii]

Surely, you would recognize the significance of the matter, and I look forward to receiving your response.

Truly,

Joseph Zernik, PhD

Subject: update

hi john!

met peter and others at JPMC today and also met with molly and chris at wyss.

molly and chris said it's a COO/GC spot and they are sending the description to me later today. we had a good talk. they are both really terrific. and working with a ton of money -- wow. i'm a bit stuck on the ny thing so i'm thinking about it. and honored that they are thinking about me. thank you for putting my name forward. (i did tell them too that i was pretty far along with JPMC.)

JPMC has moved quickly and gone well. while i still don't know the title and they don't quite yet have a job description -- from what i have heard from the 9 people i have met with -- i think it would be a great fit and next step for me.

I think there is a component of the job that is staffing dalila (the head of the philanthropy) -- managing her immediate team so that she is supported in a more strategic way. And there is a component that is taking on some of what she was -- and is still -- doing as number 2. She has 15 direct reports, including regional leads, and the idea is ultimately, if all goes well, they would report to me instead of her.

The general sense seems to be that the work of the team is strong but they need someone to look at the big picture and keep things moving and see where some systems could be put in place to help them get their work done and to further advance their work. Peter talked about connecting the dots. The big restructuring started really just about 18 months ago they say - so it's still very much in the building phase. There was a sense of there is clear need but you need to come in and poke around the engine to figure it out.

thank you for supporting me john. means the world to me.

Subject: Meeting idea

Hi John

I was talking to some Native leaders in Juneau today after our meeting.

Do you think it's possible to put a meeting together with Hillary and some Native women leaders? I could assemble a smart, talented group who are real leaders. It could include Alaska Natives and other Native American women leaders.

Please let me know.

Sincerely,

Julie

It's a good idea.

John and I just conferred. John, Amanda, and Huma are already scheduled to be there with you. We thought we could add Marlon and Jake into the group (checking with them now). If it's ok with you, I'd prefer that Dennis and me remain here because we're planning to do a bunch of work related to Priorities raising.

FYI: our expectation is that only John will be allowed into the Senate caucus.

Dear Caroline,

I hope that you are well and coping with the winter. You may have noticed that I am visiting DC on Friday the 7th. I shall be giving a talk in the afternoon at USIP.

However if by any chance John Podesta had a few minutes it would be really good if I could see him. Usual topic of how to deal with the Talibs. But I just got back from the region yesterday and so have some fresh feedback if he is interested. Methinks Mr. Podesta does not get to meet anyone with the kind of access to the T's which I have so I think he would find it useful.

Any suggestions on how to get to see him? Apart from the 3-4.30 meeting in USIP I am pretty flexible on Friday.

regards

Michael

Hi Lauren

I think these are great talking points. Nice job.

A small point, Iowa is a Right to Work state. Maybe something that could be added so the audience knows she's aware of that when she mentions Wisconsin. Iowa knows the negative impact of this legislation.

It is correct that AFSCME has endorsed her for each of her runs for public office. I do think it would be helpful if she specifically thanked them though for their support of her Presidential race in 2007. They were huge and they were there until the end.

Last, these remarks cover a lot of great ground around labor issues but something that would be helpful to add is on her plan to win the Iowa caucus, the Democratic nomination and the general election. I think it would be helpful to take a bullet point or two and make that case a bit to this audience as well. Her organizations strength, the endorsements of Senators Harkin and Shaheen and Governor Vilsack and her work to earn more labor support.

Hope that helps. Happy to answer questions!

Second Ed Tech Summit: Empowering Educators to Enhance Student Learning in the Digital Era

Monday, September 29, 2014
9:00am to 4:30pm

The Kaiser Family Foundation's Barbara Jordan Conference Center
1330 G St NW
Washington D.C.

On behalf of The Annenberg Retreat at Sunnylands, the Leading Education by Advancing Digital (LEAD) Commission, and Common Sense, we are pleased to invite you to our upcoming summit, Empowering Educators to Enhance Student Learning in the Digital Era.

Building on last year's education technology summit, this year's event will take stock of the current state of digital learning, with a particular focus on professional development for teachers in a world of blended learning. The summit will bring together more than 100 of the nation's leading educators, policymakers, ed tech industry leaders, and universities for a robust dialogue on how to ensure teachers have the training and support they need to maximize student learning through technology. The goal is to develop core principles and recommendations to inform policy, funding, and programs – and to empower teachers to enhance and enrich student learning through technology. Confirmed speakers and moderators include:

- FCC Chairman Tom Wheeler
- James H. Shelton, III, Deputy Secretary of Education
- Randi Weingarten, President, American Federation of Teachers
- Deborah Stipek, Dean, Stanford Graduate School of Education
- Kecia Ray, Chair, International Society for Technology in Education (ISTE)
- Pat Wasley, CEO, The Teaching Channel
- Mark Edwards, Superintendent, Mooresville Graded School District, NC
- Joshua Starr, Superintendent, Montgomery County Public Schools, MD
- Ruth Marcus, Columnist, Washington Post
- Sean McComb, 2014 National Teacher of the Year
- And more!

Space is limited. Please RSVP by Monday, September 22, 2014 by contacting Harrison Stark at hstark@commonsense.org.

Subject: data update

Hey everyone,

We'll discuss more on the call tonight, but below are our analytics tracking updates:

- In South Carolina we are up 59 to 26. This is a pretty sizable movement from pre-Nevada.
  - Our lead among African-Americans has grown to 49 (65-16). We are in a virtual tie with white voters (+4, but not statistically significant)
- In Virginia, where we just have partial data back. we lead 59-31
- In Minnesota, we are in a dead heat (45-45)
- In Oklahoma, we trail 40-44

Many of these calls include particularly good data since Nevada. We are closely monitoring to see if that bounce holds.

Thanks,

Hope you are well. I am writing to talk you into one more assignment for the campaign. Would you consider being one of our senior partners in the YYY working group along with AAA [insert name(s) of other senior partners for the working group]?

The role of a senior partner is to provide strategic leadership for the working group and to amplify campaign policy proposals. I've included some more details below along with a summary of the working groups.

I've copied Ed Meier, our Director of Policy Outreach, and Jed Herrmann, who is coordinating the domestic policy working groups. They can provide more details. If you're available on Wednesday, there will be a kick-off call for coordinators and senior partners at 1pm EST.

Hope you can take this on. It will mean a lot to the campaign.

Thanks,

John

Policy Working Groups and Senior Partner's Role

Senior partners will work with a coordinator (a mid career professional who has a high level of expertise in the policy area) to lead a large group of outside advisors in developing specific policy proposals for the campaign. These senior partners will also work with the coordinator to plan for and participate in the monthly working group call. In sum, senior partners will serve as a go-to person for the HFA policy team.

The key objectives for the policy working groups are to:

- Bring a diverse range of policy expertise and ideas as part of the campaign's policy development process
- Research, analyze, and draft policy proposals for consideration by the campaign and provide issues-based rapid response

Hope you are well. I am writing to talk you into one more assignment for the campaign. Would you consider being one of our senior partners in the YYY working group along with AAA [insert name(s) of other senior partners for the working group]?

The role of a senior partner is to provide strategic leadership for the working group and to amplify campaign policy proposals. I've included some more details below along with a summary of the working groups.

I've copied Ed Meier, our Director of Policy Outreach, and Jed Herrmann, who is coordinating the domestic policy working groups. They can provide more details. If you're available on Wednesday, there will be a kick-off call for coordinators and senior partners at 1pm EST.

Hope you can take this on. It will mean a lot to the campaign.

Thanks,

Policy Working Groups and Senior Partner's Role

Senior partners will work with a coordinator (a mid career professional who has a high level of expertise in the policy area) to lead a large group of outside advisors in developing specific policy proposals for the campaign. These senior partners will also work with the coordinator to plan for and participate in the monthly working group call. In sum, senior partners will serve as a go-to person for the HFA policy team.

The key objectives for the policy working groups are to:

- Bring a diverse range of policy expertise and ideas as part of the campaign's policy development process
- Research, analyze, and draft policy proposals for consideration by the campaign and provide issues-based rapid response
- Identify opportunities to highlight and amplify Hillary Clinton's vision for America with key stakeholders around the country

Subject: Tough Choice

John --

John Douglass is running a strong campaign for Congress from Virginia's Fifth Congressional District. After a lifetime of service to our nation in the U.S. Air Force and as a defense executive, John wants to return to public service as a member of Congress to promote new jobs and economic growth in Virginia.

John's proven leadership will help bring Republicans and Democrats together to break the partisan gridlock that has blocked progress on so many important issues, ranging from deficit reduction to a new farm bill for our agricultural communities. John has won the endorsement of the Roanoke Times and support from citizens across the district.

I am pleased to endorse John for Congress, and I hope you will join me in doing everything you can between now and election day to elect him to this important House seat. In the next 48 hours, John's campaign will have to make a tough choice about how much it can invest in one of their final TV ad buys of the election.

Please help John make that choice a bit easier -- he is several thousand dollars short of what he needs to get his message out.

John isn't another career politician intent on making a career in Washington. He knows what it takes to help our families, but he really needs our help. This final budget deadline will make sure he has the momentum it takes to win.

Thanks for your help.

Sincerely,

Senator Jim Webb

Subject: have to ask

Remember all that spending I told you about last week? Well -- it just got worse. Look for yourself:

$3,300,000 reserved by Boehner

$3,430,000 spent by Dold and other Republicans

+ $1,870,000 additional spending by a Dold billionaire backer.

$8,600,000 on ads against me

John, it's enough cash to make your head spin.

But here's the thing: even after millions and millions of dollars spent against me, our race is still in a dead heat.

How? Because of you, John. Your $5 and $10 gifts add up -- and they give us the resources to fight back against Republican attacks.

So naturally, John, I have to ask again. Will you pitch in before our 6:30 PM deadline? It's a big one, and we don't want to come up short.

Hi Wendy! Do you have time maybe Thur or Fri to talk about the action in October? Just wanted to do a quick check-in on that.

Tomorrow (ha!) a group of over 100 Canadian scientists will formally call for a moratorium on tarsands expansion. I was hoping you could forward this to Mr. Podesta given your relationship with him. Given his recent comments in the Gaurdian (<http://www.theguardian.com/environment/2015/may/28/canada-must-deal-with-tar-sands-emissions-says-clinton-campaign-chief>) some on our side of things are wanting to make sure he gets this new info.

A call for a moratorium has never been done in the scientific community—they decided to do this now as the road to Paris is happening and solutions to keep 75% of the commercially proven fossil fuels have to stay in the ground.

It only makes sense to start with tar sands given how carbon intensive this form of oil is (not to mention the amount of water and energy used to mine and produce it).

Of course, we have our own valid reasons for stopping the expansion of tar sands which focus around eminent domain for private gain, water pollution, liability of economic damages when a pipeline bursts, etc.

The consensus scientist statement from Canada draws a number of conclusions about tar sands:

- Continued investment in oil sands production and infrastructure is not consistent with Canada's current climate targets and is incompatible with limiting climate warming to a level that society can handle without widespread harm.
- Contaminants from oil sands development permeate the land, water and air of the Canadian boreal and many of these impacts are difficult to mitigate;
- In Canada, there are few controls and no uniform standards regarding pollution and other impacts from oil sands mining;
- The oil sands industry's claim that its mine sites can be restored to their former natural state is not true;
- Development of the oil sands violates the title and rights of many Aboriginal peoples of North America.

Subject: Question on Clinton comments on her grandparents immigrating here

To: jferguson@hillaryclinton.com , press@hillaryclinton.com

Hey,

I saw Sec. Clinton's comments on immigration at the Capital City Fruit on immigration where she said, "ya know if we go around this room there's a lot of immigrant stories. You know, all my grandparents, ya know, came over here. My grandfather went to work in a mill in Scranton, Pennsylvania..." (video attached on that).

One of my hobbies is doing the ancestry of presidential candidates and from what I can tell only one of her grandparents were born overseas. Her fraternal grandfather Hugh Rodham Sr.

I know she's talked about her grandmother immigrating before at an event last year (17:50).

<https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=gtBePkrEr3w&list=UUSQoxOTCUydTyTAjclbmVAQ>

"She immigrated with her family as a young girl to Scranton and went to work — very young—in a silk mill, and then she met and married my grandfather, who had also come to this country as a young man from the coalmining area in Newcastle, in England."

Looking at census records it seems only her grandfather was an immigrant. Coming as a two-year-old boy:

You need an ancestry log in for this (I can give you mine if you need it).

http://search.ancestry.com/cgi-bin/sse.dll?new=1&gsfn=Hugh&gsln=Rodham&rank=1&gss=angs-g&mswpn\_ftp=England&mswpn=3251&mswpn\_Plnfo=3-%7c0%7c0%7c3257%7c3251%7c0%7c0%7c0%7c0%7c0%7c0%7c&msbdy=1879&pcat=ROOT\_CATEGORY&h=12259921&recoff=8+9&db=nvpl&indiv=1&ml\_rp

While Hannah Rodham is listed as PA born on the 1910, 1920, and 1930 census records:

Subject: Follow Up to Chicago Meeting

Attachments: Elvir Klempic Resume.pdf
Elvir Klempic Cover Letter.docx

John,

It was a pleasure meeting you in Chicago last week. As a follow up to our conversation, I am attaching the resume and cover letter of Elvir Klempic for the Ethnic Outreach position with Hillary for America. Elvir is a Bosnian American who is currently interning at the DNC's National Democratic Ethnic Coordinating Council. I am Co-Chair of this Council and would strongly recommend Elvir for this position.

Secondly, we also discussed Secretary Clinton's appearance in Chicago on November 2. Would it be possible to schedule some time for an ethnic event? Last Friday, Billy Lawless and I gathered over 75 ethnic leaders to meet with DNC CEO Amy Dacey. This event was a huge success. We brought together leaders from their respective communities, representing hundreds of thousands of Chicagoans. What about a small ethnic roundtable meeting highlighting the vast ethnic diversity of Chicago( "the faces of Chicago")? Billy Lawless and I would gladly work with you in putting this together.

Regards,

Maureen

Subject: [big campaign] Rep. Steve King Sings The Praises Of Lobbyists On The House Floor: 'Somebody Needs To Stand Up' For Them

<http://thinkprogress.org/2010/02/26/steve-king-lobbyists/>

The Center for Public Integrity reported recently that the health care debate kept more than 4,500 lobbyists employed at various points throughout the year, effectively drowning out the voices of the American public. Sen. Bernie Sanders (I-VT) said these lobbyists descend "into the offices of members of Congress and say, 'Don't vote for change. Keep the status quo alive.'" ."

This afternoon, while speaking on the floor of the House of Representatives, Rep. Steve King (R-IA) defended the role of Washington lobbyists, saying that they "do a very effective and useful job on this Hill " and went as far as to say that "somebody needs to stand up" for them:

KING: The people of my district deserve every bit of as much representation in this Congress as the people do in any district. But this structure, this iron-fisted structure in this House of Representatives, that's what breaks down deliberative democracy and it undermines our constitutional republic and it denies the very legitimate knowledgeable input from all across this country. Think about how this works. Each of the 435 of us we go home to our districts. We build a network of advisors providing information for us ... in a whole series of ways. Town hall meetings, individual meetings, individual lobbyists, yes lobbyists do a very effective and useful job on this Hill. ... Somebody needs to stand up for the lobby, it is a matter of providing a lot of valuable information.

Watch it:

This isn't the first time King has lauded lobbyists. Last year, he praised astroturf lobbying group Americans for Prosperity for busing in protesters to Washington, DC, even comparing them to Paul Revere . And unfortunately, he isn't the only member of Congress who has taken it upon himself to defend lobbyists. During the Senate Finance Committee's mark-up session of its version of the health care bill, Sen. Pat Roberts (R-KS) demanded that the committee delay its votes to give health care lobbyists "at least 72 hours " to read the bill.

Of course, lobbyists hardly need members of Congress standing up for them. For the health care debate alone, "1,750 companies and organizations hired about 4,525 lobbyists — eight for each member of Congress — to influence health reform bills in 2009." Last year was a record year for lobbying expenditures, with \$3.47 billion being spent to pay lobbyists to influence-peddle at every level of the federal government.

I'm running to revive the basic bargain of America: if you do you work hard and do your part you should be able to get ahead and stay ahead. That bargain and the ideals that you and I believe in are what always made us great: that we are at our best when lift each other up and leave non one behind; when we have each other's back and don't turn our backs on each other; when we recognize that families are the backbone of our country and when families are stronger, America is stronger."

Dan, I know time is tight. So just two quick notes.

1. When she does the value of fixing the immigration system: "Fixing our broken immigration system would lower the likelihood of exploitation and suppressed wages – and potentially create billions of dollars in additional tax revenue. And the positive effects will ripple out across our economy. "

I would add for emphasis at the end: And the positive effects will ripple out across our economy, benefiting everyone in the nation.

2. She better practice Basta or it's gonna sound like... "I have one word for you: bastard! "

Mike -

Denis and I were chatting and we thought that it would be good to get Jim S in the mix for a meeting with O, for a # of reasons:

1) O may end up preferring Jim over the other guy, 2) we want Jim to have a key role/big job no matter what the outcome of #1 and 3) the other guy could say no.

Jim was on the trip, but his ability to spend much time with O was quite limited. Despite all of us expressing our high regard for Jim, there is no substitute for a little face to face time w/ Jim. Another option might be to put Jim on the plane for a leg, under the guise of him briefing O on an issue (like McFaul did). O you can have a failry private chat on the plane at the table.

Thoughts?

Dear John,

It was a great pleasure to meet you at the end of the National Clean Energy Summit in Las Vegas.

Please let me congratulate you on your impressive leadership in fighting climate change.

I hope this leadership will inspire our Spanish and European leaders, such as the new European Commissioner for Climate Action.

I wish you new major achievements in building political and business support for the carbon reduction we so badly need.

Best regards to you and your wonderful brother Tony,

Thanks guys. It sounds like we are in a holding pattern again on KXL. That said, I agree with the approach in the memo and think we should deploy it at the right time.

Three things:

1. I believe we should establish our Arctic position soon. I agree with the approach in the memo and would just add at the front "Based on what I know now...." This would give her some flexibility later.
2. I'd like John to take a close look at our revised LCV questionnaire. Can one of you send it to him, with the modified Arctic language?
3. How are we looking on updating the CEC factsheet?

Thanks,

Jake

Appreciate you coming back to me as I know how jammed you are. Great day for the Secretary yesterday –especially gun control & Benghazi response. As an fyi- my wife Carol works at Sandy Hook Promise with the woman Nicole who the Secretary introduced.

Best times for me tomorrow are 930am, 2pm or 5pm. May be best for me to call you.

Agenda:

1. Meeting w the Secretary & best way to interact directly with her (seldom of course).
2. Best way forward to integrate & interact with the team (economics, business, surrogate, debate...).
3. VP Biden update.

Speak soon,

One further thought on the current draft: we might consider softening the "Chris did not believe retreat was an option – and neither do I" line. I don't think we want to suggest that there was a commitment to be there at any and all costs; but rather, that the known risks were being balanced with the reasons for being there, regular assessments of this balance were made, and that the people on the ground were best-positioned to contribute to those assessments.

I think it is good. Imagine the clip they will use is the partisan slugfest sentence. I don't love "backs of dead Americans" in that sentence. I think that is too graphic and splashes back on her as appearing to exploit their deaths.

I like it. Just two thoughts.

We twice call the ARB “independent”—I’d prefer to call it “non-partisan” as we do once in the draft. Hard Choices did not call it “independent”, and since it’s appointed by and responsible to the Secretary, I think we open an avenue of attack by calling it “independent”.

Can we get some more numbers into the early “diplomacy is dangerous” discussion? Sixty-six American diplomatic personnel and over a hundred contractors and locally employed staff killed since the 1970’s (or whatever the numbers are). I recognize we have some numbers on page 3 (Beirut bombing, 1998 attacks).

John, some time ago we agreed to adapt HRC's December RFK speech into an essay for a forthcoming collection on criminal justice reform being published by Michael Waldman and the Brennan Center (my understanding is that several Republican presidential candidates are also submitting essays). HRC asked that we layer in some of her other relevant comments and past positions, which we've done, while keeping close to the original so that it doesn't seem like a new official pronouncement. Would you like to take a look before we ship it back to Brennan?

Quick update. Made a couple calls today

1. Mitch thinks the Tewes rumor is beyond false, and they are extremely close
2. Most of the outreach I have heard about is very general in nature. No specific offers on any states.
3. Most of the folks who would do a campaign from Obama world we have already

Have more calls today and tomorrow. Will keep posted

Hi everyone -

Sending this draft of remarks for tomorrow in Alabama. This is a stump speech based on the op-ed that was approved this morning.

Thanks to everyone who has given input so far. We'll send a draft to the book tonight, so if folks could weigh in ASAP, that would be very much appreciated.

Thank you!

HILLARY RODHAM CLINTON
REMARKS AT ALABAMA DEMOCRATIC CONFERENCE
HOOVER, ALABAMA
OCTOBER 17TH, 2015

Hello, Alabama Democrats!

What a week! Who watched the debate on Tuesday?

I don't know about you, but it made me proud to be a Democrat. When Republicans debate, they double down on trickle down. They demonize immigrants. And for people who say they love small government, they seem to spend a lot of time talking about how the government should regulate and restrict women's reproductive health.

But you heard something very different at the Democratic debate in Las Vegas, didn't you?

You heard real solutions to the problems that keep families up at night. Plans to raise wages and create good jobs ... make college affordable ... keep our communities safe from gun violence ... defend women's right to make our own health decisions ... take on economic inequality and racial inequality ...

That's what the Democratic Party is all about.

10/18/2016

We should all be proud of what we stand for and who we fight for – hard-working middle-class families, immigrants and entrepreneurs, teachers and nurses, students and factory workers, firefighters, veterans, everyone who's ever been knocked down but refused to be counted out. People of all races, all religions, gay and straight, rich and poor, young and old ... everyone, every American, has a place in our party. That's what makes us Democrats.

And, I know our Republican friends hate to hear this, but it's no accident that America's economy is stronger when there's a Democrat in the White House.

Unemployment goes down. The stock market goes up, and it goes up faster. Businesses do better. Deficits get smaller.

Under a Republican President, we're four times more likely to see a recession.

And then a Democrat has to come in and clean up the mess.

Just look at how far we've come in the past six and a half years.

I don't think President Obama gets nearly the credit he deserves. Remember the mess he inherited? The Great Recession could have become a Great Depression. But thanks to the hard work and sacrifice of the American people—and the President's leadership—we worked our way back from the brink. Saved the auto industry. Imposed tough new rules on Wall Street. Helped 16 million people gain access to quality, affordable health care.

America is stronger, healthier, more prosperous, more free and more fair today than we were before President Obama took office.

Now, I'm not running for President Obama's third term. And I'm not running for my husband's third term. I'm running for my first term. But you better believe that, as President, I'll proudly carry forward this record of Democratic achievement.

That doesn't mean resting on our laurels. Not at all. There's still so much left to do.

We're standing again. But we're not yet running the way America should.

For most people, paychecks haven't budged in years. The minimum wage may as well be called what it is: a poverty wage. Many women are still paid less than men—and women of color paid least of all. The cost of everything from college to prescription drugs keeps going up. Unemployment for African Americans is still more than double that of white Americans. Student debt is still holding too many people back. In many states, quality child care is even more expensive than college tuition. And even though it would help working families all across this country, paid family leave is not yet the law of the land.

I'm running for president to change all that.

I'm running to give hardworking families a raise. To fight for small businesses that create jobs. To make sure that when a company does well, it's not just the shareholders and executives who benefit—it's also the people who work at that company and make those profits.

I'm running to make life a little easier for working parents. To close the wage gap—because women deserve fair pay. To defend the Affordable Care Act, and make sure everyone in America has access to quality, affordable health care. To put a world-class education within reach for all Americans, from early childhood education all the way through college.

Under my plan cost won't be a barrier and debt will never hold you back.

If you live here in Hoover and want to go to the University of Alabama, you won't have to borrow a cent to pay tuition. And I want to do more to support Historically Black Colleges, which often have to scramble for resources.

I'm running for President to end the era of mass incarceration. We can't keep imprisoning more people than anybody else in the world.

I'm running to take on the racial discrimination that despite our best efforts and our highest hopes, still plays a significant role in determining who gets ahead in America and who gets left behind.

We need to stand up and say loudly and clearly that black lives matter. And we need to go further. We need to take on the systemic inequities so many Americans face—especially people of color—in health care, housing, education, and criminal justice.

I'm running for president to defend the most fundamental right in our democracy – the right to vote.

I was over in South Texas earlier this week. It's a place close to my heart. When I was 24 years old, I went there for the summer to register voters for Democratic National Committee. I went with my boyfriend – this tall, brilliant guy with a bushy head of hair a beard, and a passion for Democratic politics ...

Now, the people of South Texas and the Rio Grande Valley were a little skeptical of a blond girl from Chicago who didn't speak a word of Spanish. That was understandable. But as I drove around knocking on doors, people welcomed me into their homes. I sat at a lot of kitchen tables. I drank a lot of very strong coffee. And I listened as people talked to me about their hopes and fears and dreams for their families' futures.

And even though a lot of what I heard was new to me, a lot of it was familiar. I met mothers and grandmothers who worked long hours for not that much money. They were a lot like my mother. I met parents running small businesses, teaching their kids the value of hard work, that everything good in life is worth working for. They were a lot like my father.

A lot of the people I met that summer weren't registered because they didn't believe their vote would matter. And that's not because they were cynical – it's because they had never seen anything to convince them otherwise.

I spent a lot of time that summer thinking about why voting is important. Of course, elections help determine the direction of our country. But beyond that, there's something special about voting. Something powerful and sacred.

That moment when you cast a vote – that's a reminder that you count. That each and every one of us counts. That what we do and think and believe really does have an impact on our future.

We may be up against Super PACs and billionaires. But Donald Trump and the Koch Brothers, for all their money, they get only one vote on Election Day, just like everyone else.

One person, one vote. That's what we believe. And no one should be able to take that vote away from us.

That's why we can't close our eyes to attacks on voting rights across the country. They don't just threaten the trustworthiness of our elections. They threaten what it means to be a citizen. To be an American.

In Alabama, without an ID, you can't vote.

Yet Governor Bentley and his administration announced plans this month to close 31 driver's license offices across the state. They just so happened to include every single county where African Americans make up more than 75 percent of registered voters. What a coincidence!

The closings will make getting driver's licenses and personal identification cards much harder for many African Americans, putting up new barriers to voting.

As many Alabamans have said in recent days, that's just dead wrong.

The Governor and his administration are insisting the closings had nothing to do with race. Maybe they really believe that. But the facts tell a different story.

The efforts to roll back voting rights in Alabama are a blast from the Jim Crow Past.

Fifty years after Rosa Parks sat and Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. marched and John Lewis bled, it's hard to believe Americans are still forced to fight for their right to vote—especially in places where the civil rights movement fought so hard all those years ago.

Governor Bentley and other Republicans in Alabama have offered the same excuses we've always heard to justify laws that disproportionately affect people of color—or, for that matter, low-income people, women, young people, and seniors.

It reminds me of that old saying: "You find a turtle on a fence post, it didn't get there on its own."

Institutionalized racism doesn't just happen. People make it happen.

But for every Republican governor working to dismantle voting rights, there are Americans determined to keep marching forward.

I'm proud of everyone in Alabama who leapt into action to confront this injustice.

So here's my message to you today: Don't give up.

Keep marching. Keep demanding justice. Don't stop until you get it. You've got people all over America rooting for you and standing with you. I am one of them. And I will never turn my back on you.

It's time for Governor Bentley and the Alabama legislature to listen to their constituents and reverse the decision to close the DMV offices. Not tomorrow. Not eventually. Right now.

And they should do more than that.

Alabama is one of 17 states with no early voting. That needs to change. If a family leaving church on the Sunday before Election Day feels inspired to go out and vote, they should be able to do that.

People who serve time should have their voting rights restored when they get out. They're citizens, too. Nothing about having been in prison changes that.

Alabama should stop requiring people to provide proof of citizenship when they register to vote. It's demeaning, it's discriminatory, and it has to end. Too many people don't have access to their birth certificate or passport—for example, college students who are living away from home.

We should be doing everything we can to get more people involved in our political process, not turning them away when they try to participate.

And I'm not just picking on Alabama. This state is not alone in limiting voting rights. I wish you were – but you aren't. Many states have passed laws that make voting harder.

And since the Supreme Court gutted a key provision of the Voting Rights Act, the situation has gotten even worse.

Some people seem totally fine with this situation. They'd keep pushing our country in this shameful direction. And that includes many of the Republican candidates for president.

Jeb Bush says he wouldn't reauthorize the Voting Rights Act because voting conditions have improved since it was passed. As Justice Ruth Bader Ginsburg put it, that's like throwing away your umbrella in a rainstorm because you're not getting wet. If a law is working, we should let it keep working.

When recently asked about voter ID laws, Marco Rubio replied, "What's the big deal?"

John Kasich restricted early voting in Ohio after the 2008 election, when 77 percent of early voters in the most populated county were African American.

What part of democracy are all these candidates so afraid of?

Many of the leaders and activists who marched and fought for the right to vote are no longer alive to stop these abuses. But we are. And we have an obligation to act.

First, Congress should put principle ahead of politics and pass the Voting Rights Advancement Act. This bipartisan bill would restore the full protections of the Voting Rights Act.

Second, we should set a standard across this country of at least 20 days of early, in-person voting—including opportunities for weekend and evening voting. We should make it easier for people to cast their ballots.

Third, we should enact universal, automatic voter registration, so every young person in every state is automatically registered to vote when they turn 18, unless they opt out. I applaud California for beginning to implement a similar approach last week. More states should follow their lead.

These steps alone won't solve everything. But we owe it to future generations to fight back against attacks on voting. We owe it to them to make sure our voting system works for a modern America.

We need to meet this moment with the bravery and determination of those who came before us. It's time for leaders in every party, at every level of government, to be on the right side of history.

And once again, the movement can start right here in Alabama.

I know the challenges we face are daunting. We're up against some pretty powerful forces who will do, say, and spend whatever it takes to stop us.

So progress is going to take every one of us doing our part.

I'm a progressive who likes to get things done. I know how to stand my ground and how to find common ground.

Some of you might remember we had a vigorous campaign back in 2008.

President Obama and I went at it pretty good. And he won and I lost. Then, to my great surprise, he asked me to be his Secretary of State. He wouldn't take no for an answer – believe me, I tried. In the end, he made that request, and I accepted it, because we both love our country. And that's how democracy is supposed to work.

Americans may differ, bicker, stumble, and fall. But we're at our best when we pick each other up.

We've got a long campaign ahead of us. And this isn't going to be easy. But I've been fighting for families and underdogs my entire life, and I'm not going to stop now. In fact, I'm just getting warmed up.

So I'm here to ask for your help. I'm not taking a single primary or caucus-goer for granted. I'm building an organization in all 50 states and territories to help Democrats win up and down the ticket, not just the presidential campaign.

It's time to rebuild our party from the ground up. And if you make me the nominee, that's exactly what we'll do.

I've been around long enough to know every county and local office counts; every school board and state house and Senate seat counts; every single one. So we have to compete everywhere. When our state parties are strong, we win.

So I hope you'll join me, because we're building something that will last long after next November.

Together, we can make sure that every person in America—no matter who they are, where they come from, what language they speak at home, or the color of their skin—has the chance to live up to his or her God-given potential.

We can build an America where there are no ceilings for anyone. Where no one is left out or left behind. And a father can look his daughter in the eye and say: You can be anything you want to be—even president of the United States.

Thank you.

Subject: Let Barack know you'll be watching

John, I want to thank you.

Over the past seven years, and through the course of seven State of the Union addresses, Barack has talked about his goals and our accomplishments -- from passing the Affordable Care Act and bringing health care to nearly 18 million people, to replacing No Child Left Behind with education reform that works for American families, to taking historic steps to address climate change -- the list goes on and on. And none of it would have happened without your generous support, your unflagging dedication, and your determination to create change.

At 9:00 p.m. ET tonight, Barack will deliver his very last State of the Union address, and when he stands up to talk to Congress and the American people, I know that he'll be thinking of you and everything you've done to make this journey possible.

So John, I hope you'll be watching as our President lays out his vision for the next year and beyond. Our work isn't finished yet, and Barack needs you by his side for his final year in the Oval Office. Add your name to say you're tuning in:

<http://my.democrats.org/State-of-the-Union>

Thank you, thank you, thank you -- for all that you've done, and for all that I know you'll continue to do to keep moving this country forward.

Subject: Strawman Talking Points

I have tremendous admiration for the way that SEIU and its allies and the workers have catapulted this issue and made it central to the discussion in this country. As I have sat down with workers, including those who SEIU introduced me to, I have seen the workers who are putting so much on the line in this fight.

, I have been unflinching in my support for the right of workers to organize for higher wages and dignity in the workplace - from fast food to home care to airports. This includes my support when I have met with workers in person, but also publicly speaking out in support for the Fight for $15.

Throughout all these conversations, I have been clear about where I stand - I support $12 per hour - more than any of the Republicans running for president, and support a higher wage in the larger cities - many of which have been the focus for this fight - NYC and Los Angeles.

But I want you to keep pushing for higher wages, keep pushing employers, and keep organizing, and I want to support you on that. I meant it when I said I want to be a "champion" in this fight.

Subject: memo on possible WJC meetings on energy / efficiency / climate

Not sure what you think about this memo from about a year ago – and somewhat OBE – but would welcome your feedback when we talk:

MEMORANDUM

TO: President Clinton
FROM: Ami Desai
CC: Bruce Lindsey, Laura Graham, Doug Band, Justin Cooper
RE: YOUR leadership on climate change
DATE: December 3, 2010

Mr. President:

As we look ahead to next year, below for your consideration is a possible mechanism for you to continue to lead climate change efforts, via the Clinton Foundation.

The idea would be for YOU to convene a few climate-specific meetings with different groups of CEOs, and to use these meetings in advance as opportunities to incentivize the CEOs to come to the table with their best ideas on climate issues and also their perspectives on the challenges. This would enable YOU to connect the dots and better organize and advance these efforts.

Currently there is a vacuum in this space and a lot of people and organizations are spinning their wheels, but no one has had the vision or capacity to pull together the key folks to drive forward on solutions. This process would put YOU into a central leadership role in this space, and position YOU as a leader continuing to drive forward toward solutions.

We could structure this either as multiple meetings with groups of CEOs in different sectors (details below), or we could structure it as one large meeting with CEOs from multiple sectors. Either approach would require significant advance staff work.

If you so desire, this needn't be just about policy; it also could be about specific projects; and about city- or state-level programs that could be advanced even in the absence of federal policy improvements.

As a new endeavor, it probably would be more manageable to focus this process on enhancing the leadership of US corporations, organizations, and governments on climate issues, rather than tackling global issues, although the companies involved certainly would be able to share multi-national perspectives and comparisons. This process would position YOU on the world stage as attempting to lead the US in the right direction.

We could choose to announce and market this process to the media, or we could do it behind the scenes. I would recommend behind the scenes until we have meaningful deliverables.

At best, this process could help to identify specific policies that could be “models”; specific projects and business models that could be advanced; and some ways to start showing, cohesively and compellingly, that investments in energy efficiency and clean energy actually are good for both economic growth – and job creation.

At a minimum, this process would help us to better understand the key challenges and opportunities, from the perspectives of the corporations and organizations that have the capacity to help effect the most change.

Part of the reasoning behind this idea is that we have had a series of interesting meetings with private companies – Honeywell and Owens Corning, for example – and they appear genuinely committed to expanding the market for energy efficiency, but as you know are encumbered by a variety of constraints. Also, there already are industry-specific groups that are doing work to identify the needed next steps, but they seem frustrated that no one in a senior leadership position is listening to them or advocating for solutions in ways that resonate with the public, the government, the media, the business community, etc. The objectives of the meetings would be to spur private sector leadership, distill a consensus around specific goals, establish timelines for next steps, and develop mechanisms to scale-up successful models.

Below are possible groups of CEOs with whom we could convene meetings:

- Labor unions
- Real estate developers
- Transportation companies
- Large manufacturers
- Banks
- Foundations
- Sovereign wealth funds
- Private for-profit investors
- ESCOs
- Energy efficiency products
- Cutting-edge technologies
- Clean tech / renewable energy companies
- Environmental groups

We'd welcome your feedback. Is this something that we should explore further? Under the construct outlined above, some next steps would include selecting the sectors to begin with (from above, or others), identifying the appropriate companies or organizations in those sectors, issuing invitations and conducting pre-meeting discussions to determine the CEOs' perspectives on key challenges and opportunities.

TODAY'S TABLE OF CONTENTS

SEN. CLINTON'S CAMPAIGN:

- + Clinton, Obama Emerge From Super Tuesday In Near-Draw.
- + Clinton Loaned Campaign $5 Million In Run-Up To Super Tuesday.
- + Clinton Friends Say Campaign Shake-Up May Now Go Ahead.
- + Obama Seen As Having Advantage In Near-Term Contests.
- + Obama Says He Is Not Committed To Houston Debate.
- + DNC Pressuring Michigan, Florida To Hold Caucuses.
- + Clinton's "Individual Mandate" Said To Be Government Coercion.

Sen. Clinton's Campaign:

CLINTON, OBAMA EMERGE FROM SUPER TUESDAY IN NEAR-DRAW. The Chicago Tribune (2/6, Ohlemacher, 607K) reports that after Super Tuesday, Sen. Hillary Rodham Clinton "held onto a relatively small lead over Sen. Barack Obama. However, there were still outstanding delegates to be awarded in Illinois and Georgia, where Obama fared well." Clinton "led with 763 Super Tuesday delegates to Obama's 731. In Missouri, the race was so close the two candidates split the state's 72 delegates evenly." Overall, Clinton "has 1,024 delegates, to 933 for Obama with 2,025 delegates required to claim the nomination in Denver at this summer's convention." McClatchy (2/7, Lightman, Talev) reports they "split popular votes almost evenly: Clinton got 7,347,971 (50.2 percent), while Obama got 7,294,851 (49.8 percent), according to one unofficial calculation by Time magazine."

ABC World News (2/6, story 4, 3:00, Gibson, 8.78M) reported, "Super Tuesday was designed to produce party nominees; it did no such thing. Look at the Democratic total vote from last night. Barack Obama came within 45,000 votes of Hillary Clinton. 45,000 out of fifteen million cast. Obama won more states than Clinton last night. But they just about split the number of delegates at stake."

On NBC Nightly News (2/6, story 6, 2:40, 9.87M), Tim Russert said the Democratic race is "essentially a dead even tie. When you add, Brian, the states they won in New Hampshire, Nevada, and Iowa and South Carolina for Obama, it's 887-902. Add on the super delegates that Andrea was talking about. Clinton says she has 261 publicly identified, Obama says 170. That gets you to 1,148 to 1,072, 76 delegate difference. And we're almost to the end of this. Now, Brian, you asked about where we are going after this? Andrea pointed out to these states. There are seven of them, this weekend on Saturday, Sunday, and Tuesday. The so-called Chesapeake primary and there they are. If Obama who is expected to win those states gets 58% of the delegates, this is what I scrub out, 1,347 for Clinton, 1,348 for Obama. This is all speculation. But it just tells you how close this race is."

The CBS Evening News (2/6, story 4, 2:15, Reynolds, 7.66M) reported, "After the cheers died down and the flood of Super Tuesday data receded, a couple of potential icebergs have emerged. For Clinton, it involves younger voters. Nationally, she ran double digits behind Obama among those 39 and younger. For Obama, it was Hispanics and white women. He ran almost 30 points behind among Hispanics and lost white women by a wide margin."

The Politico (2/7, Smith, Brown) reports the "clarity Democrats so desperately sought escaped them on Super Tuesday, as both candidates found cause to claim victory even as one of them cemented her front-runner status." By winning "critical contested strongholds in Massachusetts, New Jersey and - most important - California," Clinton "showed big-state muscle and remained the putative leader. Decisive red-state victories in Oklahoma and Tennessee bolstered her assertions of electability." But Obama "proved the breadth of his national appeal and national organization in winning six more primaries and caucuses than his rival."

USA Today (2/7, Kiely, 2.28M) reports in the "all-important race for delegates to win the Democratic nomination, Hillary Rodham Clinton won 641 this week and Barack Obama won 633, CBS reported Wednesday morning. No, wait: NBC declared that Obama won the lion's share of delegates in Super Tuesday balloting, 838 to Clinton's 834." By the "end of the day, CNN put Clinton's overall total at 1,113 delegates to Obama's 963. Meanwhile, the Associated Press count had Clinton at 1,045 and Obama at 960. AP, which USA TODAY uses as the official count, awarded Clinton 784 delegates in Tuesday's voting and Obama 764."

The New York Times (2/7, Healy, 1.18M) reports that with "no breakout winner in Tuesday's Democratic primaries," Clinton and Obama "on Wednesday began fortifying for a drawn-out nomination fight." The "narrow margin in delegates, and the growing likelihood that it will remain close, prompted concern on Wednesday from the chairman of the Democratic Party, Howard Dean, who said Tuesday night that Mr. Obama and Mrs. Clinton should avoid taking the nominating fight all the way to the party convention in August." On the NY1 cable news channel, Dean said, "I think we will have a nominee sometime in the middle of March or April, but if we don't, then we're going to have to get the candidates together and make some kind of an arrangement. Because I don't think we can afford to have a brokered convention; that would not be good news for either party."

The Los Angeles Times (2/7, Barabak, Nicholas, 881K) reports, "With seven more contests over the next six days, Clinton promised no respite, despite a voice raw from overuse. 'It's going to be a mad dash until Tuesday,'" Clinton "told reporters at her campaign headquarters outside Washington. 'Not a lot of time to catch your breath. We are full speed ahead.'" Obama, meanwhile, "waved off Clinton's proposal for a series of debates between now and March 4, when Texas and Ohio hold primaries. 'I don't think anybody is clamoring for more debates,' Obama said, noting there have been 18 so far. His priority, he said, was 'to spend time with voters.'"

Close Delegate Count Could Throw Race To Superdelegates. The Wall Street Journal (2/7, Kronholz, 2.06M) reports a "nightmare" scenario for the Democrats is that the "party's bigwigs, rather than its voters, may end up choosing the presidential nominee." If neither Obama nor Clinton "manages to pull decisively ahead in the next few weeks, the nomination could depend on the convention votes of 796 party leaders, or superdelegates, who are free to ignore the preferences of Democratic voters." Larry Sabato of the University of Virginia said, "To the public, that looks like a throwback to the old, corrupt system of smoke-filled rooms." The "chances of that happening grew larger Tuesday when Sen. Clinton and Sen. Obama battled to a near photo finish in the race for convention delegates." If "neither candidate scores a knock-out blow and they head into the April and May primaries, political experts predict the race will begin focusing on the superdelegates, who hold 20% of the votes at the convention."

The Los Angeles Times (2/7, Hook, Barabak, 881K) reports Obama said "that if the contest comes down to super-delegates, those state and local officials who have the liberty to switch allegiances, 'I think we're going to be able to say that we have more pledged delegates -- meaning that the Democratic voters have spoken,' Obama said." The Times adds that later in the day, Clinton "told reporters her victories Tuesday showed that she can do well with young voters, rural voters in Missouri and in generally Republican states."

CLINTON LOANED CAMPAIGN $5 MILLION IN RUN-UP TO SUPER TUESDAY. The Washington Post (2/7, A1, Murray, Mosk, 723K) reports in a front-page story that Hillary Clinton "announced yesterday that she had lent her campaign $5 million, a remarkable twist for a candidate who raised more than $100 million last year that came as she and Sen. Barack Obama continued to spar over which of them was the Democratic winner in coast-to-coast Super Tuesday balloting." Clinton campaign chairman Terence R. McAuliffe "said the team had raised at least $13 million in January, and noted that figure did not include the loan."

ABC World News (2/6, story 4, 3:00, Snow, 8.78M) reported, "This month, members of Clinton's senior staff have volunteered to go without pay. One aide calling it a show of solidarity. Late this afternoon, Clinton acknowledged she loaned the money to her campaign out of necessity. In January, the campaign had raised just $13 million, compared to Barack Obama's $32 million."

NBC Nightly News (2/6, story 4, 2:15, Mitchell, 9.87M) reported, "With the two candidates virtually tied for delegates after last night and a race not likely to end any time soon, Hillary Clinton loaned her campaign $5 million in January just to keep up with Barack Obama."

The CBS Evening News (2/6, story 4, 2:15, Reynolds, 7.66M) reported Clinton "has loaned her campaign $5 million of her own money to see her through the near term."

On Hardball with Chris Matthews (2/6, 7:50 p.m.), Rodger Simon of The Politico said, "There was one troubling sign that came from today. That was Hillary Clinton had to lend $5 million from her own campaign, possessing the best fund-raiser in the world, Terry McAuliffe, who can get blood from a stone, but couldn't get $5 million out of Democratic contributors. That really surprises me. ... They're not like the Romneys, the Clintons don't have super wealth. They put together money for books and speeches, but that's a lot of dough for them."

Obama Campaign Said To Be On Way To $30 Million February. The Politico (2/7, Cummings) reports Obama's campaign "is on track to raise another $30 million in February, sources close to the Illinois senator say, while Hillary Rodham Clinton's spokesman revealed Wednesday that she had loaned her campaign $5 million." Insiders in "both campaigns say the growing financial disparity virtually ensures that Obama will be able to significantly outspend Clinton in the critical primaries to come." Even before "all the Super Tuesday votes were counted, Obama began airing advertisements in Nebraska, Virginia, the District of Columbia, Maryland and Maine - the next round of primary and caucus states - before Clinton did. His campaign has raised $2.2 million in less than 24 hours, sources say."

CLINTON FRIENDS SAY CAMPAIGN SHAKE-UP MAY NOW GO AHEAD. The Politico (2/7, Vandehei, Allen) reports there are "five big reasons" that Hillary Clinton "should be spooked by the current trajectory of the campaign. Longtime Clinton friends say she recognizes the peril in careening between near-death primary night experiences and small-bore victories." The friends "believe she may go ahead with the campaign shake-up she had been planning just before her surprise victory in New Hampshire. Her team is girding for trench warfare, telling reporters that the nomination will not be decided until at least the Pennsylvania primary on April 22, if then." The "five big reasons" are that Clinton "lost the delegate derby," she "essentially tied Obama in the popular vote," she "lost more states," she "lost the January cash war," and the "calendar is her enemy."

OBAMA SEEN AS HAVING ADVANTAGE IN NEAR-TERM CONTESTS. McClatchy (2/7, Lightman, Talev) reports Hillary Clinton "looked forward Wednesday to distant battles in big states and Barack Obama eyed contests in the South and mid-Atlantic, as the two Democrats began what's likely to be a prolonged struggle to round up delegates and votes." A "patchwork of skirmishes across a diverse group of states lies ahead, starting Saturday in Louisiana, Nebraska and the Virgin Islands." Louisiana and Nebraska demographics "probably favor Obama - a large black electorate in Louisiana and rural blocs in Nebraska - judging by Tuesday's results. He also seems well positioned for next Tuesday's primaries in Virginia, Maryland and the District of Columbia, all of which have large black populations."

ABC World News (2/6, story 6, 2:45, Stephanopoulos, 8.78M) reported, "the calendar works much better, especially in February, for Barack Obama. Look at these states coming up this weekend and next. This weekend, Nebraska is a caucus. He does very well in caucuses. Washington is a caucus. He does very well in caucuses. Louisiana, a primary, but a very African-American vote, next Tuesday, the Chesapeake primaries, Virginia, Maryland and Washington, DC. Again, very high African-American vote. Hillary Clinton's best chance in the next week are the Maine caucuses, next Sunday. Wisconsin will be a battleground at the end of the month."

Mid-Atlantic States Poised To Be Next Democratic "Battleground." The Washington Post (2/7, Turque, Kornblut, A1, 723K) reports, in an above-the-fold front-page story, that Virginia will be "a major battleground" for Clinton and Obama in the next week, noting that Obama has been favored to win the "Potomac primary," but that Clinton advisers are "now mapping out a strategy that does not exclude Maryland and the District but focuses heavily on fast-growing outer suburbs such as Prince William and Loudoun counties in Northern Virginia and the state's economically struggling rural southwest, where unemployment is high among white working-class voters." Both will attend a Jefferson-Jackson dinner in Richmond, and both have links to top Virginia Democrats. The Post continues to break down the candidates' strengths in the states different regions and demographics.

OBAMA SAYS HE IS NOT COMMITTED TO HOUSTON DEBATE. The Houston Chronicle (2/7, Ivanovich, Hem, 524K) reports that Barack Obama said Wednesday he has agreed to meet rival Clinton "in at least one more Democratic debate, but wouldn't say whether he'll come for one planned Feb. 28 in Houston." The Clinton campaign has "said Clinton has accepted invitations to appear on ABC's This Week on Sunday; Fox News in Washington on Monday; CNN from Ohio on Feb. 27; and MSNBC from the George R. Brown Convention Center on Feb. 28." However, Obama "swatted away suggestions that Democrats are that hungry to see the two candidates go at it one-on-one." Obama said, "I don't think anybody's clamoring for more debates. ... We've had - what - 18 debates so far. We are still trying to sort through our schedule. ... Because, it's very important for me to spend time with voters."

DNC PRESSURING MICHIGAN, FLORIDA TO HOLD CAUCUSES. The AP (2/7) reports that DNC member Debbie Dingell of Michigan "said Wednesday the Democratic National Committee is pressuring Michigan and Florida to hold presidential caucuses so the delegates they lost for holding January primaries could be seated at the national convention." Dingell also "said it's unclear whether either state would hold caucuses since they've already held primaries, Michigan on Jan. 15 and Florida on Jan. 29. She said the committee is asking the states to consider such a plan." Mark Burbriski, Florida Democratic Party spokesman, "said the party has no intention of holding another election." Burbriski added, "We've said all along that we're going forward with our delegate selection program using the vote on Jan. 29. ... We've got more delegate applications than ever." Michigan Democratic Chairman Mark Brewer said, "Everybody involved, the candidates, the DNC and we, need to remain open-minded. So if someone comes up with a creative way that meets everyone's interests, we can do that and get the delegates seated."

The New York Post (2/7, Earle, 648K) reports that DNC chairman Howard Dean "is pushing Florida and Michigan to hold new elections so their delegates can get seated at the national party convention an act that would snatch two disputed victories from Hillary Rodham Clinton."

CLINTON'S "INDIVIDUAL MANDATE" SAID TO BE GOVERNMENT COERCION. The Wall Street Journal (2/7, 2.06M) says in an editorial that Hillary Clinton and Barack Obama "agree on most policy issues, but that makes their rare differences all the more revealing. To wit, their running scrap over Mrs. Clinton's 'individual mandate' for health care, which Mr. Obama has now had the nerve to expose for its inevitable government coercion." Clinton's proposal "requires everyone to buy health insurance, along with more insurance regulation, a government insurance option for everyone and tax hikes. Mr. Obama likes all that but his mandate would only apply to children." HillaryCare II "isn't all about 'choice,' but would require financial penalties for people to pay attention, including garnishing wages. To put it more accurately, the individual mandate is really a government mandate that requires brute force plus huge subsidies to get anywhere near its goal of universal coverage."

To be clear, the request to the WH was to ask them to facilitate the use of the State Dept. Ops Center. We've been running all of our requests, regardless of the agency, through the Deputy WH COS. I'm happy to call Daniel Smith, unless someone else wants to deal with this.

Fun day yesterday. I hope it was productive for HRC. My main observation is that her personal story of her parents that she ended both speeches with is really compelling. The audiences were enraptured. Really zoned in. People think they know everything about her, and they don't. The more they learn about the personal stuff, and things like the anecdotes I shared yesterday and others are doing as well, then there will be a greater appreciation for the fact she is fighting for them. She is really good!

Off to Nevada Monday for her. Coincidentally, I committed previously to doing The Daily Show Tuesday, so this stuff might come up then.

Thx for looking out for Kalen. As you know, she is wonderful.

take care

John – There are too many challenges that need to be met in the months ahead – creating new jobs, strengthening the middle class and immigration reform, to name a few.

That's why Kirsten has teamed up with several other senators to reform the filibuster and ensure that the process doesn't impede progress.

Kirsten and her colleagues are committed to seeing this through, but they need your help to do it. Reform is being debated right now and your voice is needed to send a message to both parties that you want this done now.

Click here right now to add your voice to Kirsten's and demand filibuster reform. It's time to stop the gridlock.

This has been put off long enough. It's time to make it happen.

Thank you,

Subject: filibuster

Friend,

It's no secret Washington is broken and gridlock is obstructing progress in the Senate. Critical issues like the fiscal cliff, making sure our veterans have jobs when they come home and taking steps to combat climate change are stalled as a result.

There's no silver bullet. But there is something we can do immediately to make the Senate work better: reform the filibuster.

The recent transformation of the filibuster into a political weapon used for partisan aims is unacceptable. Our times, our challenges, even our opportunities, demand more of us.

That's why I'm joining with several Democrats to call on the entire Senate to reform the filibuster now.

We need your support to send a clear, unequivocal signal. These issues are being negotiated right now. Will you join us – immediately – and add your name to our petition?

Click here to sign our petition telling the Senate to pass filibuster reform so we can overcome the gridlock and get the Senate working again.

Throughout the Senate's history, we've seen the filibuster used an average of two to three times per year.

But things changed in the last Congress, when we saw more filibusters than were used in the 1950s, 60s, and 70s combined.

The filibuster has a role, absolutely, but it has to return to being a reasonable tool. That's the way it was envisioned and we have the opportunity, right now, to get back to that ideal.

There's momentum among the American people and among the Senate for action on this.

You can make that plain to your leaders and help us get this done. I stand ready, along with a tremendous group of senators and senators-elect, to make this happen.

Add your voice in support of filibuster reform and we'll fight for you.

Let the Senate know you want the filibuster reformed by signing our petition now. We've got to stop the gridlock and start working on solutions to our challenges.

Thank you so much,

Kirsten

 ProgressNow Colorado

Dear Friend,

A shocking update to the story of John Suthers' questionable campaign donations from payday lenders was published in today's Grand Junction Sentinel. According to legal counsel for Governor Ritter, the rules Suthers' office wrote to regulate payday lending would actually allow lenders to charge more in fees, rather than less as the law intended.

Proposed payday loan rule 'absurd,' says Ritter's attorney

http://www.gjsentinel.com/news/articles/proposed\_payday\_loan\_rule\_absu

Charles Ashby, Grand Junction Sentinel

...Under the old law, those fees and rates could amount to as much as 520 percent per year. The new law limits fees to $7.50 a month for every $100 loaned, and an interest rate of no more than 45 percent.

In a letter to Attorney General John Suthers' office this week, Welling said one rule could result in fees and rates far higher than allowed under the old law.

"A borrower who repaid a loan ... would pay a $60 nonrefundable finance charge (on a $300, two-week loan) as well as $5.19 in prorated interest, for a total 565 percent annual percentage rate," Welling wrote.

"Increasing the annual percentage rate from 520 percent to 565 percent would frustrate legislative intent to the point of absurdity."

An advocacy group, Coloradans for Payday Lending Reform, echoed Welling's comments in a similar letter, saying that's not what the Colorado Legislature intended when it approved the new law during this year's session.

If true, it's a blatant subversion of the legislature's intent to crack down on abusive, predatory payday lenders--and after Suthers took over $10,000 from payday lenders during the time his office was drafting the new rules, this reeks of the worst kind of corrupt backroom dealing. If you haven't already, please sign our petition demanding that Suthers immediately return donations he received from the payday lending industry while his office drafted these proposed new rules.

<http://progressnowcolorado.org/SuthersPayday>

And the time is now to make sure your friends and neighbors get the facts. Please forward this email widely, and post the above link to your Facebook page or website. With each passing day this scandal deepens, and these protections for Colorado's most economically vulnerable citizens are too important to be gutted behind closed doors. Thanks for doing your part.

Subject: Return the dirty money now!

Dear Friend,

Last week, nonpartisan watchdog group Colorado Ethics Watch called on Attorney General John Suthers to immediately give back a sudden burst of donations he received from the payday lending industry—donations received at the same time his office is drafting new rules restricting predatory payday lending in Colorado. What's worse, a legislative staffer has asserted that the new rules are not as strict as the law requires! The obvious conflict of interest this represents is very serious. Click below to demand Suthers immediately return the thousands he recently received from payday lenders:

<http://progressnowcolorado.org/SuthersPayday>

As the state's highest law enforcement officer, Suthers has the strictest obligation to remain free of conflicts of interest. According to the Grand Junction Sentinel last week, with further reporting by the Durango Herald, Suthers received over $10,000 from PACs and donors associated with the payday lending industry in recent weeks. Prior to this, Suthers had never received significant contributions from the payday lending industry (Grand Junction Sentinel, 8/14/2010).

At the same time Suthers' re-election campaign accepted these donations, Suthers' office was drafting new rules governing the predatory payday lending industry, as mandated by the Colorado legislature's passage this year of tough reforms to protect consumers, and limit the exorbitant interest charged by these lenders. Limits on payday lending had been sought for many years unsuccessfully by ProgressNow Colorado and a broad coalition of consumer advocacy organizations.

After everything we have fought for to reform predatory payday lending, is Attorney General Suthers stabbing Colorado consumers in the back? John Suthers opposed House Bill 1351, and has continued to disparage the legislation as a defense against questions about his office's handling of the proposed new rules. But according to a legislative staffer interviewed by the Sentinel, Suthers' proposed rules are not as strict on payday lenders as the law signed by the Governor.

We can't allow dirty payday loan money to influence the judgment of our highest elected officials. Sign our petition—demand that Suthers immediately return these donations from the payday loan industry.

<http://progressnowcolorado.org/SuthersPayday>

Under the old rules, payday lenders made $75 to loan $500 for two weeks or less. That means the payday lenders had to exploit nearly 140 Coloradans to give Suthers his $10,000. That's reason enough for Suthers to be ashamed, but to take this money while weakening the new protections that ProgressNow Colorado members, and concerned citizens around the state fought for year after year, would be totally unacceptable.

Don't let Suthers get away with it . And thanks for standing up for integrity in Colorado's highest public officials.

Sincerely,
Kjersten Forseth

Hi Katie,

I'm working on a story about Hillary Clinton's remarks yesterday on lowering prescription drug prices and opposing Keystone pipeline. A number of the lobbyist bundlers who raise money for her campaign lobby on behalf of pharmaceutical manufacturers and oil companies, including Tony Podesta, who represents Amgen, Merck and BP. BP has been in favor of Keystone. I'm wondering if this is something Tony can comment on? What does he think about HRC's position on these two issues? Will he continue supporting/bundling for her campaign?

On deadline asap. We'd like to post the story first thing tomorrow morning.

Thanks,
Catherine

Subject: STATUS OF GEORGETOWN LAW CAMPUS FOR FRIDAY, JAN 22 - SUNDAY, JAN 24

Dear Members of the Georgetown Law Community:

Based on weather forecasts at this time, the Law Center is planning to close tomorrow, Friday, January 22, at 1:30pm through Sunday, January 24. Liberal leave will be in effect for this period for all non-emergency designated employees. No classes will occur on campus after 1:30pm. (Many classes will be held online. See below for more information regarding these classes. If a class is being held online, the faculty will contact students by email.) All other activities and services, including scheduled events (student organization meetings and events, CLE, and conferences), will also be canceled after 1:30pm. The Library, all administrative offices, the food services operation, fitness center, and Early Learning Center will be closed after 1:30pm. It is expected that only designated emergency employees will be at the Law Center. After 1:30 pm, with the exception of Gewirz residents and emergency personnel, no others will be allowed on campus.

Whenever inclement weather impacts the ability to hold classes physically at the Law Center, the Law Center will use Instructional Continuity as the means to continue its teaching mission through the use of technology. Faculty will be receiving detailed information from Academic Services as to how to use the technology necessary to run classes online. If faculty members will be using Instructional Continuity to teach their classes, they will contact students by email.

For more information on Instructional Continuity, click here: <http://www.law.georgetown.edu/campus-services/ist/communications/zoom/upload/Instructional-Continuity-Guidance-revised.pdf>.

By 5:30 am on Friday, January 22, we will notify the Law Center community with any updates to the closing schedule, as forecasts become more precise. Please be sure to check for updates.

Subject: [big campaign] Tracking Update: McCain Statement in Palm Springs, FL 10/29/08

Hello All,

Unfortunately we weren't able to send a tracker to this event. But good news: we were able to capture the event via online-streaming video. Below are the notes from that effort.

Big Highlights

- Says in Obama's "infomercial", he'll try to sell you something, such as tax cuts, energy policy without drilling, spreading wealth
- Says Obama broke promise to accept public financing

Palm Springs, FL: McCain Statement 10/29/08

(The following is a transcript of the entire statement)

JOHN MCCAIN: Happy to be here at Baron Sign Manufacturing and Jerry Fullon (sp) and Sandy and all the small business owners we just finished meeting with here. And I'm always happy to be with Gov. Crist and Tom Ridge and Lindsey Graham and of course, Sen. Mel Martinez. And we just had a very good meeting. They know what I know that our economy in trouble and people are hurting. I've laid out my plan. One, I will protect savings and retirement accounts to get the stock market rising again. Two, I will keep people in their homes and fix our housing market. And three, I will create millions of high-paying jobs through tax cuts that spur economic growth, particularly for small businesses, which create 70% of all new jobs in this country. Now tonight, you can all look forward to my opponent's performance in a television infomercial. It used to be that only rain or some other act of god could delay World Series. But, I guess the network execs figured an Obama infomercial was close enough. As with other infomercials, he's got a few things he wants to sell you. He's offering government run healthcare; an energy plan guaranteed to work without drilling [chuckles to self]; an automatic wealth spreader that folds neatly and fits under any bed [polite laughter]. When you're watching this gauzy, feel-good commercial, just remember that it was paid for with broken promises. Sen. Obama signed a piece of paper committing to public financing of his campaign if I did. Twice, he looked American people in eye and said he would sit down with me before he abandoned public financing. He didn't mean a word of it. When it was in his interest to break his promise, he tossed it to aside, like it didn't mean a thing. He is the first candidate since the Watergate scandal to abandon the public financing system. And his campaign is now being flooded with hundreds of millions of dollars in undisclosed and questionable donations. His campaign has directly profited from his broken promises and because of that, the American people have to ask: What does the broken promise behind tonight's infomercial say about the value of his other commitments? This is what concerns small business owners and people all over this country - Sen. Obama's word doesn't appear to mean that much. When he tells America tonight that he's going to cut taxes for the middle class people will wonder if he'll keep his word because his record, his record is supporting higher taxes on working families. He voted 94 times for tax increases or against tax cuts. When he tells America tonight, he's going to cut spending, people wonder if he'll keep his word because his record is one of supporting higher spending, time after time. Whether it's Joe the Plumber in Ohio or Andrew the Plumber and Sandra the Signmaker here in Florida we can't even afford tax hikes Obama admits to. His tax increases are exactly the wrong approach in an economic downturn. I am committed to not raising taxes on anyone. Thank you.

Subject: Hillary Speech

I'd suggest Hillary prepare a major speech with the theme of "Why I Run", similar to JFK's original New Frontier speech. To be delivered at a venue such as the JFK Library. It can be a direct campaign speech or a panoramic vision of the challenges and future of the nation that is not overly campaign linked but serves the same purpose. No polls, no focus groups, no positioning, something big and exciting and uplifting that is her raison d'etre for public life and transcends the hourly news cycles and daily email updates....

I hope she is thinking in terms of what would be her New Deal, New Frontier, Great Society etc....something big and bold that paints a portrait of an America under a Hillary Clinton presidency.....

It need not be rushed, when it is ready it is ready....when I send you my second pope column of the week, my first was a call for Francis to be awarded the Nobel Peace Prize, my column in The Hill tomorrow ahead of the joint session is answering George Will's attack on the pope in the Sunday Post....but my litany of big issues the pope champions with Biblical references wouldn't be the worst road map, issue by issue, what a panoramic program might begin to look like....my only reference to HRC in the column was tied to Obama and Gore and the pope on climate change....but the broader issue schematic in the column offers a nice version of a policy roadmap that can be expanded into more panoramic terms for the kind of New Frontier big picture speech I believe she needs to give.....Brent

Dear John,

This is Patricia Espinosa from Mexico, former Secretary of Foreign Affairs. I am now posted as Ambassador of Mexico to Germany.

I would like to congratulate you on the hard work you have been undertaking!

I do not want to take too much of your time but wanted to see whether you can help me to find a way to deliver to Secretary Clinton a copy of the former German Minister of Foreign Affairs, Guido Westerwelle's book, which he has signed and asked me to give to her on his behalf. Is there any address where I can send it?

I hope you are doing great and the campaign is not too exhausting. I follow it with great attention and I am very happy to see so much progress!

Keep up the good work and warmest regards from Berlin.

Subject: Reminder: Luncheon to Honor Phil Schrag for Receiving President's Award for Distinguished Scholar-Teachers

Dear Colleagues,

I am writing to remind you of our luncheon today at 12:00 p.m. on the 12th floor of Gewirz. President DeGioia will be joining us in order to celebrate Phil Schrag's many accomplishments. As many of you know, Georgetown University last fall recognized the remarkable accomplishments of our colleague, Phil Schrag, in bestowing upon him a President's Award for Distinguished Scholar-Teachers. By this award, Georgetown honors faculty members from across the University who have excelled in both scholarship and teaching, and combined them in imaginative ways, over many years. When the President's Awards were given out at the last Fall Faculty Convocation, Phil was unable to be present. President DeGioia has generously agreed to come to the Law Center to celebrate Phil's accomplishments with our faculty at our lunch today.

Please join us to celebrate a great career in legal education – I look forward to seeing you there.

Best,
Bill

Subject: a little help please

Hi Huma,

hope this finds you well. I need a little help, at least I think I do. I am not so sure why I am doing this, but after last night I just can't help myself. We went to the Memorial Day Concert. While I like to think of myself as one who maintains a good deal of self control, I couldn't help being overwhelmed with the sacrifice of our troops. And, as you know, my tenure at the VA was the beginning of my career here in DC.

I am beyond sad about what is happening at the VA today. I probably shouldn't do this, but then again, it is hard for me not to do so. I can fix it. I helped do it once before serving President Clinton. I can do it again. I am uniquely positioned to do so for a whole list of reasons. General Shinseki is a wonderful man, dedicated, and honest; but not the right fit for the VA.

If you would be so kind as to let Secretary Clinton know of my interest, perhaps she will see fit to talk with President Obama. I have tried, and tried to serve this Administration to no avail. Actually, I have given up. But last night has encouraged me to try one more time.

Time is of the essence here, though. The President needs to mover quickly and not let Rick hang in the wind. The Department will only get worse. The new Deputy, Sloan Gibson, was my successor at the USO and has absolutely no idea what he has walked into. No experience with the VA at all, so his effectiveness will be limited without direction.

Ok, I am done. If I can help, I feel compelled to try. Thank you. All the best,

Subject: That is preposterous

Dear John,

I'm not sure how to break it to the Republicans, but we had an election -- it was all the way back in the year 2012. Mitt Romney lost. Barack Obama won. They need to get over it.

But the Senate Republicans are still pushing this notion that President Obama should wait to appoint a new Supreme Court Justice. They say they want the American people to have a voice in the process, but newsflash... they already did. Otherwise they wouldn't have selected President Obama to serve another -- full four year -- term in office.

That is preposterous. Add your name today to tell them to abandon this charade:

ADD YOUR NAME

We cannot simply put an entire branch of the government on hold because Senate Republicans want to throw a tantrum. These petty, political games have to stop. Now.

I was struck by the memo partly because it was first I had heard of it but much more because it was a sensitive doc bumping around on public email addresses.

There is a very real threat to the security of our documents (particularly sensitive ones like the one you worked up), and we need to protect them by at least encrypting them.

My timing is uncertain: an old pharmaceutical story of mine is coming back into the news with a trial in two weeks and I'm not yet sure what that means. Plus my daughter's wedding is in four weeks; full speed ahead there.

At my age I'm not letting the ball juggling overwhelm me, so I'm sure we can work out a mutually convenient arrangement.

BTW: are you aware of a forthcoming---in the next few days---massive examination of the Clinton Foundation by a conservative financial analyst? My understanding is that raises questions about the foundation's financial reports and its shift into areas---AIDs, for example---that exceeded its original authorization from the IRS. I'm not writing anything about it but curious if you have heard anything.

Can you do both? No prep needed, and I won't use you that much. Basically, as Chaffee, attack HRC as untrustworthy. As Webb, attack her as being wrong on foreign policy. I am copying Tony who will have someone write material for you.

SDG agreement has indeed gotten some press. How about:

I applaud the huge success of the #post2015 sustainable development agenda-- agreed to yesterday with the support of 193 countries (1/2)

This next set of hugely ambitious goals will seek to end poverty, secure gender equality & ensure global food security by 2030 (2/2)

Subject: tomorrow's Chief of Mission conference

Hi John. I wanted to let you know that tomorrow will be my first day at the State Department. The process seemed to go on endlessly but, finally, late Friday the logjam broke and I was cleared to start. I will be sworn in tomorrow morning and will be able to make it to your lunch at the COM conference. I hope to get a chance to say hello and, especially, thank you for everything you did to help get me this opportunity to serve. Your guidance and support were crucial to me throughout. I'm very excited about launching this next chapter of my career. After I settle in, I would welcome the chance to get together to get your advice and see if there is any way that I can help you with what you are doing.

All the best,

Scott

Subject: Before you leave to pick up flowers

John --

I'm sure you've noticed that it's Valentine's Day. While some people are skeptical, I think it's nice to take the time to do something for the person you care about. This year, wouldn't it be great to tell them that you are supporting a candidate who's trying to move Los Angeles, the city you both love, forward?

Before you pick up flowers or chocolates on the way home, contribute now to support Eric's campaign.

For the cost of a dozen roses, this campaign can buy two dozen lawn signs. For the cost of a box of chocolates, we can buy the supplies for a team of canvassers. Even the cost of a card helps this campaign.

On a day when you take stock of what's important to you, I hope we can count on your support.

Los Angeles is a city that we all love. Like anything we love, we love it despite, or even because of, some of its flaws. Eric is the candidate with the vision and the proven results to help fix the problems of Los Angeles. He can't do it unless you decide to invest in our vision for the future.

After the flowers have withered and the candy is eaten, isn't that a gift they will really appreciate?

Looks like we are back to the drawing board for Monday morning. Given the short time line I think we will need to stick with something in the small meeting / OTR family of events. Is there value in reconsidering a tech related meeting or are there ideas in the healthcare space that would be feasible to pull off in this timeframe?

Subject: My Supreme Court nominee

John --

I am proud to announce my nominee for the next Justice of the United States Supreme Court: Judge Sonia Sotomayor.

This decision affects us all -- and so it must involve us all. I've recorded a special message to personally introduce Judge Sotomayor and explain why I'm so confident she will make an excellent Justice.

Please watch the video, and then pass this note on to friends and family to include them in this historic moment.

Judge Sotomayor has lived the America Dream. Born and raised in a South Bronx housing project, she distinguished herself in academia and then as a hard-charging New York District Attorney.

Judge Sotomayor has gone on to earn bipartisan acclaim as one of America's finest legal minds. As a Supreme Court Justice, she would bring more federal judicial experience to the Supreme Court than any Justice in 100 years. Judge Sotomayor would show fidelity to our Constitution and draw on a common-sense understanding of how the law affects our day-to-day lives.

A nomination for a lifetime appointment to the highest court in the land is one of the most important decisions a President can make. And the discussions that follow will be among the most important we have as a nation. You can begin the conversation today by watching this special message and then passing it on:

Thank you,

President Barack Obama

Circling back around with everyone for an update. After further discussions here this morning, folks came to two conclusions: First, that we should back off the explicit revolution language because it will get us into a fight we don't want; second, that we need to give her a full argument and a new speech, not a brief insert. We then sketched out the attached outline. I'm going to fill in some of the language with the goal of getting her a more robust document later this afternoon (although still an outline). Could everyone take a look and weigh in now on the direction and argument? And I'll recirculate before sending to her in a couple hours?

July 16th Nightly Press Traffic Summary

- There are a bunch of FEC stories in the works after last night's release of our numbers, including:
 - Rebecca Ballhaus (WSJ) is writing on the overlap between our campaign bundlers and Clinton Foundation donors.
 - Matea Gold and Anne Gearan (WaPo) are doing a piece on how we spent our money in our first quarter as a campaign.
 - Peter Nicholas (WSJ) is doing a comparison of how we spent our money as compared to the Sanders campaign.
 - Bloomberg is doing a piece on our willingness to take money from lobbyists, especially from those with ties to organizations like Monsanto that may create tension with our positions.
 - Fredreka Schouten (USA Today) is writing on the fact that a handful of campaigns, us included, seem to be having difficulty attracting small dollar donors
 - Tarini Parti (Politico) is also writing about our difficulties with low-dollar donors
- Amy Chozick is working on a story about Hillary Clinton's father and where he fits into her narrative in this campaign
- The Des Moines Register will run a story tonight about the state's only two statewide Democratic elected officials (AG and treasurer) endorsing Hillary Clinton
- Maggie Haberman is doing a piece on Ready For Hillary staffers that thought they would get jobs on the campaign, but didn't end up being hired.
- Cosmo is giving our Latino outreach director, Lorella Praeli one of their annual "Fun Fearless Latina" awards. They'll be interviewing her about her experience.
- Arelis Hernandez (WaPo) is working on a story about Hillary Clinton registering voters in Texas in the early 70s.
- Sam Frizell (TIME) is doing a story about how union leadership may be lining up behind Hillary Clinton, but there is less enthusiastic support among rank-and-file members.
- Other outstanding stories include:
 - Los Angeles Times on Amanda Renteria and the Latino vote
 - Ben Geman on Hillary/climate change
 - David Freedlander profile on Dennis Cheng
 - CNN's long-form story about Hillary Clinton/Bernie Sanders' appeal to minority communities
 - Sarah Ellison from Vanity Fair on Hillary Clinton's advisors
 - Eric Garcia on Fernando Rajiv
 - Laura Meckler on our organizing process

Guys - Given the story yesterday about pay equity at the State Department, I wanted to flag something that came out of our research on pay equity at the Foundation. There are huge discrepancies, and it wouldn't surprise me if they went here next. See a summary below from Karuna.

Attached is the equal pay hit pulled from the Foundation book. Essentially here are the key take aways:

3 out of the 11 highest paid employees of the Foundation are women.

Avg salary of the highest paid men is $294,157.50, while the avg salary of the highest paid women is $181,576.66 ($112K difference)

Median salary of the highest paid men is $346,106, while the median salary of the highest paid women is $185,386 ($190K difference)

Chart and citations are on the attached doc. And I included the original 2013 990, where the #s come from.

Hannah,

Attached for President Clinton's review is a brief decision memo from CGI regarding the US Conference of Mayors Infrastructure Task Force, which Mayor Emanuel has asked President Clinton and CGI to co-lead. Mayor Emanuel has asked President Clinton to co-sign a letter related to the Task Force, and would like President Clinton's approval on this by this Friday, January 11. As such, we'd appreciate anything you can do to expedite President Clinton's review of the attached.

Thanks in advance for your help with this!

Subject: Core Message / Theory of the Case

Attachments: 2015-08-25 Memo for HRC.docx

Jim and I just talked about the need to get HRC new thinking on core message and the theory of the case. He asked me to send around this brief memo I've been noodling on since last week. It does not aim to provide a definitive answer to the big strategic questions, but it does try to be responsive to the challenges the Clintons gave us on August 13. I heard three imperatives on that call:

- 1) Better align our core affirmative message with her unique strengths as a candidate, her record, and her passions, in a way that no one else could deliver and that generates an emotional connection with voters.
- 2) Define and drive a contrast with Bernie and the Republicans that makes it clear why only she can be President.
- 3) Go on offense on emails.

I don't think there's anything in this memo you haven't seen before, but maybe you'll find it a helpful distillation of our discussions on the first two issues.

I'll also do more thinking on "theory of the case."

Subject: Re: Remarks at AFSCME

Hi Dan-Great statement. I have just a few suggestions.

1. At the top of her opening when she thanks "Lee and all of you", I think it would be good to recognize Secretary Treasurer Laura Reyes and the Executive Board specifically.
2. The Supreme Court has not yet decided whether they are taking the Freidrich's case yet. They will soon. In your remarks it reads like that is decided.
3. If you could add some heft (one more positive sentence) to the mentioning of defined benefit plans/pensions I think that would be helpful. AFSCME is very sensitive to the crisis their members face in many states around pensions. I think adding something additional here about her opposition to privatization of the social security system would be good here too.
4. I would take out the partnership piece on ACA. AFSCME is effected by the Cadillac tax issue and so would be complicated to bring up.
5. I thought the story of Hillary's mother really resonated with the audience at AFT. It connects. I think if there was a way for her to connect this tomorrow, it would be great.

Hope that helps!

Nikki

MCCAIN OFFERS THIRD TERM OF FAILED BUSH ECONOMIC POLICIES
Despite an economy burdened with rising gas and food prices and a housing and credit crisis, McCain wants to continue the same failed policies that got the economy in this trouble. If Americans like the Bush economy, they will love the McCain economy.

Today McCain repeated his claim that the "fundamentals of our economy are strong." On the campaign trail in Jacksonville, Florida, the Senator declared this morning that "the fundamentals of our economy are strong."

See attached documents on how McCain policies would be like a third Bush term.

McCain's economic plans, like Bush's, put CEOs and multibillion dollar corporations, before American families.
McCain's economic plan does more for the Fortune 200 than American families. Fortune 200 companies who would get $45 billion in tax cuts under McCain's economic plan according to a new report from the Center for American Progress Action Fund -- enough to lift 9 million Americans from poverty.
McCain, like Bush, offers billions in tax cuts for Big Oil, but no relief for families. According to the Center for American Progress Action Fund, McCain's tax plan gives nearly $4 billion in tax breaks to the top five American oil companies, but gives families very little. Economists have panned McCain's gas tax holiday, saying it won't help families with gas prices.

McCain Said He 'Doesn't Understand the Economy' - He will Read Greenspan's Book. Greenspan says McCain tax cuts would harm the economy.

Suggest we find some clergy to call on Trump to apologize to HRC. Getting women to do it is obvious, but getting some clergy would be very powerful.

Subject: Wash Post story -- Sorry to write this on a Saturday night

But this is by far the most damaging story and most damaging type of story we can have.

The press will love writing these. I did when I was a reporter.

I think we need a paradigm shift in how this world operates we have to convince HRC and probably WJC that her meeting with 200 people doesn't help her. Hiring corporate wizards has never been a successful strategy in campaigns. And anyone whose name is in the paper 48 hours after they meet with her needs to be cut off completely from her campaign. .

Almost everyone on this team that has been assembled has been busting their tail to make this work and to work against this kind of stuff and it's going to get demoralizing in a hurry.

I'm open to all and any alternatives on how to truly solve this but I really feel that when she is back from CA we have to solve this.

Thanks,
Joel

I've been trying to lock in a NYC chef / Brooklyn foodie fundraiser with you, which the donors I live with offered to host.

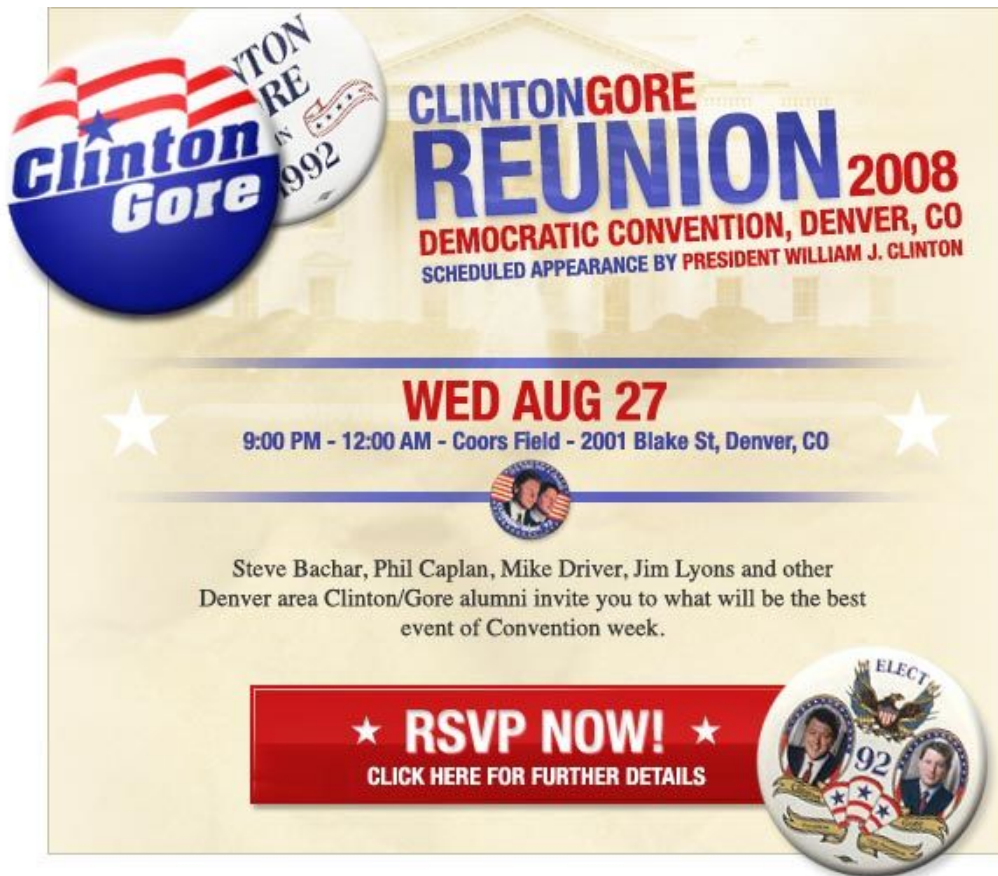

Dec 14th was one of the dates we offered ATP, which didn't work for him.

we're close to confirming Marcus Samuelson, co-owner of the Red Rooster in Harlem, and will make the call today - so that a round of emails can go out pre-thgiving.

Subject: Re: WP op-ed and new CEA Report: The Surprising Decline in Oil Consumption

Already tweeted it.

On Fri, Jun 19, 2015 at 12:15 PM, Furman, Jason L. <Jason_L_Furman@cea.eop.gov> wrote:

Brian Deese and I have an op-ed in today's Washington Post (pasted below) that draws on a new CEA report (attached) on the underappreciated surprise in the U.S. oil market: that the consumption of petroleum was slightly lower in 2014 than in 1997 in fact was 6.6 million barrels per day less than what was forecast in 2003. This surprise is nearly twice the surprising increase in petroleum production—and the consumption surprise is expected to grow over time, in part due to policies like the heavy duty truck rule being released today by the EPA and DOT.

The boon of reduced oil consumption

By Brian Deese and Jason Furman

The average American family is on pace to save about $700 at the pump this year. One reason for this has been widely reported: A historic increase in U.S. oil production has increased global supply and put downward pressure on prices.

But a potentially even more important reason has gotten far less attention — a historic decline in the amount of oil that our economy is consuming. Indeed, in 2014 Americans used less petroleum than they did in 1997, despite the fact that the economy is nearly 50 percent larger than it was 17 years ago. A new report this week by the Council of Economic Advisers documents that this drop in consumption is one of the biggest surprises in global oil markets in the past decade. If it continues, it will have positive implications for our economy, our national security and our efforts to combat climate change.

After a half-century in which it generally rose, U.S. oil consumption leveled off and has begun to decline. No one expected this development. The Energy Information Administration (EIA), which produces some of the most influential and well-regarded forecasts in the field, until recently consistently projected increases in oil consumption. In fact, U.S. consumption in 2014 was 6.4 million barrels per day below the projection it made in 2003 — an amount greater than the oil produced by Iraq and Kuwait combined and about twice the magnitude of the unexpected increase in U.S. oil production. Importantly, that decline in consumption is not expected to be just a passing phenomenon: The latest forecasts for U.S. oil consumption through 2025 are relatively flat.

We are already seeing the benefits of this. The drop in consumption relative to expectations has helped reduce U.S. net imports of petroleum by nearly half, reducing our dependence on foreign oil and our macroeconomic vulnerability to rises and falls in the world price of oil. By reducing net U.S. oil usage by the equivalent of about 10 percent of global production, these developments have contributed to the decline in the global price of oil over the past year. And the decline in the consumption of oil has contributed to the nearly 10 percent decline in overall U.S. carbon emissions from 2005 to 2014, one of many ways in which smart energy policies can also be good for our efforts to mitigate climate change and protect the health of our children.

Moreover, this is a truly American story. Over this period, we have not seen similar declines in most other advanced economies. For example, the percentage reduction among European economies has been roughly half of that in the United States.

So what is behind this trend and what can we do to continue it? The majority of the decline in oil consumption has been in the transportation sector, but the industrial, residential and commercial sectors have come in below expectations as well. To date, about three-quarters of the decline in the transportation sector has been due to a reduction in the number of miles driven, which is explained not only by the fallout from the Great Recession and gasoline prices that exceeded pre-crisis levels until mid-2014 but also demographic shifts, such as the aging of the population and the retirement of the baby boomers, that are likely to persist. The other quarter of the decline is due to increased efficiency, in part because of new rules requiring a more fuel-efficient fleet. Moreover, the fact that we have replaced about 10 percent of our transportation fuels with biofuels, thanks to a bipartisan law enacted by Congress in 2007, has further reduced our reliance on imported fossil fuels.

Efficiency is expected to matter even more — it is projected to account for nearly half of the reduction in consumption in 2025 relative to past projections — as the vehicle mileage rules continue to phase in.

New policies the administration is announcing Friday to improve fuel efficiency for heavy-duty vehicles will help build on this trend. Heavy-duty trucks are the fastest growing component of the transportation sector and are responsible for about one-fifth of its energy use and carbon emissions.

In addition, the president is pushing for Congress to increase our investments in transportation infrastructure, including a 70 percent increase in transit investments that would help reduce miles traveled by expanding transportation options. Together with other policies to reduce emissions from power plants, cut methane emissions from the oil and gas sectors and phase down the use hydrofluorocarbons, this would help us hit the U.S. goal of reducing carbon emissions by 26 percent to 28 percent below 2005 levels by 2025 — a goal the president formalized this year as part of our efforts to lead the world toward a global agreement on climate change. And as the recent trends have shown, it would put to rest the idea that we must choose between fighting climate change and growing our economy: Improving fuel efficiency standards for cars, trucks and other vehicles allows us to do both.

Subject: VP debate tonight

John --

Tonight at 9:00 p.m. Eastern, we'll hear from the two candidates for vice president.

My running mate Joe Biden and the Republican nominee, Governor Sarah Palin, need to be ready to step in as president at a moment's notice, and this is the only time they'll appear side-by-side before Election Day.

This debate is also extremely important because early voting began this week in eight states -- including the crucial battleground state of Ohio.

In fact, the votes cast in Ohio this weekend could ultimately decide who wins this whole election. There are only four days left in the narrow window of opportunity when voters can register and vote early all in one step.

Republican operatives tried to shut down one-stop early vote in court this week, but they failed. And now you can help provide the resources for an intensive four-day Get Out The Vote operation before the window closes.

Make a donation of \$5 or more today to help Get Out The Vote in Ohio and other early vote states.

Early voting will play a bigger role this year than ever before.

And after tonight's debate, voters will be motivated to cast their ballots for the change this country needs.

Joe Biden and I share a vision for the future of this country, and it's very different from the vision of our opponents.

I'm sure you'll see that contrast in tonight's debate.

But there's another contrast that you can see in every aspect of this campaign. Joe and I know that real change comes from the bottom up, not the top down. That's why we've always put our faith in supporters like you.

Make a donation of $5 or more right now to help reach Ohio voters and Get Out The Vote in other early vote states.

<https://donate.barackobama.com/thevpdebate>

You've built an unprecedented grassroots movement, and that's what will make all the difference in the next 32 days.

Thanks for everything you're doing, and make sure you tell everyone you know to watch tonight's debate.

Barack

Hi all -

Sorry I was out of pocket for a few hours. On a flight now to raise $$ for all of us in Oklahoma - the things we do!!

Anyhow, here is the deal:

(1) The American Academy of Pediatrics came out with a strong policy statement in 2011 that every child/teenager should be screened for substance abuse disorders when they visit the doctor for their annual child check up or for an accute care visit in which it might be suspected. HRC has a long history of working with AAP and supporting their efforts to do more screenings. When she was First Lady, she worked on the Newborn Hearing Screening to make sure all babies get hearing screenings, and in the last several years she has pushed for and supported the AAP's effort to screen young kids for symptoms of "toxic stress." This is not "mandatory," but it is part of prevention and wellness and it is about supporting the AAP in making this happen by raising awareness, making sure pediatricians get reimbursed for their time in doing these screenings, etc. I have tried to clarify with edits to the speech, pasted below and attached.

(2) On Mandy's question about mental health parity, I have added a line.

(3) On Karen's question of whether we reached out to urban leaders, we talked to a number of policy experts who serve urban communities. Maya is going to work with political to be sure we do political outreach to leaders in next 48 hours.

(4) On Karen's suggestion, that she alludes to problems in her own family - I have modified accordingly.

(5) On Nick's question about specialized care, we are good with it as Kristina noted - but let me know if you have further concerns.

I am also attaching our final fact sheet. If all are good, we should get her this draft op-ed together with the fact sheet. Let me know if you have more questions or concerns.

Thanks,
Ann

DRAFT substance abuse op-ed

WC: 822 words

I was on my first trip to New Hampshire this spring, in a Keene bakery, when a retired doctor spoke up. I had just announced I was running for president, and I had traveled to Iowa and New Hampshire to hear directly from voters about their concerns, their hopes, and their vision for the future. He said his biggest worry was the rising tide of heroin addiction in the state, the result of a wave of prescription drug abuse. He said hospitals were seeing more babies born addicted, that police officers were responding to more overdoses, that families were being torn apart.

To be candid, I didn't expect what came next. In several states, this issue crept up again and again – from so many people, from all walks of life, in small towns and big cities.

In Iowa, from Davenport to Council Bluffs, people spoke to me about meth and prescription drugs, and scores of lives upended. In South Carolina, a lawyer spoke movingly about the holes in the community left by generations of black men who ended up imprisoned for non-violent drug offenses rather than getting the treatment they needed.

These stories shine light on some harrowing statistics. Nearly 23 million Americans suffer from addiction, but in 2014, only 2.5 million were able to receive treatment at a specialized facility. Fifty-two million Americans over the age of 12 have abused prescription drugs, including one in four teenagers. In 2014, more Americans died from overdoses than car crashes.

Enough is enough. It's time we recognize as a nation that we have a quiet epidemic on our hands. Plain and simple, drug addiction is a disease, not a moral failing—and we must treat it as such.

It's time we recognize as a nation that there are gaps in our health care system that allow too many sufferers to go without care—and invest substantially more in prevention and treatment.

It's time we recognize as a nation that our state and federal prisons, where 65 percent of inmates meet the medical criteria for substance use disorders, are no substitute for drug treatment—and reform our criminal justice system.

That's why I'm releasing a comprehensive strategy [\[LINK\]](#) to confront the drug addiction crisis head-on. My plan sets four goals: first, ensuring every American family has access to affordable and effective treatments; second, ensuring that we work with pediatricians to be sure that every child and teenager is educated about and screened for substance use disorders as part of their annual doctor's visit, just as we do for hearing, eyesight, developmental delays and so much more; third, ensuring all first responders have access to naloxone, which stops overdoses from becoming fatal; and fourth, requiring that all health-care providers receive training in recognizing substance use disorders and consult a prescription drug monitoring program before providing opiates.

Achieving these goals won't be easy. It's going to take real commitment from all corners—law enforcement, doctors, insurance companies, schools, and governments. That's why my plan starts by increasing funding for the Substance Abuse Prevention and Treatment Block Grant by 25 percent, so states and localities have more resources to work with, and changing rules that arbitrarily limit how many patients can be treated with medication assisted treatment, a proven intervention for opiate addiction. I will also direct the federal government to re-evaluate Medicare and Medicaid payment practices, to remove obstacles to reimbursement for patients seeking help and promote greater coordination of care. And I will make sure that our mental health parity laws are fully enforced so that insurance practices are not a barrier to substance abuse treatment.

But we can't stop there. As President, I will do everything I can to partner with states and communities across America to meet the four goals—treatment, prevention, overdose intervention, and improved prescriber practices. We'll ask states to design ambitious plans for tackling these four goals using the programs that make most sense for their citizens' needs and challenges. In return for strong plans to address the substance abuse crisis, the federal government will draw on a new $5 billion fund to help states meet their goals.

Every town I've visited so far in this campaign has stories of families upended by drug addiction. But across the country, I've also heard about second chances. The young mother who overcame addictions to alcohol and heroin so her son would never see her with a drink or a drug in her hand. The man who served 11 years in prison who is now serving others through a prison ministry.

They all say the same thing: no matter how much time has passed, no matter how different their lives are today, they're all still in recovery. It's a process—one that began when a family member, a friend, a doctor, a police officer extended a hand to help. As one New Hampshire woman said, "We're not bad people trying to get good, we're sick people who deserve to get well."

There are 23 million Americans suffering from addiction. There are untold millions more. No one is untouched – we all have family and friends who are affected. We can't afford to stay on the sidelines any longer—because when families are strong, America is strong. Through improved treatment, prevention, and training, we can end this quiet epidemic once and for all.

On the screening point, will let policy get into details, but it's the major pillar of the 'prevention' goal. Would folks be more comfortable if it said something like [CAPS=ADDITION] "ensuring every child and teenager is annually screened for substance use DISORDERS, JUST AS THEY ARE ALREADY SCREENED FOR OTHER ILLNESSES"?

schools and doctors regularly screen for all sorts of diseases, and substance abuse screening /= random drug testing.

On the "specialized facilities," the stat comes from the NIH's National Institute on Drug Abuse and includes all facilities licensed or certified by state substance abuse agencies to provide treatment. So think it's easy to answer Politifact when they try to get cute.

And on the statistic about 2.5 million people receiving treatment at a "specialized facility," can someone explain what that means? Just want to make sure we're not trying to be too cute, that there aren't perfectly viable treatment alternatives that lie outside of the term. Our friends from PolitiFact as always in the back of my mind.

John --

Kirsten said it best: "When the radical, right-wing fringe launches its attacks against Democrats, there's only one good way to respond -- FIGHT BACK."

This week, Republicans blocked the DISCLOSE Act in the Senate. This was one of our best chances to rein in the unlimited power the Supreme Court gave to corporations and special interests in their Citizens United decision. Republicans know that progressives like Kirsten have a better plan and message, which is why they'll do anything to protect their money flowing in from mega-corporations. We need you to help Kirsten so she has the resources to stand up to them in November.

We're just three days from our critical goal of 500 donors before July 31, and we need your help before it's too late.

Dear Friend,

When the radical, right-wing fringe launches its attacks against Democrats, there's only one good way to respond - FIGHT BACK.

I've proven that I'll always fight for Democratic values. When health care reform was on the ropes, I was at the forefront of the fight for the public option. When BP tried to duck responsibility for the oil spill, I helped lead the effort to guarantee a thorough investigation to hold them accountable. I'm doing everything I can to repeal "Don't Ask, Don't Tell."

But taking on the usual right-wing bullies means they will surely come after me. I need help from 500 donors before July 31 to make sure I can fight back.

Click here to make a contribution today of \$250, \$500, or more to my campaign. Even a small contribution from you helps show the extreme right wing that we'll never back down.

The reason these national Republicans spend all their time attacking us is obvious. They don't have a real plan for getting Americans back to work and moving this country forward.

Their only response to any problem is to figure out what Democrats are for, and then rant and rave about repealing it. That's not leadership. That's just flat-out obstruction.

So instead of real ideas for creating jobs or finally doing something about climate change, we get the right-wing media running sideshow stories 24/7. Their only interest is making Democrats look bad and scaring us into backing down from the values we hold dear.

They don't scare me, and I'll never give up our core principles. I need your help before the end of the month to show them once and for all: we're sick of their scare tactics, and we're fighting back.

Click here to make a contribution of \$250, \$500, or more to my campaign. Even a small contribution from you helps show the extreme right wing that we'll never back down.

I know politics is a tough business. But the truth is that hearing the radical right say some nasty words about me is nothing compared to the struggles New Yorkers face every day trying to put food on the table and to give their kids a better life.

That's who I'm fighting for. I know I can count on you to stand with me every step of the way.

Sincerely,

Kirsten Gillibrand

The only way to guarantee that this doesn't get even worse in 2016 is by investing in voter turnout right now.

And we know you're with us on this. When we checked this morning, we noticed we are in range of hitting our goal of 10,000 Original Members ahead of our critical end of month deadline!

If you help us hit this goal, we'll have the resources needed to deploy a winning strategy and boost voter turnout in 2016.

The GOP strategy to keep Democrats from the polls is working.

Republicans across the country have pushed legislation to make it more difficult for voters to register and cast ballots. Their strategy has resulted in:

- Voter turnout reaching an historic low in 2014.
- Republicans claiming the largest majority in Congress in over 70 years.

How do we fight back?

If we hit this goal today, we'll be able to deploy a strategy combining state-of-the-art technology with face-to-face conversations to get more Democrats to the polls.

When Democrats have the tools to compete, and if every eligible Democrat is able to cast their ballot, we can win -- no matter how tight the race.

But we need your support right now if we're going to do it.

Yes, I agree with your point.

ThinkProgress started a culture vertical 4 yrs ago, and it was hugely successful as a feminist critique of culture. Our first writer was lured by the Washington Post. But it takes a lot of judgment to oversee this area. I will check in with Judd on quality control.

Subject: [big campaign] FW: Conservatives Terrified of Bringing Terrorists to Justice

Conservatives Terrified of Bringing Terrorists to Justice

Washington, D.C. - A comprehensive strategy and architecture to bring terrorists to justice should be a source of national pride - not fear-mongering. Whether it's inane assertions that terrorists will kidnap Mayor Bloomberg's daughter, or that Illinois will be ground zero for terrorist attacks and jihad recruitment, conservatives are simply unhinged when it comes to combating terror. But while they demonize our judicial system and lambast the ability of the men and women of our prison and law enforcement systems to keep our communities safe, they neglect the fact that trying terrorists in civilian courts-and following the rule of law-is one of our best strategies for combating violent extremism. Pursuing this takes critical recruitment tools away from the terrorists, brings us allies and partners around the world, and underscores the foundations of our democracy that separates America from its enemies. As 9/11 widow Kristen Breitweiser said : "To be clear, the only danger posed by prosecuting men like KSM in an open court in New York is the red alert it poses to the Republican Party's faltering reputation in fighting their 'war on terror.'"

It is clear that the task of developing a comprehensive strategy to detain and try terrorists is not easy -President Obama admitted as much when he acknowledged yesterday that his Administration would miss the January deadline it set to close the Guantanamo Bay military detention facility. But it is more important to get this policy right than to rush and make mistakes. In contrast to the previous Administration's ad hoc actions, the Obama administration is taking a careful and methodical approach to right these wrongs. This strategy will finally bring those who attacked us on 9/11 to justice, strengthen our global struggle against extremists and terrorists, and reinforce the laws and Constitution that are the foundation of our democracy.

While progressives support bringing terrorists to justice, extreme conservatives hyperventilate. Since the Justice Department's announcement that it will try the 9/11 conspirators in federal courts in New York, and the news that the Obama administration is considering shifting Guantanamo Bay detainees to a maximum security facility in Illinois, conservatives have unleashed a torrent of hyperbolic attacks. Just yesterday, Rep. John Shadegg (R - AZ) indulged in the worst kind of fear mongering, responding to New York Mayor Michael Bloomberg's support of the trials by saying "Well, Mayor, how are you going to feel when it's your daughter that's kidnapped at school by a terrorist? How are you going to feel when it's some clerk -- some innocent clerk of the court -- whose daughter or son is kidnapped? Or the jailer's little brother or little sister?" According to coverage in Politico, "Bloomberg spokesman Stu Loeser said he wouldn't 'dignify' Shadegg's remark with a comment." Shadegg's remarks were just the later in a pattern of vitriolic distortions, which distract from bringing terrorists to justice:

- Conservative Myth: Obama administration's plans for imprisoning terrorist suspects in the U.S. makes us less safe. Over the weekend, Rep. David Manzullo (R - IL) and Senate candidate Mark Steven Kirk wrote, with fear-mongering rhetoric, that "[a]s home to America's tallest building, we should not invite Al Qaeda to make Illinois its No. 1 target." NY Times, [11/16/09]
- Reality: The U.S. has a stellar record of safely keeping hardened terrorists behind bars. In 2007, 60 Minutes reported on the the Supermax federal prison in Florence, Colorado, which holds dozens of terrorists who were convicted in civilian court, including: Zacarias Moussaoui, the alleged "20th hijacker" in the September 11, 2001 attacks; Ramzi Yusef and Omar Abdel-Rahman, convicted for masterminding the first World Trade Center attack; and Richard Reid, the so-called shoe bomber. According to the former warden there, "Most prisoners spend up to 23 hours a day in their cells, every minute, every meal." 60 Minutes, [8/14/07]
- Conservative Myth: Trials will be a propaganda vehicle for Al-Qaeda. "The suspects are going to "make it a circus and use it as a platform to push their ideology." Rep. Peter Hoekstra (R - MI), Voice of America News, [11/15/09]
- Reality: America's best legal traditions will "put Jihad on trial." Writing in the New York Times today, Council on Foreign Relations counterterrorism expert Steven Simon writes: "Historically, the public exposure of state-sponsored mass murder or terrorism through a transparent judicial process has strengthened the forces of good and undercut the extremists. The Nuremberg trials were a classic case. And nothing more effectively alerted the world to the danger of genocide than Israel's prosecution in 1961 of Adolf Eichmann, the bureaucrat who engineered the Holocaust." Steven Simon, [11/18/09]

- Conservative Myth: Trying terrorists in federal courts gives them the advantage: Former New York Mayor Rudy Giuliani criticized the plan to try 9/11 conspirators, including Khalid Sheikh Mohammed, saying on CNN's State of the Union that "It gives an unnecessary advantage to the terrorists and why would you want to give an advantage to the terrorists, and it poses risks for New York." Rudy Giuliani, via the NY Times, [11/16/09]
- Reality: Federal courts are one of America's best tools for bringing terrorists to justice. A 2009 report by Human Rights First written by a team of former federal prosecutors found that "of the 214 defendants whose cases were resolved as of June 2, 2009, 195 were convicted either by verdict or by a guilty plea. This is a conviction rate of 91.121%." Human Rights First, [7/23/09]
- Conservative Myth: 9/11 terrorists tried in New York will be found not guilty. "The possibility that Khalid Sheikh Mohammed and his co-conspirators could be found 'not guilty' due to some legal technicality just blocks from Ground Zero should give every American pause." Rep. John Boehner (R - OH), Press Release, [11/13/09]
- Reality: New York City Courts have never acquitted anyone of terrorist charges. According to NYU's center on Law and Security, New York City courts have a zero acquittal rate for terrorism cases. NYU, [9/11/08]

Rep. John Shadegg (R-AZ), via Politico, [11/17/09]

Closing Guantanamo was never an easy task, especially due to the legal and international problems Bush left behind. Today the Washington Post reports that "President Obama directly acknowledged for the first time Wednesday that the prison facility at Guantanamo Bay will not close by the January deadline he set, but he said he hoped to still achieve that goal sometime next year... Obama came to office pledging to shut a detainee facility that had become a symbol for prisoner abuse at the hands of American officials." However, "[t]here was also a tangle of legal issues involving what to do with suspected terrorists who had been tortured in prison in a way that jeopardized the integrity of the evidence against them, or who for other reasons could not stand trial." As Ken Gude further explains in a recent report for the Center for American Progress, "The Bush administration created a prison camp specifically designed to exist outside the reach of the law. It did so because what it intended to do was transparently illegal: torture, indefinite detention, and show trials that made a mockery of justice."

When the Bush administration left office, its military tribunal system had managed to convict only three terrorists - none of whom have been senior level operatives. Meanwhile, civilian courts had achieved almost 200 terrorism convictions since 9/11/ Perpetrators of terrorist attacks against America could have been in federal court, facing justice, long ago. Washington Post, [11/18/09 . Ken Gude, CAP, 11/09 . Wall Street Journal, 7/24/08 . NY Times, 11/3/08 . The Constitution Project, 10/28/09]

Obama administration, progressives, and local leaders are actively working to bring terrorists to justice, using every military and law enforcement resource available.

Attorney General Eric Holder explained the administration's stance very clearly, saying "We are at war, and we will use every instrument of national power - civilian, military, law enforcement, intelligence, diplomatic, and others - to win. We need not cower in the face of this enemy. Our institutions are strong, our infrastructure is sturdy, our resolve is firm, and our people are ready." So far the administration has taken multiple concrete steps:

- Civilian trials for those who targeted civilians showcase the strength of our institutions. The New York Times reported that, "The Obama administration said Friday that it would prosecute Khalid Shaikh Mohammed, the self-described mastermind of the Sept. 11 attacks, in a Manhattan federal courtroom, a decision that ignited a sharp political debate but took a step toward resolving one of the most pressing terrorism detention issues." NY Times, [11/13/09]
- Secure U.S. facility identified to house detainees; surrounding town says, "might as well come here." ABC News reports that, "A prison complex 150 miles from Chicago has emerged as the leading contender to house detainees currently being held at Guantanamo Bay, senior administration officials tell ABC News. Officials from the Pentagon and the Federal Bureau of Prisons will soon visit Illinois' Thomson Correctional Center to inspect the maximum security prison, which was opened in 2001 but has never been fully utilized because of state budget issues." ABC News, [11/14/09 . Chicago Breaking News, 11/14/09 . Chicago Tribune, 11/14/09]
- Military trials for suspects who planned attacks against U.S. military overseas. The Washington Post reports that "[t]he administration directed toward military commissions suspects who are believed to have carried out or plotted terrorist acts overseas against military targets. Among the five are Abd al-Rahim al-Nashiri, accused of coordinating the deadly attack on the USS Cole in 2000." Washington Post, [11/14/09]

- An overhaul of Afghan detention facilities to prevent Guantanamo and Abu Ghraib scandals from recurring.

The Washington Post reports that "By the end of the month, the U.S. military plans to begin moving the first of its approximately 700 detainees at Bagram air field to a new $60 million holding complex in an attempt to provide better living conditions and separate committed fighters from those who are ready to re-enter Afghan society." Washington Post, [11/16/09]

Local leaders and citizens in the areas most affected by the decisions know that America's criminal justice system can handle it. The Associated Press reports that New York City Mayor Michael Bloomberg "said Friday, 'It is fitting that 9/11 suspects face justice near the World Trade Center site where so many New Yorkers were murdered.' And New York Police Commissioner Raymond W. Kelly said holding the trial in the city most devastated by the 2001 attack is appropriate, and he pronounced the Police Department prepared to meet any security challenge." Meanwhile, in Thomson, Illinois, "News that the federal government seems interested in transferring detainees from Guantanamo Bay, Cuba, to the Thomson Correctional Center was greeted warmly in this small, rural farm town along the Iowa border." Reports, Chicago Breaking News. And The Chicago Tribune quoted one calm local resident: "I don't want (enemy combatants) walking the street, so they have to go some place," said Harris, 64. 'Might as well come here.'" AP, [11/16/09 . Chicago Breaking News, 11/14/09 . Chicago Tribune, 11/14/09]

Subject: Meeting

Dear John,

I hope you are back safe and sound. I'm not sure if you are in DC or NYC or some other place right now.

I was wondering if you had some time at the end of this week or sometime next week to continue our conversation about the role of Business Forward and the campaign's outreach to the business community.

Jim and I think it would be most effective if the 3 of us could have a conversation and it would be great if you and Jim could be in the same place with me calling into the meeting.

Jim lives in DC and is happy to go where ever is most convenient for you and your schedule. He can meet you in NYC or DC and I can call in. Please keep in mind the 12 hour difference with Shanghai. I can do a call anytime other than 11:30pm to 7:30am Shanghai time.

Is there a best day and time that works for you?

Thanks, I'm looking forward to continuing our conversation.

Hope all is well.

Regards,

Robert

Subject: Los Angeles Docs to print for John

Hi Ladies! Could you indulge me in a printing endeavor?

All single sided, All sensitive docs

Doc 1 (LA Memo - 3 pgs): 8 1/2 x 11, Color

Doc 2 (LA Maps - 7 pgs): Legal Size, Color (if PDF doesn't work, let me know and I'll send you Word version)

Coming in the AM:

Doc 3 (OGE-278, pgs tbd, but under 20 I believe): 8 1/2 x 11, Black and White

Reiterating that these are very sensitive in nature, so if you do multiple prints, please destroy extra copies.

CCing John for his awareness. As you know, he'll be there this morning for another meeting with Herb, Heather, and Larry Kramer of the Hewlett Foundation from 9 - 11 am. I have a backup to print at the next appointment if you don't have legal paper, or something else goes wrong!

Thanks again for all your fantastic assistance, as always--
Eryn

Subject: Re: YOUR THOUGHTS ASAP: Colorado Organizing Event

Amanda,

I understand the good purpose for this event with the community.

I also think it is a mistake for HRC on her first visit to Colorado to fail to touch base with the Colorado elected officials in the General Assembly. The Colorado Representatives and Senators will be the most important leaders and organizers of the caucuses in their respective Districts with already existing networks and organizations we can merge into our HRC campaign. I worry a potential HRC rival could easily wrest some of them away from us if they feel ignored.

Also, please know that the significant number of Democrats in the House and Senate in Colorado today is the result of precision organization we have created over the last ten years. It wasn't that long ago when every single statewide official in Colorado was a Republican (in 1998 with the exception of the Attorney General) and both chambers were in solid Republican control. We have a tough and complicated state for a Democrat to win, and we need to win Colorado for Secretary Clinton.

Perhaps a venue might be just to have the electeds invited to meet her and shake hands when she lands at the airport. I know the schedule is crowded, but I think this touch is important.

All the best,

Ken

The proposal is an organizing meeting with some electeds. Our grassroots team has put a list together of the folks who are working in the various districts we need. As we discussed, the vision is everyday folks and the folks we need to start the work of organizing. We are using this as a training meeting as well as to make sure local/CO press know that we are meeting with community members and building what we need on the ground. As we talked about, we are not doing an electeds meeting because this will further harm the perception you were concerned about in our conversations. The vision is that the majority of folks will be invites from our grassroots team.

Jessica and Victoria are our key leads on this event. We will contact Mayor Webb separately but need our advance team to report back the numbers that are possible for them in this venue.

From there, we will put together the combo of invites we should have in the room.

Thank you for these names.

Can't do parking lot.

This will open up to big protesters and a lot more coordination and resources. Plus, it doesn't allow us to do the work we really need to do on the organizing front.

Thank you for drafting the list Ken.

Adding Tracey and Jessica who are doing organizing on the ground. And, Lorella who is our Latino Outreach Dir.

Invites: We would work this as we are in FL. Jessica, we will work with our grassroots team for the invite list. We will add the Senator's invites too.

And you were asked a couple weeks ago about a policy which holds employers responsible for covering Viagra but not for birth control, so I'm wondering now that you've had several weeks to get more information about that, what your position is."

JOHN MCCAIN: "That it's up to the person who purchases the insurance. If that person wants certain coverage of any kind then that person ought to be able to receive that. And so it's up to the person who purchases the insurance. That's under our plan."

Mark Udall for Senate in 2008.

Michael Bennet for Senate in 2010.

We've always said that elections have consequences. And LCV's early endorsement can make a huge difference in a competitive Senate race.

That's why I'm excited to announce that tomorrow we'll be issuing our first endorsement of the 2012 election cycle -- and we want you to be there with us.

This is the earliest in an election cycle that LCV has ever endorsed a congressional candidate. It's an indication of how important next year's election is, as well as how proud and excited we are to be announcing this particular endorsement.

But if we're going to elect more pro-environment leaders to the House and Senate, we'll need dedicated supporters like you joining us in this effort.

Dear ClimateWorks Board of Directors,

The next teleconference of the ClimateWorks Board of Directors will be held as scheduled on Monday, October 12, from 8:30-9:30am Pacific. The agenda and logistics for the teleconference are included below, as well as in the attached pdf packet of pre-read materials.

To begin the meeting we will review our 2014 Federal Tax Return. The draft that we have included for you to review will be discussed by the Audit Committee in their Thursday, October 8 committee meeting, and we will review their recommendations and suggested revisions (if any) verbally in the Board call before asking for your approval. We plan to send you the minutes from the Audit Committee meeting on Friday, October 9.

Next, we will discuss the reserve grant to New Venture Fund that you approved in the September 9 meeting, including recent developments in the Arctic and our current thinking on questions you posed in the meeting.

Finally, we will ask you to approve three contracts for Redstone Strategy Group, totaling $346,500, which will take us above $500,000 (the Board approval threshold) in fees and services to Redstone in 2015.

Best regards,

Subject: Re: DRAFTS: Remarks for Saturday smaller group here for more specific edits.

1) I would add a millennial reference to the graph below - something that acknowledges their lack of opportunity "we see young people who grow up in shadow of 9/11 and in wake of the great recession face a world where they see no opportunity."

"We're in this together because we look at our country and see so much that isn't working the way it should. We see grandparents forced to choose between paying rent and buying medicine because a prescription drug company jacks up prices 4,000 percent overnight. We see African-American families denied mortgages at nearly three times the rate of white families. We see small towns and rural communities hollowed out by lost jobs and lost hopes."

2) in an effort to further limit "I" and make more communal: But please know, you are heard, you are seen and I am never going to stop fighting for you.

Instead of: I hear you, I see you, and I'm never going to stop fighting for you.

3) Not sure we have a great pull-out sentence that fully captures the message for the press to use and us to point to. Below are candidates I see for such a message sentence, but think they could use some gussying up.

a) This is your campaign. It's a campaign to break down every barrier that holds you back. We're going to build ladders of opportunity in their place, so every American can go as far as your hard work can take you.

b) The truth is, we aren't a single-issue country. We need more fairness in our economy, but we also need more growth.

c) I've never believed in dividing America between "us" and "them." We're all in this together. And we all have to do our part. (MAYBE START THIS SENTENCE WITH SOMETHING ABOUT ALWAYS HAVING WANTED TO BREAK DOWN BARRIERS TO OPPORTUNITY - TO GET FULL CONCEPT IN).

D) It's going to take each one of us, working together, growing together... looking out for one another and lifting each other up. Because there's a basic truth about this country: America can only live up to its potential when each and every American has the chance to live up to our own potential too.

Just looked at the NV remarks before taking off for Vegas. Like it a lot. Few suggestions:

In the "need more fairness, need more growth" sentence would build to "need more JOBS" as last clause of the sentence.

In the section about everyone doing their part. Would tell millenials that we are going to need their contributions/talent/ingenuity/creativity instead of telling them they have to do their part. Think that will be received as a rebuke of them - like they have been loading around.

Taking off now - will look at Texas on the flight.

Really like This!

Attached are drafts for caucus day remarks in Vegas and the rally in Houston.

For Nevada, this draft further refines the breaking barriers message, with a new emphasis on more "we" and less "I." There is not much contrast here, although "single issue" is still in.

For Texas, there is an additional contrast section that folks should take a good look at. It's mostly "the math doesn't add up," with a little "and the middle class are going to get hurt," thrown in.

In both, we start and finish with hillaryclinton.com .

Dems Co-Opting GOP Message: "Hands Off Our Health Care"

The Huffington Post | Nico Pitney First Posted: 03-24-10 04:28 PM | Updated: 03-24-10 05:24 PM

"Hands off my health care!" has been a near constant refrain from Republican leaders and conservative activists in recent months.

Now that health care reform is the law of the land, however, Americans across the country are going to be hearing that message from Democrats.

The Democratic National Committee is launching a series of radio ads touting the benefits of their health care package and hammering Republicans who voted against it. But in a twist, the DNC is co-opting the message of conservatives, warning voters that their newly-minted consumer protections will be stripped away if they put the GOP back in power.

"Leading Republicans are vowing to repeal reform and put the insurance industry back in charge of your health care," a narrator says in the radio spots airing in districts of Republican members. "Call [your congressman] and tell [him], hands off our health care!"

Listen: http://www.huffingtonpost.com/2010/03/24/dems-co-opting-gop-messag_n_512136.html

It's evidence that Democrats think the health care debate has been turned on its head since President Obama signed the reform bill into law on Tuesday. They're counting on voters to recoil at the thought of losing the concrete, tangible benefits that health care reform provided.

A DNC official says the above spot features prominently in a seven-figure ad buy in 35 congressional districts, which also includes a spot set to run in Democratic districts thanking Members of Congress for supporting the bill.

Subject: Mike Coffman can't wait for the next crisis

! ProgressNow Colorado

Dear Friend,

Last week, "Tea Party" Republicans were defeated after shutting down the government for over two weeks and threatening the first-ever default on the nation's financial obligations, all to further their political agenda. The headlines today are full of stories of Republicans running scared, with many saying they will never again make the mistake of holding the nation hostage to alter the law of the land.

But not Congressman Mike Coffman of Colorado. Coffman went on the radio after the shutdown ended to celebrate--even going so far as to praise the fact that last week's agreement was "a very short term measure," giving Republicans "breathing space" to keep the fight that led to the crisis alive.

What is Coffman thinking? Tell him to back off right now.

! coffmannomoresutdown.jpg

Last week, Coffman praised the tactic of threatening a default on the nation's debts on KOA radio. [1] "In the last debt ceiling negotiation, we got conditions that in fact really made a difference in terms of bringing down spending," Coffman said, referring to the painful sequester cuts from 2011 that have reduced funding for education, defense, children's health, victims' rights, and job programs. While most of the nation wants the obstruction and uncertainty to end, Mike Coffman is actually looking forward to the next Republican-engineered fiscal crisis.

That's the wrong choice. If you haven't already, sign our pledge telling members of Congress to swear off the tactics of shutdown and default for good. We'll make sure Coffman sees it. Enough is enough.

Thank you,

Alan Franklin

INTEGRITY FOR A CHANGE

John --

Earlier today, ABC News in Philadelphia hosted a panel of political experts on Inside Story to discuss Josh Shapiro and this campaign to bring integrity for a change.

The panel featured Democrats and Republicans, and they each agreed that Josh Shapiro is poised to win the race for Attorney General because he has a proven record of reform and results.

It's a video segment you've got to see and share with your friends -- check it out:

It's been less than a week since Josh Shapiro got in the race for Attorney General, and he's counting on supporters like you to help keep the momentum going.

Hey John,

I know you're busy, but if you're looking for a quick, 5-minute respite from the campaign, you could call me on a totally different subject.

I'm working on a piece on the relationship between tim cook and obama over the last few years. the visitor logs show you at one point met with Cook in the navy mess downstairs at the WW. i assume you had a chance to witness how they were together.

not looking for quotes, which i know would be tough in your given position. but hoping that you might be able to just give a sense of how that relationship seemed to you, on deep background.

Subject: [big campaign] New Huff Post from Creamer-Fire Tragedy Symbolizes Republican Vision of Governme

Obion County Fire Tragedy Symbolizes Tea-Party-Republican Vision of Government

This week, MSNBC's Keith Olbermann reported the story of the Cranick family's house fire. When the family's Obion County, Tennessee house caught fire on the night of October 5th, the fire department from the nearby town failed to respond since the Cranick's had forgotten to pay a $75 fee. Firefighters finally responded to a call by Cranick's neighbor, who had paid his fee. They sprayed the property line to protect the home of the neighbor and watched at the Cranick's home burned to the ground.

The firefighters had been ordered not to intervene to save the Cranick's house – even though they were already at the scene – because, apparently, it would have encouraged others not to pay the $75.

The Obion County fire incident is symbolic of the moral and economic bankruptcy of the Tea-Party-Republican vision of government and the economy. And it poses the stark choice facing American voters in the Mid-Term elections.

The Tea-Party-Republicans – including the Republican Congressional leadership – talk incessantly about how government services should be slashed. They believe that society should maximize the extent to which each individual is responsible to fend for themselves. They claim that is more “efficient”. The Obion County fire illustrates clearly why that assertion is simply wrong.

Competitive markets are extremely efficient at encouraging innovation, increasing productivity and distributing goods and services in many arenas. But there are other arenas where history and experience have demonstrated that it is both more efficient and more humane to provide goods and services through government – which, as Congressman Barney Frank likes to say, is the name we give to the things we have chosen to do together.

The core difference in values between the right wing and progressives is whether we create a society where we're all in this together, or all in this alone.

Mainstream Americans understand that there are a number of areas where it makes much more economic and moral sense to guarantee goods and services to everyone in the society and ask our citizens to finance them by paying their fair share of taxes rather than paying for them “ala carte”.

We came to the conclusion decades ago that government should provide every child with an education, and our public schools have provided the foundation of American economic prosperity.

We use government to provide infrastructure necessary to support our economy – roads, bridges, harbors, airports, sewer and water systems, and street lights.

We provide common parks and recreation facilities that are open to public use.

Government provides for our common defense and our domestic security. We don't require each person to hire a private army or security firm to defend his or her home. That would be stupid, wasteful and lead to anarchy.

Government is particularly efficient when it comes to providing social insurance – like Social Security and Medicare. The overhead for these programs is tiny compared with other insurance programs (including private health insurance plans) run by the private sector. They have covered everyone reliably and effectively for generations. That's why they have virtually unanimous public support.

At long last, with the health care reform bill, America joined the company of every other industrial nation, in understanding that it is more efficient and more humane for government to assure that everyone in society has access to health care. Of course one of the signals that prompted this change was the sheer fact that private market health insurance caused our health care cost to skyrocket to 50% more per person than any other nation – with worse outcomes. Almost certainly, the Affordable Care Act is just the first step in reform, since a public option will certainly be needed to ultimately bring our spending in line with other nations. But it was a critical first step.

Of course, most everywhere in America, we provide fire protection through the government. We all pay – through our taxes – to assure that if the time ever comes when we need to call 911 because of a fire, no one will have to check to see if we have paid a fee, a clerical error on payment records will not cost us our homes, and firefighters will not stand by and watch our homes and lives go up in smoke. And of course we also support common protection because fire doesn't necessarily stop at the property line – just ask Ms O'Leary of the legendary Chicago Fire.

The Obion county story demonstrates what happens when we forget that government – financed by common taxes – is the most efficient provider of so many goods and services.

It makes no economic sense to allow what is likely a multi-hundred thousand dollar home to be consumed by flames because a failure to pay a $75 fee. Now, either the insurance company or the Cranick's will have to build a brand new home in its place. Their former home was wasted because of the absurdity of the system that had been set up to protect it.

That same absurdity is implicit in so many of the other Republican economic positions. Its ultimate expression is the Republican desire to repeal health care reform and return us to an out of control system run by private health insurance companies that has cost us 50% more than any other country. That system is wasting trillions of dollars that come out of the pockets of middle class Americans – just to allow private insurance companies and their top executives to make obscene amounts of money.

And with fire protection and health care, the moral consequences are also clear. Bad enough that someone's home was allowed to be destroyed because of the failure to pay a $75 fee. Would the firefighters have been allowed to intervene if the family pets were inside the house – what about a child?

The Republicans want to return us to a health care system that allowed for-profit health insurance companies to brazenly make those same choices everyday. They made life and death decisions that determined whether people were treated or not – and often whether they lived or not – using their own bottom line as their only real guide. They wouldn't cover you because you have a "pre-existing condition". They would cut you off when you got sick. They hired armies of bureaucrats who do nothing but deny claims. Some of the worst of these abuses are now history because of health insurance reform. If the Republicans have their way, those new protections will be repealed.

But let's be clear. The people behind the "drown government in the bath tub" politics are not the kind of folks who run around in three corner hats and George Washington wigs. The Tea Party rank and file is not the principal engine of anti-government fervor. The money for the ads and the buses and the radio shows are provided by big corporations – by people like Rupert Murdoch of Fox and David and Charles Koch.

The Koch brothers own virtually all of Koch Industries, a conglomerate whose annual revenues exceed a hundred billion dollars and is the second largest privately owed company in the country.

The Koch's combined fortune of thirty five billion dollars is exceeded only by those of Bill Gates and Warren Buffett.

They may be libertarian true believers. But the Kochs would also benefit mightily by making government small and toothless. They would benefit more than most anyone from lowering tax rates for the wealthy. They have a massive stake in lowering the standards for environmental regulation since their oil companies and other holdings have made them one of the top ten air polluters in the United States.

The same goes for the many funders of these ultra-right causes. The money comes from very wealthy families and massive corporations. For them the right wing ideology is nothing more than a vindication for their own wealth – and a justification for their own economic self interest. And the fact is that their economic self interests conflict with those of the vast majority of their fellow citizens.

Progressives cannot be cowed by the anti-government propaganda that spews forth from these giant economic interests even when it's dressed up in the clothing of the small number of ordinary Americans who have become Tea Party activists.

In fact the Cranicks of Obion County Tennessee are truly emblematic of the victims of the Koch brother's vision of America. The Cranicks are victims, as are the eight million Americans who lost their jobs because of the greed and recklessness of the big Wall Street banks -- because of the traders and CEO's that ride around in corporate jets and demand that smaller and smaller quantities of their billions be taxed to pay for our common welfare.

The choice we face on November 2nd is between the interests of the Cranicks and the interests of the Kochs.

Hopefully the fire in Obion County Tennessee will provide the light necessary to illuminate the true consequences of the Tea Party Republican agenda. And it may help provide the spark that is needed to help mobilize millions of Americans to vote November 2nd and reject that agenda at the polls.

Romney and Bain Capital

template_bas

A timeline of the GOP presidential hopeful's path to wealth.

December 17, 2007

Romney and Bain Capital

- 1978: Mitt Romney joins Bain & Co., a Boston-based management consulting group founded by William W. Bain Jr.
- 1984: Romney tapped by the company founder to lead a spin-off called Bain Capital, a venture capital and private equity group.
- October 1997: Bain Capital launches the Sankaty group of U.S.-based debt hedge funds. To assist U.S. tax-exempt and foreign investors, Sankaty organizes a subsidiary in Bermuda called Sankaty High Yield Asset Investors Ltd.
- February 1999: Romney takes a leave of absence from Bain Capital. Bain Capital at midyear has $5.5 billion in assets under management, including $2 billion in the Sankaty funds, according to an independent evaluation.
- February 2001: Romney is listed in SEC documents as president and sole shareholder of the Sankaty company in Bermuda.
- August 2001: Romney announces plans to retire from Bain Capital to run for governor of Massachusetts. Before he steps down, he invests in BCIP Associates III Cayman, a private equity fund organized in the Cayman Islands.
- January 2003: He puts his financial holdings into a blind trust.

2003-2007: Romney's trustee continues to invest in the Cayman fund.

2006: The Cayman fund pays Romney more than $1 million in interest, dividends and capital gains. He retains a profit share in Bain Capital until 2009, as well as investments in more than 30 Bain funds.

2007: Bain Capital manages $60 billion in assets, including $23 billion in Sankaty funds.

Subject: An Open Letter to President Elect Obama about Homecare, Jobs, & a Reason to Live

November 6, 2008

Dear President-Elect Obama,

Anyone who knows me knows how I wept with tears of joy when I heard you give the keynote speak at the Democratic convention. I said "This man is the balm for our wounds." And I appreciate how you always mention people at disabilities in all your speeches. I've been waiting to hear that for a long time. I've had an Obama 2008 sticker plastered to the back of my wheelchair for almost 2 years now. I've met the nicest people that way, but this is not the reason I'm writing to you.

I need to tell you about how we could save billions in healthcare dollars while creating millions of jobs for workers who might otherwise be dependent on Public Assistance. I helped to found and have served for 11 years as a member, and most recently as the vice chair, of the Los Angeles County's Personal Assistance Services Council, (PASC) the largest public authority in the United States. Our PASC oversees the In-Home Supportive Services program in Los Angeles County serving 168,000 seniors and persons with disabilities partnered with the SIEU's home care workers Union to give seniors and people with disabilities dignity and empowerment in their own homes at less than a third of the cost of warehousing us in nursing homes. Our public authority employs 139,000 home care workers. In our program, here in California, which could serve as a model for the nation, we save very substantial sums. The cost of the average person receiving assistance on the IHSS program in California is approximately $12,400 while the annual cost of maintaining such a person in a skilled nursing facility is over $57,000.

Nationally, this program could employ millions of workers. You've spoken many times of the need for jobs, as well as the need for service. I can think of little that could be this effective to promote both these causes. And while promoting service and empowerment, we could at the same time eliminate a great evil. By that I'm referring to the waste of human talent and cutting short the lives of millions of people inappropriately placed in nursing homes.

Nursing home abuse and neglect ranges from unconscionable to horrific. Older people are left to get bedsores and lie in their own excrement, while nursing homes cut costs, and the patient ratios are terrible. When I visited with 4 women in a nursing home for a year, I'll never forget waiting with one woman crying, who was holding her bladder for close to two hours until one of the nurses aides, who was responsible for eight other patients came in to put her on the toilet. Young people in nursing homes are robbed of the vital life they could have and are not even made aware of their options. Instead, some states are now offering them assisted suicide. The prejudice against and marginalization of people with disabilities is so pervasive that we are viewed as people whose lives are not worth living.

For young people and seniors who don't require skilled nursing, being warehoused in an institution is to live a life akin to a political prisoner -- with no real civil rights or rights to even move about the community. I broke my neck at age 20, and had I been sent to a nursing home, I swear to G-d that I would have been dead decades ago, from cross-contamination because of my indwelling catheter, but more importantly, I would have withered away from a life without hope or purpose. My mother and I had a suicide pact. Tomorrow I will be 57 years old, and having had a life of purpose, energy, adventure, service, marriage and even visiting England and France, I shudder to think that I could have made that decision. I didn't make that decision because the Rehabilitation Institute of Chicago expected too much of me, the University of Illinois gave me a wheelchair accessible campus to return to, and most importantly in home care gave me the passport I needed to return home to an independent life in the community. Had I not had these gifts, I might have asked for that lethal injection. The wrong public policy kills -- not only physically, but it kills people's spirits, and the cherry on top is that it cost taxpayers over three times the money to do it.

With homecare I was able to return to college to earn a master's degree, become a news and public affairs producer for public television and later become a comedian and always an activist for people with disabilities. And now, thanks in large part to Senator Kennedy, Jim Jeffords, and my very dear friend, John Podesta, who is heading up your transition team, I work as a therapist at the Hollywood Sunset Free Clinic because of the Work Incentives Improvement Act. But I had the best of everything.

My fate was so much different than the young people who have my same injury today. Now HMOs send newly injured young people to nursing homes -- nursing homes that hire a physical therapist to come in once a month and then euphemistically refer to themselves as "rehabilitation centers." As someone who received her rehabilitation from the Rehabilitation Institute of Chicago and later worked with newly injured people at the Rancho Los Amigos National Rehabilitation Center, I know what real rehabilitation is.

When my mother suffered from a fall last year, and she could not return to her assisted living for several days, the acute care hospital told me they were transferring her to a "rehabilitation center." They promised me that in the three days my mother would stay there, they would give her physical therapy twice a day, and I wanted that because she was falling and we didn't know why. When I arrived the next day to this "rehabilitation center" with no telephone for me to reach my mother, there was no physical therapist there. Instead, my mother had been lying in bed for 10 hours, been drugged, put in diapers, and looked like she was not even alive -- while a large slice of French bread pizza was the only item on her dinner plate. My mother takes insulin for diabetes. When I protested that a diabetic should not be given only a large piece of French bread pizza filled with starch, they said "Our diabetic care is calorie controlled," another euphemism for not giving a damn about what they feed people with medical conditions as long as it's cheap. When I asked why she hadn't been gotten out of bed for 10 hours, they said "She didn't want to," another euphemism for not feeling energetic because you are being dosed with Vicodin four times a day at 85 years old. My mother was lucky. She had me to advocate for her and to take her back to the decency of her assisted living, but other people are not so fortunate. People are dying from these euphemisms.

Whenever I visit my doctor I try to always go up to the rehab floor to visit with the newly injured patients. In the last two years, you could shoot cannon through these real rehabilitation centers. Where I used to visit 40 patients, there are now two, as HMOs send young people to nursing homes. It is a quiet genocide that robs them of their spirit and their futures. It kills their body through cross-contamination and neglect, but worst of all, the eclipse of hope sends them to an early death.

I have always been in the right place at the right time, but it shouldn't be a crapshoot, whether you live or die in hope or despair. It isn't fair that paraplegics living in one state should die an early death in a nursing home because they don't have homecare or because when they were able-bodied, they didn't have the medical sophistication to know what their HMO would do and how to keep themselves out of nursing homes when trauma strikes. People don't know what they can have. They die of despair, without adequate services, and the time is long overdue to rectify this evil. Making in-home supportive services a national choice would not only give the gift of dignity and efficacy of millions of seniors and people with disabilities, but it would employ millions of home care workers as well.

When I visited those women in the nursing home, there was one worker for eight women. Three home care workers are employed taking care of me. That means that people who might otherwise be on public assistance could have jobs, and we have the opportunity to go out into the world and make a difference. President Obama, you talk about the need to look for wasteful programs and replace them with good ones. For people inappropriately placed in nursing homes, this is one the finest changes you could possibly make.

One of the greatest days of my life when I sat by my friend John Podesta's side on a freezing day in Washington, in front of the Franklin Roosevelt monument (the real one where he was sitting down in a wheelchair) after Senator Kennedy's and Jim Jeffords' bipartisan bill, the "Work Incentives Improvement Act" was signed as the last piece of legislation the 20th century. That "Ticket to Work" was a start to remove the barriers that forced millions of people with disabilities into idleness with the threat of losing their health care and in-home supportive services if they tried to work. We need to go further, because many of us are still on a very short leash and cannot escape poverty by only being permitted to earn $900 a month, or save because we cannot have more than $2,000 in our bank accounts. But it was a grand beginning.

There are still many rivers to cross for people with disabilities, but I firmly believe that the time is now to release seniors and people with disabilities who don't belong in skilled nursing facilities, from imprisonment and despair, and back to their rightful place in the American life with its promise of liberty and pursuit of happiness. Perhaps what we crave even more is the opportunity to contribute our gifts to this world and put meaning in to our lives. We need to make it possible for every young person in every state to have the gift of in-home supportive services. It saves money, it saves lives, it creates jobs, and it unleashes vast stores of human enterprise among seniors and people with disabilities who still have work to do and people to love. Some may say this is too ambitious, but I believe that you, President-elect Obama will understand best of all, that this is a bold request born out of the "audacity of hope."

This is respectfully submitted on behalf of all of us who have been "wheeling on air" for the last two days!

Most Sincerely!

Nancy Becker Kennedy

Kuttner has previously been a columnist for Business Week as well as the Chief Investigator of the US Senate Banking Committee. In the interview he talks about the expansion of jobs to fix the infrastructure and emphasizes expansion of service job like those of caregivers as a strategy to create jobs as FDR did to infuse the economy to end the Great Depression. Subject: Where to cut and not cut FYI--As things have been tight here are some of my thoughts on how to save money. Your feedback appreciated. I just want to flag the politically sensitive stuff.

-Atlas--very little value added on the media side that can't be obtained from a smart media strategist. Not worth $45K a month. (John, need your guidance on the politics of this.) They never pitched us on it. They never really asked us what they could do for us. I unceremoniously was sent a contract with a $450,000 price tag on it.

-Polling--cut to small, short tracking polls instead of big statewide surveys. Use cross-battleground polls to refine messaging. This will annoy in-state people. Cost savings are small. Running ads without polling is a bad idea.

-Ad creation--more cookie-cutter ads that run across multiple states. Less state-specific media. This will annoy in-state people.

-Don't cut earned media operation. This is more bang for the buck than paid media.

-Change monthly retainers for media buyers. We'd move Will to a commission. It is too pricey to retain him and not use him (we have not retained him yet). There aren't savings on a commission versus a flat fee until we're spending more than $4 million a month on media. (FWIW, we haven't been retaining him. We paid him some to help with detailed state plans.)

-Media Firms--choose two firms and stick with them. Buy them on a monthly retainer. We'll have some folks fighting with us.

In Light of Ryan Pick, SuperPAC Calls on Rep. Duffy to Defend Both His Vote Against Medicare and Ties to the Insurance Lobby

Washington, D.C.— Today, Friends of Democracy, a SuperPAC working to fight political corruption and advance citizen-led elections, is calling on Rep. Sean Duffy to defend his support of new vice presidential pick Paul Ryan's budget. Rep. Duffy voted for the Ryan budget in 2011, including the plan's proposal to end Medicare, while taking in at least $133,312 in campaign contributions from the insurance industry and $20,000 from Congressman Paul Ryan's leadership PAC.

"Paul Ryan and the insurance industry have placed their bets on Sean Duffy and he has voted their way," said David Donnelly, Co-Director of Friends of Democracy. "He has taken more than $150,000 combined between Paul Ryan and the insurance industry and voted for policies that are a windfall for them at the expense of everyday voters."

"Rep. Duffy's race is ground zero in the fight for Medicare because he is part of a growing epidemic of members of Congress raking in millions from the insurance lobby while voting to end Medicare. With political corruption second on list of voter's concern, this is a concern Sean Duffy needs to answer to," said Ilyse Hogue, Co-Director of Friends of Democracy.

Bloomberg News reported that the Ryan budget would benefit private insurers, a large source of campaign cash for members of Congress. Rep. Duffy has received $133,312 in campaign contributions from HMOs and insurance industry donors, according to an analysis of data coded by the nonpartisan Center for Responsive Politics. He has also received $20,000 from Prosperity PAC, Congressman Ryan's leadership PAC.

Duffy's vote for the Ryan budget indicates he would end Medicare as we know it by turning it into a system of vouchers to help seniors buy private insurance coverage. In addition to not providing guarantees for coverage, this system would be a boon to the insurance industry.

Friends of Democracy is currently advertising on television and the web throughout the congressional district with advertising that criticizes Rep. Duffy for putting the interests of Wall Street donors ahead of middle class families in the district. The television ad can be seen at <http://www.friendsofdemocracypac.org/duffy> .
